ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of Examiner.

Mr. Burnham wrote to high officials in New York and Philadelphia and asked for a reply to the question sent Chicago, but the officials of the two former cities stated that they were not allowed to express their opinions—not, however, as in the case of Chicago—and telling Mr. Burnham who was the proper authority to write to. Mr. Burnham says that the letters to New York and Philadelphia in his opinion clearly indicated what Chicago has so boldly and unhesitatingly stated in the following letter:

"October 18, 1924.

"J. H. Burnham,
"188 Smith Street East,
"Peterborough, Canada.

"My Dear Sir,—Answering your letter of October 15 as to whether or not bootlegging has increased or decreased in Chicago since prohibition.

"There was no bootlegging in Chicago before prohibition. There is a very great amount now. This can not be figured as increase or decrease, however, because it is a new phase of criminal activity since the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"HENRY BARRETT CHAMBERLIN, Operating Director, Chicago Crime Commission, organized by the Chicago Association of Commerce, 21 North La Salle street."

BIBLE SOCIETY HELD MEETING

The Bible in Africa and Its Results—News of Marmora.

PERSONALS

MARMORA, Oct. 21.—The annual meeting of the Marmora branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society was held in the Methodist Church on Thursday evening. The chair was occupied by Mr. W. J. Cottrell. After the singing of the hymn, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," and prayer, the business portion of the meeting was proceeded with. The officers of the past year received re-election. These were: Mr. G. B. Airhart, President; Mr. F. S. Pearce, Secretary, and Mrs. H. M. Jones, Treasurer. The deputation from the society was the Rev. S. G. Pinnock, who labored in the mission fields of Nigeria for 35 years. He chose for his subject, "The Bible in Africa." After describing the various assets of that Continent, he asserted that the African himself was the greatest asset, for the other assets were so difficult to obtain without his instrumentality. In a most illuminating way, the Rev. Pinnock brought out the various features of Nigerian character. With a population of twenty million, he remarked that there were 226 different languages spoken. He stressed the power of the word of God as translated into the language of the heathen. The word of God has power in itself to do its work. He quoted the late Dr. Parker as having said, "I would as soon defend the Bible as a lion let loose." It was the British and Foreign Bible Society which let the Bible loose, and the results needed no defence. The latter portion of his very earnest address described some of the fruits of his long labors. A collection for the support of the society's work was taken. The collectors for the ensuing year are to be chosen by the Executive Committee. It was most unfortunate that other events of the evening should mitigate against the attendance.

The members of the Willing Workers Class and Busy Bees Class of the Methodist Sunday School met at the home of Miss Bessie Sweet for a social evening on Monday evening last. The evening was planned as a farewell to Miss Myrtle Kennedy, who leaves this week to train as a nurse in the Walkerton Hospital. Miss Kennedy is a member of the Willing Workers' Class and teacher of the Busy Bees.

The Epworth League Convention of the Madoc District was held at Cooper's appointment, on the Eldorado circuit on Wednesday afternoon and evening.

Mr. Sager of Tweed President, was in the chair. After greetings was extended from Cooper League Rev. A. H. Foster of Madoc spoke on Epworth League programmes. He gave the origin of Epworth Leagues in 1889 first, in United States then in Canada.

The colors of the League are white and red. Red as a symbol of the blood of Christ, white for purity

The emblem of the League is the Maltese cross, with the words: "For Christ and church."

Mr. Foster then took the four departments.

In the Christian Endeavor Department he urged that the spirit of devotion and consecration be developed and many suggestions were given.

Also ideas for contests and social evenings.

Mr. Foster gave a list of books which would be helpful in League work.

A helpful discussion followed.

The Cooper choir gave a musical selection followed by an address followed by an address by Rev. J. M. Whyte of Eldorado on the missionary centenary and the League. As this is the 100th Anniversary of Methodism, Mr. Whyte went back to the time of Wesley and gave a little outline of his conversion and the growth of the work.

He spoke of the Centenary celebration in Toronto in November, and urged a representation from the district.

Rev. E. M. Cook, Ivanhoe, secretary, gave the years' report. There there was the roll call of circuits represented.

Rev. L. S. Wight of Tweed, spoke on Summer Schools, especially of the Summer School held last July in Bobcaygeon. This was a departure from previous years where the Summer School was held in Albert College.

Those attending slept in tents or (if preferred) rooms in private homes. Meals were served in the Agricultural Hall and the different study classes were led by some of our strongest leaders.

Also financially it was a splendid success.

In the Christian Endeavor Department, he urged that the spirit of devotion and consecration be developed and many suggestions were given.

Also ideas for contests and social evenings.

Mr. Foster gave a list of books which would be helpful in League work.

A helpful discussion followed.

Rev. D. R. Clare of Marmora, spoke on Winter Schools, which were started for the young people who couldn't attend Summer Schools on account of their occupations. He gave an outline of the work and the advantages to those attending.

Rev. W. J. H. Smyth of Wellington spoke on Worship. He said punctuality and silence were two incentives to the spirit of worship in a league meeting.

Also that the true spirit of worship leds to service.

Rev. F. E. Malott of Belleville, took the place of the Conference Secretary, Rev. A. McLaughlin of Keene. He outlined a plan for inter-district debates which the Conference Executive was trying to get going.

He spoke on the Plebiscite and the need of every League to rally behind it.

Also of the Council of Young People of the Uniting Churches to draft a constitution of Young People's work after Union.

The ladies of Cooper church provided a bounteous repast in the Orange Hall at the supper hour.

In the evening the new officers were elected.

Pres. Mr. J. O. Sager, Tweed.

Sec.-Treas., Rev. E. M. Cook, Ivanhoe.

1st Vice-Pres. Mrs. (Rev.) Foster, Madoc.

2nd Vice-Pres., Dr. Helliwell, Springbrook.

3rd. Vice-Pres., Rev. Poulter, Thomasburg.

4th. Vice-Pres., Rev. D. R. Clare, Marmora.

5th, Vice-Pres., Miss Kerr, Madoc.

The two addresses of the evening were given by Rev. E. B. Sexsmith and Rev. F. E. Malott.

COMBINATION POPULAR

The popular combination of dress and matching coat is responsible for some of the most carefully thought out costumes. Here is a gown of black wool trimmed with heavy stitching in white silk, coupled with a coat of the same material that is lined with heavy white crepe de chine trimmed with stitching of heavy black silk. Nearly all coat linings this season are trimmed in some unique way.

prayer. The baptismal service was held just previous to the sermon and two candidates were made members of the church.

Rev. T. L. White preached a splendid sermon taking his text from 1. Corinthians, verses 1-4.

Once at an auction sale of very valuable pictures the auctioneer stood behind a picture calling the attention of the crowd to its fine points. The auctioneer was heard, but he himself was out of sight. This is something like St. John the Baptist, who effacing himself, called attention to Jesus Christ who was to come after him. St. John was but the herald even as the preachers of the present day are. The speaker referred to the many blessings the Lord had showered upon the church during the four years which constituted his pastorate and like St. Paul he desired to thank God for every remembrance. The faith and loyalty of the people not only to their minister and church, but to the Lord Himself were always a comfort as an evidence of personal love and unmarred fellowship throughout the years.

The attendance at the Sunday school services and the weekly prayer service was always a source of inspiration. No church can live or be strong in the Lord in the power of its own might or if they neglect the importance of meeting together in prayer. Private prayer is valuable but there is greater strength in the meeting together as had been done to pray not only for the work of the church but of all the other churches in the village and for all the world itself. Mr. White also gave a word of appreciation for the courtesy and friendship of the pastors and members of other churches in the community.

There are three things to remember about the gospel. What it is, what it does and what we are to do with it. One thing filled St. Paul's heart, namely, the cross of Jesus Christ crucified, buried and risen again and the expectation of his second coming. This was his "good news"—there was no room for speculation, and he constantly poured these facts into the ears of his hearers. All the world at that time knew of His crucifixion and nearly everyone of His resurrection, as it was witnessed by many and was proved over and over in the hearts and minds of redeemed people. The gospel without the cross of Christ or His cleansing blood, which blotted out the hand-writing on the wall and made us clean, would be without value.

What the gospel does—God says: "Not one soul have I lost." The blood of Christ is perfect [illegible] for every soul in every peril. It saves us from the power of [illegible] emy—sin, and from eternal death and brings us to that life "hid with Christ in God." If the assurance is not in your heart that you have been redeemed, search the scriptures and your own heart. Some give only outward attention, but we should feel the saving power and deepening abiding peace both in our hearts and lives. Search the scripture and let it enter into your hearts and minds and only then can we hope for eternal life. When we come to the Lord's table let us examine ourselves and not be as those who see only the bread and wine and not the body and blood of Christ crucified. St. Paul urged us to continue this act of worship till He come. St. Paul believed that Christ would come in the same manner as he went and this is what the church is waiting for. Let us trust Him and carry on and perfect the work and some day we will stand spotless before the throne of God. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered at the close of the service.

HARVEST MAKES GOOD PROGRESS

Weather Conditions in Prairie Provinces Are Again Favorable.

PASTURES GOOD

WINNIPEG, October 21. — According to the weekly crop report of the Canadian Pacific Railway, threshing was resumed towards the end of last week and good progress is generally reported. On accountiof the prolonged wet period lately experienced, many of the eastern harvesters returned home and a shortage of help is anticipated in many districts. The situation, however, will to some extent adjust itself as outfits which have finished threshing have released men for work in other localities.

Fall rye seeding is in progress where threshing has been completed, and some plowing is being done. It is not expected that the latter operation will be extensive this year owing to the delay in commencement unless the next three or four weeks favor the farmers with good open weather and no severe frosts.

Manitoba—Good drying weather. Grain in stock is rapidly becoming fit for threshing, which has resumed generally. According to the reports the grain has not been damaged very materially by the recent wet weather, though of course, there is considerable toughening with a reduction in the grade.

Fifty-five per cent. of the threshing is completed.

Saskatchewan—Threshing is again in full swing under almost ideal conditions, most machines commencing on the 17th.

Approximately 65 per cent. of the threshing is done to date and as the grain is now in good condition it is expected that progress will be rapid from now on. Considering the drenching the stocks have received, there is surprisingly little damage to the grain and this is principally confined to toughening, though one or two reports of sprouting in the stook have been received.

Alberta—Weather conditions are now entirely favorable and threshing is being carried on vigorously. Ten days or two weeks of good weather should see practically all grain through the machines.

To date 80 per cent. of the crop in the south has been threshed, and 50 per cent in the more northerly sections of the province.

The corn crop owing to the very wet, cool season, is much below usual and taking the province as a whole it is probably only 75 per cent. of last year, and not all of the best quality.

Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway. — The weather improved during the week and threshing has been resumed generally. A week or ten days good weather should see all the grain threshed.

Wheat continues to come into the elevators in considerable volume, a large percentage of it, however, grading tough.

Pastures are good, and livestock is in a satisfactory condition.

HOW VARIOUS DRUGS DO THEIR WORK

Probing a Little Known Subject at the Present Time.

The conquest of many diseases of the nervous system will, it is hoped, result from inquiries now being made by Professor R. R. Renshaw, of Sew York University, into the reasons why certain drugs select certain parts of the nervous system for their action.

Different drugs, such as nicotine, strychine, and morphine act on particular kinds of nerves in particular ways, it is said but no fundamental evidence has been produced to explain this selective action.

Professor Renshaw's inquiries so far show that a big field of preliminary research will have to be undertaken before a final result can be obtained. For instance, it is impossible to say whether the transmission of a nervous impulse to the brain takes place by a chemical process or a physical one or whether it is an electrical problem, a chemical problem or a problem involving surface tension.

All this will have to be made clear.

'In my opinion," says the Professor, "a poriton of the funds contributed each year for the advancement of human welfare should be made available for work on the fundamental problems in physiology, physics and chemistry.

"Too often funds are so restricted that they may not be used to investigate a phenomenon that may possibly lie back at the beginning of a chain of physiological events the most obvious effect of which is health and disease.

Two Pertinent Examples.

"Two examples will make my point plain. Recently we prepared a new substance as a possible curative agent for a certain disease. On examination it was found that animals affected with this malady were amazingly sensitive to this material so that very minute quantities caused death. On the other hand, normal animals were comparatively insensitive. They could withstand over ten times the amount of material that the infected animal could.

"A more extraordinary situation is shown in a remarkably discovery of Dr. Reid Hunt, of Harvard medical school. Hunt found that animals fed on a diet of some of the ordinary foodstuffs that we eat daily could have their resistance to a certain chemical, acetonitrile, changed forty-fold by feeding them on a different diet, but yet made up of our ordinary daily food materials.

"Think of changing one's resistance to a poison from one measure to a forty measures by making only such changes in food that any of us might make at any time! Yet you would have great difficulty getting money to investigate the toxicity of this chemical by which no one is in any danger of being poisoned. Still, in my judgment the successful solution of this problem would have the most far-reaching effect on human welfare."

FALL SKIN WORRIES

CHANGE-OF-SEASON brings troublesome skin worries. Pimples, irritating rashes, blotches, etc., are often harbingers of fiery eczema, psoriasis and other stubborn disease.

A little Zam-Buk will soon put your skin right. Nothing else takes away pain and irritation so readily as this famous herbal healer. Sinking deep into the tissue, it destroys harmful germs, expels impurities and makes the skin healthy and clear.

Zam-Buk ensures quick antiseptic healing and protects injuries against festering and blood-poison, and is a widely-used remedy for piles. Zam-Buk Medicinal Soap is a valuable aid to the treatment.

YOUR LOT

Father Time brings queer things in the life of a man and we all have our cheer-time and sorrow. The wise fellow does just the best that he can without knowing what's coming tomorrow.

We've all heard folks kick about this and 'bout that and you, too, have done plenty of stewing. You'll fret till you hardly know where you are at, and the punch drops from what you are doing.

It seems it's too easy to sit back and fret while you park all your pep on the shelf. And yet, it's the truth, that whatever you get, it is pretty much up to yourself.

A sympathy strain in each fellow is found and it's human, but isn't it true that whenever you're spreadin' such sympathy 'round you, too often feel sorry for you.

You won't need to worry 'bout where you are getting or fret about what labor brings, if you'll turn all the energy instead in fretting to really accomplishing things.

You may think your lot is a tough one, but then, just looking around you assures that the lot of a whole lot of other men is a whole lot worse than yours.

PLACING OF SHRUBS IS PARTICULAR JOB

Whole Garden Picture May Be Spoiled if They Do Not Fit.

Flowering shrubs play an important part in the garden. Many of them are conspicuously beautiful when in blossom, and fit into planned effects in combination with flowers, while before and after their flowering season they serve as a green background, against which the annual and perennial flowering plants are displayed.

Such shrubs should be selected and placed in relation to other plants in the garden with as much care as needs to be used in placing a group of perennials, for their conspicuous appearance may easily spoil a picture into which they do not fit. In general, they should not be used in the public areas of home grounds except sparingly and with careful consideration of their effect. Indiscriminate planting of such shrubs as bridal wreath, hydrangeas, etc., in front yards is commonplace. It prevents the working out of a dignified and harmonious planting, and belittles the importance of the flowering shrubs, which are individually beautiful and deserve to be placed where their beauty will be properly set off.

Beautiful Flowering Shrubs.

There are shrubs which produce exquisite flowers, too beautiful to be placed anywhere except in the foreground where all may admire them when in flower. Bechtel's double flowering crab is one and prunus tribova, or double flowering plum, is another. The new French lilacs are of this nature, and any one fortunate enough to possess them should make the most of them.

Several beautiful new varieties of the old-fashioned syringa, or philadelphus, have been developed by the French house of Lemoine. Bouquet Blanche, Virginal and White Lady are among the finest All have white flowers, larger than in the old-fashioned type, and in some cases most fragrant.

New Roses Hardy.

The old-fashioned rugosa roses are being supplemented by several improved types. These roses are so hardy that even last winter did not disturb them. They grow into great bushes, with dark green, glossy leaves, and belong in the shrubbery border in locations where their flowers will be effective. Rose F. J. Grootendorst is a hybrid produced by crossing the rugosa and baby rambler roses. It produces double red flowers all summer. Rosa Hugonis grows into a huge bush covered in May with single yellow flowers. An excellent rose for borders is Rosa Setigera, the prairie rose, which bears single pink flowers very late, and grows into an immense bush. All these roses may be planted in the autumn.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

A NATIONAL ASSET.

As the greatest transportation company in the world, the Canadian Pacific Railway has maintained a national service in the Trans-Canada Limited which is second to none and on the conclusion of the summer schedule of this crack train has transferred the equipment to the Vancouver Express which leaves Toronto every night at 10.10 p.m. on its trip across the continent, via Winnipeg, Calgary, Banff, Lake Louise, the spiral tunnel, Sicamous and parts of the Canadian Pacific Rockies famous throughout the world, on its way to Vancouver, where the travellers are unanimous in their praise of the service of the Vancouver Hotel. The Canadian Pacific also operates a steamship service to Victoria, the Mecca for winter tourists.

Not only does the Vancouver Express carry tourist and standard sleepers, but it also carries a compartment-observation car complete in itself, while a parlor car is added from Revelstoke to Vancouver.

Added to this national service is a feature service from Toronto to Montreal via the Lake Shore Line, which has been entirely reballasted with crushed rock and relaid with 100 pound rails, insuring a maximum of comfort for travellers at night as well as an absence of dust in daytime. Trains leave Toronto Union Station at 9.00 a.m. daily, 10.00 p.m. daily except Saturday, and 11.00 p.m. daily. Arriving at Windsor station, the traveller has the benefit of immediate facilities in the women's rest room, lunch room and barber shop, which cannot be duplicated in any other station in Montreal. An added convenience is offered those who wish to travel to Montreal from North Toronto, in the 9.45 p.m. train, daily except Saturdays, from Yonge street station.

Canadian Pacific agents will gladly make your reservations and supply you with any information you require. They are fully qualified to offer a "second to none" service to the public.

OLD RAGS

Let's look within the closet of most any home at all. Let's ponder o'er the things that fill up space. You'll find a line of hangers in the summer, spring or fall, that have hung there in the well-secluded place.

An ancient dress of mother's that she wore in ninety-two is an echo of the days of long ago. A ragged suit of brother's that's a long-since faded blue: they're hanging on the closet rack, just so.

You'd laugh to see the trousers that poor father used to wear. A freak of clothing make-up, if you please. E'en so, for no good reason, you will find them hanging there. They're faded out and baggy at the knees.

A dress for graduation, worn by sister, so they say, is made of fancy frills and classy lace. She'd never have the nerve to wear this ancient gown today and so they leave it hanging in its place.

Old rags! That's what we'll call them for that's what they really seem. Like ancient treasures laid upon a shelf. In truth they're just incentives for a kind of mem'ry dream. I know! I've got a lot of them myself.

Government Control Is People's Control

Government Control, in the present plebiscite, is simply a mandate by the people to the Government (which the Government has announced its willingness to accept) to proceed with legislation which, while dealing with and as far as possible eliminating excesses in drinking, will restore respect for law, will contribute to the revenues of the Province and thereby reduce taxation, and will recognise the right of the citizen to regulate his private life in accordance with the principles of moderation and sanity. Government Control does not interfere with the habits or principles of the total abstainer but gives him a share, legally and without violation to his conscience, of the profits at present being made illegally and immorally by the boot-legger.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL MEANS BETTER SOCIAL CONDITIONS

A system which drives underground and into hidden places the performance of an act which was quite legal in 1916 and which is considered not only legal but quite proper in almost all the world, creates bad social conditions. It has magnified the importance of drinking liquor and because it has been forbidden has invested it with an attraction. Under Prohibition parties and dances have become places where the flask is passed around, and because the drinking has been done in circumstances where social conditions and habits have imposed no restraint, excesses have become common.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL HAS ALWAYS OUSTED PROHIBITION

In spite of what extremists may say, the conditions created by Prohibition have never been satisfactory. Undoubtedly, in abolishing the old-time saloon, a step was taken in the right direction. But that the public considered Prohibition a solution of the liquor problem has never been the case. Something better and more effective has always been desired, and it has been found in Government Control. Every Province in Canada has had Prohibition. Some Provinces have had an opportunity of saying whether they preferred Prohibition to Government Control. In every instance, by overwhelming majorities, one after the other, the Provinces decided against continuing Prohibition and decided in favor of Government Control.

Let Ontario do likewise.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL MEANS BETTER LAW ENFORCEMENT

Under Government Control the toleration at present extended to breaches of the law will be withdrawn. The reasonable requirements of the people will be met by legislation and there will be no sympathy given to those who break the law. Law enforcement cannot exist unless there is public support of the law. Police officers and prisons have their place, but unless each man and woman in the Province is prepared to look on breaches of the Prohibition law with the same severity as is done on theft and other crimes, there can only be a small percentage of offences discovered, and the cost of administration will be enormous.

In seven years, according to the Public Accounts of Ontario law enforcement of the O.T.A. has cost over $2,000,000. All that Prohibition can offer is to increase this cost.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL IS THE ENEMY OF THE BOOT-LEGGER

Who heard of the boot-legger before Prohibition? What brought the boot-legger into existence? What keeps him in existence? Would the boot-legger like another seven years of the present law?

Answers to these questions will demonstrate at once what Government Control will do to the boot-legger. Let it be done on the 23rd.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL WILL ABOLISH THE PRESCRIPTION FARCE

Last year more than three-quarters of a million prescriptions for liquor were issued in Ontario, and it is remarkable that around festive periods the sicknesses only curable by liquor prescriptions reached their peak. No one pretends that the prescription business is anything but a mockery. Prohibition imposes an intolerable burden on the medical profession which all self-respecting doctors are anxious to have removed. Government Control will remedy this.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL IS GOOD FOR OUR YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN

The youth of our Province should be brought up in an atmosphere of respect for law and temperance. Where liquor is consumed at all it should be done in such circumstances as will not attract the adventurous minds of young men and women, and where excesses take place the social ostracism of the offender should be inevitable. Prohibition puts a premium on the forbidden nature of the act of drinking and it has produced thousands of instances where young people who, but for it would have never touched liquor, have been tempted and fell.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL REDUCES CRIME AND DRUNKENNESS

On page 8 of his annual report to Parliament the Minister of Justice in dealing with convictions for all offences for the past year says: "The number of convictions for the past year has decreased by 19,054, or 12.3 per cent., the principal decreases being found in Quebec (Government Control), Yukon (Government Control), Nova Scotia and British Columbia (Government Control). In British Columbia the decrease was 2,740, or 18.9 per cent., while in Ontario it was 859 or 1.3 per cent." Regarding drunkenness, the Minister's report (page 7) says: "The number of convictions for drunkenness per 100,000 of the population is thus established: Ontario 338, Manitoba 280, British Columbia 200. Ontario needs Government Control.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL MEANS TAX REDUCTION

Wherever Government Control has been adopted there have been large profits received by the Government. Millions of dollars have been added to the public treasuries of Quebec, Manitoba and British Columbia. These millions are not visionary. They are real and have been spent on roads, hospitals and public works. Part of the total has gone to the municipalities to reduce local taxation.

Prohibition has diverted enormous sums of money into the pockets of bootleggers. Government Control proposes to put it into the pockets of the tax-payers.

On a much more modest scale than prevails in other Provinces, Ontario should on the the basis of its population receive from Government Control each year more than Five Million dollars to apply in tax reduction. And Ontario badly needs it.

Above all Government Control does not mean a return of the bar or saloon. The Moderation League of Ontario is absolutely opposed to it, and the Premier has said clearly and emphatically that a majority for Government Control will not bring it about. Citizens can therefore vote for Government Control without a doubt in their minds.

1	Are you in favour of the continuance of The Ontario Temperance Act?
2	Are you in favour of the sale as a beverage of beer and spirituous liquor in sealed packages under Government control?	X

I AM THE THERMOMETER

I am the thermometer, a creature of circumstances, and those circumstances determine my importance always, and in all ways.

My heart has the sensitiveness of mercury that reaches up at the heat of the sun and recoils at the slightest shadow. And that heart is worn within a sleeve of glass that my secrets may be shared with all mankind and for his benefit.

I tell the housewife when to close the windows and put more wood upon the fire. And her helpmate consults me before turning the sod in the springtime and sowing the seed.

When the little one grows restless with that fretfulness which will not be stilled, I tell the man of medicine how far out of gear the tiny mechanism is running; and I am the first to bring the glad tidings when normalcy is once more restored.

And in those lesser things of life, bigger only in bulk, I tell the maker of ice and the melter of metal just when each has reached that degree which will suit his purpose best.

I am entirely a creature of circumstances. I reflect my immediate surroundings so that all men may see; and, seeing, understand and profit thereby.

There is no heat so high that I cannot ascent to its very peak and no cold depth that I will not sound to the very bottom.

I am the recorder of that thing on which human life depends, for which the sun has a purpose and in which wind and rain, snow and sleet play a part—that thing called temperature—I am the herald, announcing it as it is, wherever it may be, in tenement or temple, in the great outdoors of the frozen north or under the scorching rays of an equatorial sun.

I am the thermometer!

The estimated heat of the sun is 10,000°; the highest artificial heat obtained is 7,000°. Regarding the heat of the sun, no definite conclusions have been arrived at, so the above temperature is only approximate.

TAFFETA SHAWLS

Taffeta shawls are very quaint and lovely, particularly when they have roses or other flowers scattered over the surface.

WANT MORE LIGHT ON CITY STREETS

Mayor Turner Suggests Utilizing Dead Standards Now in Place.

At a meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night with Alderman Walter Stocker in the chair, dead lighting standards were condemned by Mayor Turner, who suggested that they be moved to other sections where they might be used.

Mr. Fisk said no more magnetite lamps can be installed as the magnetite rectifiers in the sub-station are now fully loaded, and the cost of moving the standards is almost prohibitive. The system of arc lighting is almost obsolete, and some cities have done away with it.

Commenting on reports that some lights were not burning, Mr. Fiske remarked that his office appreciates information of that kind and will be glad to rectify the condition if informed by telephone.

A recommendation was made by Mayor Turner that lights of high power be placed at Hunter and Water, Simcoe and Water and on Simcoe, south side, between George and Aylmer.

Lights will be placed at points on Centre street, Ware street, Bethune street and King street, where recommended by the chairman.

Lighting West End.

Discussing the lighting system to be adopted in the streets of the western section of the city, the committee called H. O. Fisk into consultation.

Mayor Turner suggested that the poles for domestic lighting in this new district should be on rear of the houses and only light poles should appear on the streets.

Mr. Fisk agreed that this is the ideal system where there is a laneway.

His Worship suggested the erecting of concrete standards in this new section for lighting. Mr. Fisk said he had British Columbia cedar poles on hand which he thought would serve the purpose and prove attractive and durable, and these will be inspected by the committee.

New Fire Hydrant.

The committee recommended that a fire hydrant be installed on Chambers street in rear of the dense George street block of stores and apartments between Hunter and Brock streets.

AUTO BANNED FOR CO-EDS.

Cars Blamed For Poor Scholastic Showing of Indiana Girls.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 21.—Girl students at Indiana University were forbidden to motor outside of Bloomington in an edict issued by Agnes E. Wells, dean of women. The privilege of possessing an automobile while attending the university also was denied, except during the two weeks at the opening and closing of the school year.

The ban was placed, it was said, because of poor scholastic standing. Dean Wells said 50 per cent. of the co-eds who were forced to leave school because of low grades were known to have spent much time in automobiles.

MRS KRAUSER. APPEALS TO MRS. LOEB TO JOIN FIGHT FOR SON'S LIFE

MRS. THERESA KRAUSER (ABOVE) AND MRS. ALBERT H. LOEB

CHICAGO, Oct. 21—Mother love is appealing to mother love to help save Walter Krauser, 21, from the gallows.

Mrs. Theresa Krauser is appealing to Mrs. Albert H. Loeb, whose son Richard is serving a life sentence in Joliet Penitentiary for the murder of Bobby Franks, to join the fight in Walter's behalf.

Out of a squalid, bare little flat "back o' the yards," up to the Loebs' extensive estate in Michigan has gone a pathetic mother-to-mother plea for moral assistance, at least.

"I am writing this because I know you will understand me," read the letter Mrs. Krauser wrote to Mrs. Loeb, "and because you are a mother who has had sorrow and suffering just as I am having.

"Dear Mrs. Loeb, my son, Walter, is locked in jail, because they say he killed a policeman. For two years, dear Mrs. Loeb, they have kept my Walter locked up for something he couldn't have done. I know, because I am his mother."

Reared Brother's Family, Too.

"At the trial they said they would hang my boy, but I pray, oh, I have prayed they won't let them because He will give my baby back to me.

"We have a good lawyer who is fighting for my boy, even if we haven't got money to pay him. But I want your sympathy and a kind word from you, Mrs. Loeb.

"I had six children besides Walter. Two of them are dead. I raised my own babies, and I raised my brother's family of nine, so I am sure I have been a good mother.

"I worked hard, too, for while I kept my family and my brother's, I went out and worked for people in their homes. I kept roomers.

"My boy's head was hurt when he was little. A girl dropped a big rock on it. Ever since then he hasn't been the same Walter. I told my husband we ought to have a doctor look at him, but he only laughed at me.

Wants to Meet Her.

"At the trial a doctor said my boy didn't have a good mind and I believe him, Mrs. Loeb. I think that if I could show them that he hasn't, they wouldn't hang him.

"But I am worried how to do it. I don't know much about the law and we haven't any money to pay doctors to examine him like they did your boy.

"I have to show the judges he ought to come back to me, I suppose. If you could send your doctors to tell them about my boy, that would help.

"Even if they don't let me have my boy back for our home again, I pray to God they will let him live, even if they send him to prison.

"I pray, dear Mrs. Loeb, that if they do that, God will let me meet you at the prison gates when you go there to see your boy."

LOSE WEIGHT.

Three unsweetened stewed prunes with 1 tablespoon juice, 1 stuffed egg on toast, 2 lamb chops, 1 tablespoon green peas, 2 tablespoons diced carrots, 1 tomato sliced on ½ head lettuce with 2 tablespoons diet dressing, 2 tablespoons strawberry fluff with 1 lady finger, 1 toasted bran muffin, 1 thin slice gluten bread, 1 pint skimmed milk.

Total calories, 1055. Protein, 261; fat, 273; carbohydrate, 521. Iron, .0191 gram.

Stuffed Egg on Toast (Individual)

One hard boiled egg, 2 mushroom caps, lemon juice, salt and pepper, 1 teaspoon butter, ½ cup chopped spinach, 1 crisp piece whole wheat toast.

Cut egg in half lengthwise and remove yolk. Put yolk aside and use for some other member of the family. Melt butter and saute mushroom. Add one tablespoon finely chopped salt, pepper and lemon juice and stir over the fire until thoroughly mixed and very hot. Put remaining spinach over hot toast. Fill egg whites with spinach mixture and arrange on spinach. Put in a hot oven for a few minutes to make hot and serve at once.

Total calories, 232. Protein, 46; fat, 102; carbohydrate, 84. Iron, .0138 gram.

Six large sweetened stewed prunes, 1 cup cooked cereal with ont tablespoon sugar and ¼ cup cream, ½ cup creamed codfish with 1 hard boiled egg on toast, 1 cup cream of potato soup, 1 stuffed egg on toast, 4 button radishes, 1 cup cream of tomato soup, 2 lamb chops, 4 tablespoons creamed potatoes, 2 tablespoons green peas in butter, 2 tablespoons diced carrots in cream, 1 tomato sliced on ½ head lettuce with seasoning, bread crumbs and milk and stir until smooth. Add white of egg beaten until stiff. Mix by folding. Turn into four individual molds, set in a pan of hot water, cover with buttered paper and cook 40 minutes in a hot oven.

Rub two cups baked beans through a colander, add two Bermuda onions boiled and chopped and cook the mixture in one tablespoon bacon fat until very hot.

Remove timbales from molds and serve surrounded by bean mixture.

Total calories, 1704. Protein, 667; fat, 396; carbohydrate, 641. Iron, .0309 gram.

GAIN WEIGHT.

Six large sweetened stewed prunes, 1 cup boiled rice with 1 tablespoon sugar and ½ cup cream, about 3 ounces ham omelet with 4 tablespoons white sauce, 2 whole wheat pop-overs, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon orange marmalade, 1 cup noodle soup, 10 stalks asparagus on toast with 4 tablespoons heavy cream, 4 tablespoons salmon salad on ¼ head lettuce, 1 beef timbale with 1 cup bean puree, 4 tablespoons tomato sauce, 2 ounces curly endive with 2 tablespoons bacon dressing, 4 tablespoons coffee jelly with 2 tablespoons whipped cream, 2 plain cookies, 2 salad rolls, 2 slices rye bread, 1 pint whole milk, 3 tablespoons butter.

Total calories, 4083. Protein, 502; fat, 1632; carbohydrate, 1949. Iron, .0218 gram.

You will like the omelet much better with a white sauce poured over it, and it will add many calories to your diet. The more butter and the richer the milk the more fat.

Heat heavy cream, season with salt and pepper and stir in one egg yolk for each half cup of cream. Cook over hot water until the mixture coats the spoon and remove at once. Pour over asparagus.

The mayonnaise is mixed with the salmon, in the salmon salad, to make moist so none is needed for "masking."

The marmalade is suggested for the breakfast menu to add a bit of pep to an otherwise rather tasteless meal. This is worth remembering because a tart or, in this case, bitter preserve or jelly helps to stimulate the appetite as well as furnish calories by its own merit.

LOSE WEIGHT.

Four tablespoons apple sauce, 1 thin crisp slice broiled bacon, 1 cup fruit salad, 1 cup lamb en casserole, ½ cup shredded cabbage, 2 tablespoons rhubarb tapioca pudding, 2 pieces crisp unbuttered whole wheat toast, 2 pieces gluten bread, 1 gluten roll, 1 pint skimmed milk.

Total calories, 1056. Protein, 221; fat, 313; carbohydrate, 522. Iron, .0189 gram.

Lamb en Casserole.

Three pounds neck of lamb, 3 carrots, 4 onions, 2 cups canned tomato, 2 tablespoons drippings, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup water, 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, ⅛ teaspoon celery pepper.

Wipe meat and remove any thin papery skin covering the meat. Cut meat in inch and one-half cubes. Melt drippings in frying pan, add meat and sear on all sides. Sift over flour and stir until flour, meat and fat are perfectly blended. Add water, bring to the boiling point, stirring constantly and let boil two minutes. Turn into casserole, add carrots, scraped and sliced, onions peeled and sliced and tomatoes and seasoning. Cook in a slow oven for about two hours. This is just as good cooked in an iron stewing kettle on top of the stove but of course can't be served from oven to table, so to speak, as when cooked in the casserole. This will serve six persons.

Total calories, 3628. Protein, 1032; fat, 2339; carbohydrate, 257. Iron, 30.11 gram.

GAIN WEIGHT.

Four tablespoons apple sauce, 2 tablespoons creamed potatoes, 2 slices broiled bacon, 1 fried egg, 1 cup cream of spinach soup, 1 cup fruit salad with 4 tablespoons whipped cream pressing, 1 cup lamb en casserole, 4 tablespoons steamed rice, 1 cup shredded cabbage with 1 tablespoon chopped nuts and 2 tablespoons French dressing, 4 tablespoons rhubarb tapioca pudding with 2 tablespoons whipped cream, 2 bran muffins with raisins, 2 slices whole wheat bread, 1 bran roll, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 pint whole milk, 4 tablespoons chocolate bread pudding with 1 tablespoon hard sauce.

Total calories, 3892. Protein, 394; fat, 1746; carbohydrate, 1752. Iron, .019 gram.

The egg is fried carefully in the bacon fat. Have the fat hot, but not smoking. Drop the egg into the fat and reduce the heat. Cover and cook slowly from three to five minutes. An egg fried this way is not tough and leathery, but tender and firm and most appetizing. The fat adhering to it adds a few calories.

Lamb is said to contain less of the so-called "purins" so inimical to gout and rheumatism than the other meats. It is easy to digest and deserves a prominent place on the spring menu.

LOSE WEIGHT.

Breakfast—Three large unsweetened stewed prunes, 1 poached egg on 1 thin crisp piece whole wheat bread, 1 cup hot water.

Luncheon—One-half cup hot consomme, 6 radishes, 4 toasted whole wheat bread sticks, 2 tablespoons strawberry Bavarian cream, 1 cup skimmed milk.

Dinner—One nut timbale, 4 tablespoons asparagus, ½ head lettuce, 1 small peach.

Bedtime—One cup skilmmed milk.

Total calories, 1181. Protein, 203; fat, 391; carbohydrate, 587. Iron, .0172 gram.

During hot weather a hearty breakfast often carries one well through the day. Hot noontime seldom stimulates an appetite and a hot evening fails to pep one up to the eating point.

The strawberry Bavarian cream is a concession to your sweet tooth, but you must sacrifice some place else to have it. It may make you very warm, too, because of its high fat content.

One day of each week should be a meatless day. The reducing diet is a bit unbalanced, so a menu lacking animal protein is most beneficial. The nut timbales take the place of meat and bread, are very nourishing, but do not supply the minerals found in meat. Your pint of skimmed milk, radishes, lettuce and prunes furnish this need.

GAIN WEIGHT.

Breakfast—Six large sweetened stewed prunes, ½ cup cooked cereal, 4 tablespoons cream, 1 poached egg on 1 slice whole wheat toast, 2 tablespoons creamed potatoes, hot water, 2 muffins, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon orange marmalade.

Mid-morning lunch—One cup orange juice, 4 graham crackers.

Luncheon—One cup hot consomme, 4 toasted bread sticks, 1 stuffed green pepper, 4 tablespoons strawberry Bavarian cream, 1 piece sponge cake, 1 cup whole milk.

Afternoon tea—One cup chocolate with 1 tablespoon whipped cream, 2 brown bread and butter sandwiches.

Dinner—One nut timbale, 4 tablespoons asparagus in cream, 1 large twice-baked potato, ½ head lettuce with 2 tablespoons French dressing, 3 peaches sliced, 2 teaspoons sugar, 3 nut cookies, 1 Parker House roll, 1 tablespoon butter.

Bedtime—One cup whole milk.

Total calories, 3952. Protein, 304; fat, 1611; carbohydrate, 2037. Iron, .0191 gram.

Nut Timbales.

One cup chopped nut meats, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 cup soft bread crumbs, ¾ cup milk (skimmed), 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 2 eggs, salt, pepper.

Heat milk, add butter and bread crumbs and cook, stirring constantly until thick and smooth. Add nuts, parsley and eggs well beaten. Season with salt and pepper and turn into buttered individual molds. Set in a pan of hot water, cover with buttered paper and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

FABLES ON HEALTH

HOT EATHER FOODS..

Hot weather foods! What to eat when the summer suns bake out the appetite.

The Mann family always argued the merits of this food, and that—as do most people when the heat has ruffled their tempers and whetted their appetites.

In thinking of such matters the question of vitality should receive first consideration—for it is vitality about as much as anything that is needed for hot days.

In the fruit-for-breakfast list the orange ranks high because of its mineral and vitamine content, though stewed fruits as desserts are often recommended because they help to prevent constipation, and, at the same time, have splendid food value.

A letting down in meats—particularly the bloodier and heatening meats—is advised. Rice and cereals have fine building qualities.

And particularly—this is the time to get acquainted with the uncooked and green leafy vegetables with their quantities of vitamines: lettuce, spinach, parsley, beets, carrots.

The call for salads and "cool foods" is generally abroad in the land and never is there a better time to eat the "vitamine vegetables."

Motorists are advised to keep their feet from the clutch pedal while driving. Constant pressure tends to wear away the throw-out bearing, making adjustments necessary.

The Conscientious Perplexed

Many a man with business and professional interests needs all the money he can make—and more, to develop his business or practice.

Then how is he, at the same time, to provide adequate life insurance protection for his family? This is the thing he wants to do.

It is made possible now by our Jubilee Policy which gives you life insurance protection to any amount you require for an annual deposit that works out at much less than current interest rates:

MENUS FOR A FAMILY.

Breakfast — Stewed prunes, whole wheat cooked cereal, toasted rolled oats bread, butter, soft-boiled eggs, thin cream, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Cream of tomato soup, croutons, apple tapioca pudding, plain cookies, tea, milk.

Dinner—Roast beef, potatoes baked with meat, brown gravy, creamed cauliflower, apple-celery-nut salad, pear, bavarian cream, coffee, milk.

The roast beef should be rare, but not unappetizingly so. Children are often very sensitive to too rare meat and refuse to eat one of the most valuable meats for no other reason than this. If the roast is a delicate pink in the centre the meat is easily digested and not unattractive.

Soft-Boiled Eggs.

Allow 1 cup of boiling water for each egg to be cooked. The water should be boiling briskly when the eggs are put in. As soon as the water reaches the boiling point after adding eggs, remove from the fire and let stand four minutes. Remove from hot water and hold under cold water one or two seconds to cool the shell.

Children with delicate digestion sometimes prefer eggs without butter. Season with salt and a tiny bit of pepper.

Pear Bavarian Cream.

One cup pear pulp, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ¾ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon gelatin, 6 tablespoons cold water, 1 cup whipping cream, 2 tablespoons powdered sugar, ½ teaspoon vanilla, few grains salt.

Pare very ripe juicy pears and cut in quarters. Remove the core. Rub pulp through a puree strainer. Add lemon juice and sugar. Soften gelatin in cold water and dissolve over hot water. Stir into pear mixture. Stir frequently until mixture begins to jelly. Fold in cream, whipped and sweetened with sugar and flavored with vanilla. Turn into mold and let stand on ice two or three hours to become firm and thoroughly chilled.

Cream of Tomato Soup.

Four medium-sized tomatoes, 1 small onion, 4 tablespoons minced celery leaves, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¾ teaspoon soda, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 2 cups milk.

Peel tomatoes. Peel and cut onion in thin slices. Melt 1 tablespoon butter in soup kettle, add onion and cook over a low fire for five minutes. Add tomatoes and seasonings with ½ cup cold water. Cover and cook 20 minutes. Melt remaining butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk. Rub tomato mixture through a puree strainer, stir in soda and add milk. Heat very hot but do not let boil.

The Affair at Flower Acres

By CAROLYN WELLS

"But he has—both those things are true. I can't help it—and—you can't help me."

"I will help you, Nan—I must. I'm a helper first of all. I'm a fixer, a straightener-out of wrong conditions. You shall be freed from that brute—"

"Stop, Malcolm." Her voice was quiet now, and icily calm. "I don't want you to say those things. They mean nothing, and they hurt me."

"Nan." Finley took her by the shoulders and looked deep into her dark eyes. "Nan, do you love him?"

"How could I, Malcolm?" she said, simply.

"Then why did you marry him?"

"That I cannot tell you——"

"Why, Nan? Why, Nan, dear?" Finley's voice was tender, his gaze was compelling, but she shrank away from him, saying:

"Don't be kind to me—oh, Malcolm, don't! I can't bear it."

"I don't understand, dear, but—I'm going to. You know I love you, Nan—oh, don't be afraid, I'm not going to tell you so; but I have always loved you, and even though you threw me over for Raynor, I'm still going to keep watch and ward that no harm comes to you."

"Please, Malcolm, don't!"

"Ah, so my little plan worked, did it? I followed you down here. Mr. Finley," these opening words were followed by the appearance of Miss Mattie from around the corner of the group of evergreens, "because I felt pretty sure that you would be making love to my brother's wife. Ah, ha!"

Her thin old face took on a diabolical look of glee, and she peered into the face of each with a triumphant leer.

"Why, Miss Mattie, you here?" said Finley, quickly. "That's good. And you will have your little joke. Now, own up, you heard me asking Mrs. Raynor to have more burglar protection down here. More trained men to keep watch and ward over her valuables. Don't you agree with me?"

"Is that what you have been talking about?" Miss Mattie said, thoughtfully, and with a shade of disappointment on her face.

"Yes," said Finley, delighted that he had at least partly convinced her. "There should be a small corps of night watchmen, and more house protection besides."

"Why does it interest you so deeply, Mr. Finley?"

"Oh, I'm not in the business—don't think I'm a burglar-alarm agent, but I see the necessity for better protection. I'm surprised that so able a man as Raynor doesn't see it that way himself."

"Yes, my brother is an able man; but he's the sort whose mind is above domestic details. He leaves all such to Nan."

"That way I'm trying to persuade Mrs. Raynor to attend to it or let me do it for her. I'll take up the matter with your husband, if you say so, Mrs. Raynor."

"You were calling her Nan when I came up." Miss Mattie spoke suspiciously.

"Oh, we were old friends, and I believe we did use to use first names. But it's a more formal situation now. Shall we go to the house—it's almost luncheon time?"

The three strolled along the flower-bordered walks, and, as they reached the terrace, Dolly Fay flew to greet them.

"Got your spooning done, you two?" she asked, shaking a merry forefinger at Nan and Finley.

Miss Mattie's lulled suspicions suddenly awoke again.

CHAPTER III.
Who Fired the Shot?

Luncheon that day was not a festive affair.

Finley caught Nan alone for a moment, just before they were summoned to the dining-room.

"Would you rather I went home today?" he asked, briefly.

"No; oh, no," she said, and a look of distress came to her face. "Don't do that! Stay—stay and protect me—something may happen——"

"Sweethearting as usual?" came Raynor's caustic voice, and the two started guiltily apart. Though utterly innocent in word or deed, the consciousness of their mutual feelings made them especially sensitive to the jibes of Nan's husband.

"Oh, don't mind me," their tormentor went on.

He slipped his arm round her, chuckling as he noted her almost uncontrollable shrinking away from him.

"There, there, my beauty," and he touched her cheek caressingly, "she's a restive little filly, Malcolm; she needs a bit of taming yet."

"You don't want me too tame, I'm sure," said Nan, brightly, but Finley saw the look of utter aversion in her eyes.

Nor was it difficult to understand. Though a handsome-featured man, Douglas Raynor had a pale, anemic look that contrasted sharply with Nan's fine, wholesome color. He seemed, too, a little short of breath, though whether this meant the man was ill or merely in a temper, Finley wasn't sure. But he did wonder if the dietitian knew her business, for, to his mind, Raynor was in need of medical advice.

At the luncheon table he was moody; now bursting into a perfect stream of chatter, then, as suddenly, lapsing into a sullen silence. He called frequently for water, draining his glass so often that Miss Turner looked at him thoughtfully.

"Stop looking at me, Eva," he cried out. "I suppose water is free—if some other beverages are not."

"I haven't said a word, Mr. Raynor," the nurse observed.

"You don't have to. You just roll those hard-boiled eyes of yours at me, and I know what you mean. Hatfield, give me a pitcher of water—a thermos jug of it. I will have what I want in my own house! Confound that damned clock! I never heard such a racket of ticking! Finley, what do you think of a wife who buys a noisy, clattering clock, and hangs it on the dining-room wall, for no reason but that she knows I detest to hear it tick?"

"Oh, come now, Douglas," and Nan smiled bravely, "you know you wanted me to find a real old banjo clock——"

"But not to put in the dining-room—of all places! Hatfield, take the beastly thing down!"

The butler looked at his mistress for confirmation of this order, and, as she nodded her head, he took the offending timepiece down and carried it from the room.

Finley was watching Nan, who, at the moment, was pouring coffee into demi-tasses. Her lips quivered a little, but she was calm and smiling. Silll looking at her, Finley saw a little movement of her hand over the cup destined for her husband.

Surely, surely, she dropped something into it. And then, with a furtive almost frightened air, she glanced quickly around the table as if to see if she had been observed.

"Saccharine, of course," Finley said to himself. "What's the matter with me? I'm seeing things. Probably his nibs is forbidden sugar. But why the scared glance? Why, probably he doesn't know it, and would scold if he did. What a brute he is! I wish I could kill him!"

Orry, across the table, was nervously twisting the corners of his napkin into spirals. As a result of shell-shock in the war, his nerves were still in bad shape. Yet Orville Kent was not so much affected by the ticking of a clock or any material annoyances as he was by the mental atmosphere about him. And, when Douglas Raynor broke into real tantrums, Kent not infrequently rose and left the table.

At this juncture, however, they all left the table.

Raynor went off at once for the confab with Miss Turner that followed every meal, and that settled the menu for the next one. Thus, three times a day Nan was sure of a half-hour's respite, and those were the only times she was sure of.

"Come, sit in the swing a moment or two, Malcolm," Nan said, her eyes emphasizing the invitation.

"Me, too?" asked Goddard, very much on the watch against indiscretions.

"Yes, indeed; I'll sit between you," and Nan appropriated the middle cushion of the wide swing on the west terrace.

"I can't bear that dietitian person," she said abruptly and decidedly.

"Why do you have her here, then?" Goddard inquired.

"Because Douglas thinks he's ill—or would be, if he didn't have his diet carefully watched. But I think he's less well since she came than before."

"He doesn't seem very well," Finley agreed. "Is that the reason he scolds you so much, Nan?"

"I daresay. Though he's always been pettish if I cross him in any way."

"You oughtn't to put up with it!" Finley burst out.

"It's none of your business, Mal," Goddard interrupted. "You've no right to speak like that."

"No, you haven't," Nan said, gravely. "Whatever he says or does, he's my husband, and therefore entitled to my respect and the respect of my guests."

"Hullo!" cried Dolly Fay, suddenly appearing before them. "Here you are; and, oh, Nan, I say, what do you think? That Fairy Prince of mine isn't a Fairy Prince at all! He's a whitewashed sepulcher! A base deceiver! What do you think he did? He called me a brat! Oh, how I hate you, Mr. Finley!"

"I did—I own up—but it was in a moment of anger. I apologize."

"And take it back?"

"Bah!" and Dolly made a saucy face at him. "Then I won't play tennis with you—and I don't want a game."

"Take me on," and Goddard rose to oblige her.

"Glad to, I'm told you're a crack player."

"That was good of old Ezra," Finley said; "I may not get a chance with you alone again. Nan, can I help you in any way?"

"No, dear, of course, you can't." Then she flushed enchantingly at the unintentional word, and said, very seriously "We can't hide it from ourselves—I do care for you, Malcolm—I think I always have cared, but I am a wife—and," she drew herself up proudly, "I am a Cæsar's wife. Never shall I fail in the most minute particular of any duty I owe my husband. I do want you to go away—and I never want to see you again—as long as Douglas lives. If he should—if anything should happen—Oh, Mal, I am at the end of my rope! I can't live with him! I can't. You've no idea how awful he can be——"

"You needn't live with him, Nan. Surely you can get a separation——"

"Oh, now, I didn't mean that!" Nan's horrified eyes spurned the thought. "But—oh, I don't know what I mean—only, Malcolm, I am his wife, and as such I owe him all honor and all duty—and I propose to pay it!"

"Fine talk, my dear—but a bit hifalutin!" Raynor stepped out from the house, and came up behind the pair in the swing. "Methinks the lady doth protest too much. You can bet you're going to pay me all you so truly say you owe me. Now, Mr. Finley, as you seem to be a menace to the tranquil happiness of my home, perhaps it would be as well if you began to think of making your farewells. I asked you down here to learn how matters stood between you and my wife. I've learned."

"But I, too, have learned something," Finley said. "I have learned how matters stand between you and your wife, and I have a remark to make—which is, that unless you give me your promise as man to man to treat her with more kindness after I am gone, than you have done during my stay here, I shall not go at once."

"That is a strange thing to say to a husband."

"It is, because you are a strange husband. Now, if your unkindness to Nan has been simply because of my presence here, and if it will cease with my departure, I will go away immediately. But not otherwise."

"Bless my soul! You presume to dictate to me!"

"I do. As a friend of your wife, and as a friend of humanity, I insist upon the promise I require."

"And you shall have it. Mr. Finley, I promise you that if you will remove your presence from my roof-tree, I will at once transform myself into the most gentle, loving and kind-hearted of husbands. I will be docile, meek and mild. Can I say more?"

"You can never say another word to me, of any sort whatever!" And, in a fury, Finley left them.

He was sure he had made a fool of himself. Sure he had harmed Nan rather than helped her.

ARTICLE No. 2

There is probably no subject in auction that is more interesting or difficult than that of inferences. Each bid that is made and each card that is played should carry with it some information that will often afford valuable aid in bidding and play of the hand. To be able to draw the proper inferences from the bidding requires not only long experience but also a certain analysis and deduction that all do not possess. For this reason no player should be discouraged at his lack of skill in making proper inferences, since even among the best players errors are common. Inferences are drawn from the actual bids made and the cards in one's own hand, so that if the bidding is incorrect or there is an unusual distribution of the cards, the results often are apt to be incorrect. Inferences at the best are only more or less brilliant guesses but the best auction players, however, are undoubtedly those who can draw inferences quickly and correctly.

In the following hand, one of the players made a correct and brilliant bid, based solely on his inferences from the bidding:

	Y
	Hearts — K, 6 Clubs — A, Q, J, 7, 2 Diamonds — Q, 5, 2 Spades — K, J, 7
Hearts — J, 10, 9, 8, 5 Clubs — 6 Diamonds — A, K, 9, 4 Spades — 8, 6, 3	A	B Hearts — 4, 3, 2 Clubs — K, 5 Diamonds — 8, 6, 3 Spades — A, 10, 9, 5, 2
	Z
	Hearts — A, Q, 7 Clubs — 10, 9, 8, 4, 3 Diamonds — J, 10, 7 Spades — Q, 4

A opened the eight of spades and Z won the trick with the queen in his own hand. He now took the club finesse and B won the trick with the king. B now led back a low spade hoping that his partner would hold three spades and be able to lead it to him if A got the lead. This was a good play on B's part as he had no re-entry and his only hope of making his spade suit was for A to get the lead and have a third spade to lead. Z, however, won the trick in Y's hand and proceeded to score game and rubber, making four club tricks, three heart tricks and two spade tricks. It was a clever inferential bid and one that shows the possibilities of correct inference.

Answer to Problem No. 1

	Y
	Hearts — A, Q, 10, 7 Clubs — None Diamonds — 3 Spades — None
Hearts — K, 8, 4, 2 Clubs — J Diamonds — None Spades — None	A	B Hearts — J, 6, 5, 3 Clubs — None Diamonds — Q Spades — None
	Z
	Hearts — 9 Clubs — 4 Diamonds — J Spades — 5, 4

If spades are trumps and Z is in the lead, how can Y-Z win all the tricks against any possible defense? Z should lead his five and four of spades on which Y should discard the trey of diamonds and the seven of hearts. A is forced to discard two hearts, or Z's four of clubs will be good. B also is forced to discard two hearts or Z's jack of diamonds will be good. A and B are now left with two hearts each so Z leads the nine of hearts, finesses the queen and then wins the balance of the tricks with the ace and ten of hearts.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

LISTENING IN!

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Hear what British Columbia—that happy land that has had Government control for three years—says:

"The Liquor Controller for B. C., when asked what was his chief difficulty in operating Government control—Bootlegging."

The Police Commissioner for Vancouver: "There is no control about it. I would not advise Ontario to adopt Government control."

The Anglican clergyman at the head of the Greater Vancouver Ministerial Association Rev. Mr. Sovereign. "The system is not controlling. The debauchery in the hotels where women and liquor are taken, is terrible. Bootlegging is worse than it was under Prohibition."

The Salvation Army's Court in Vancouver: "A lot of rotten liquor is being sold, mainly wood alcohol and canned heat."

The grocers' section of the Retail Merchants' Association of British Columbia, asking for a chance to vote on a return to Prohibition: "We are suffering heavily from the diversion of money into liquor channels."

The Convention of British Columbia Municipalities: 'The present situation is worse than the days of the open bar, and is not only destructive to the morals of the people, but is resulting in bringing about a general contempt for law and order."

And this is the British Columbia which has been favoured with Government control for three years!

We in Ontario have arrived at the cross-roads, and have to decide which road to travel. Surely the mothers and fathers of young lads now growing up will not hesitate long.—Yours truly,

Caroline Birnie.

Editor, Examiner:

Peterborough, Oct. 20, 1924.

Sir,—I have the honor to be the Agent for the West Riding of Peterborough, of the Moderation League of the Province of Ontario.

My attention has been drawn to the statements made by some ministers in Peterborough last Sunday evening that the Moderation League is being supported by contributions from breweries, distillers and hotelkeepers. This is emphatically not the case, so far as West and East Peterborough is concerned, nor do I believe it is the fact anywhere in Ontario.

Let me call the attention of the general public to the fact that the Moderationists are a part and parcel of this province and community, that amongst its ranks, are equally as good Christians, good citizens and people generally having as earnestly at heart the honour, welfare and well being of the province, as any who are opposed to us.

Let me also call the attention of the public to this fact, that if all the Moderationists were expelled from Christian churches, the latter would very soon feel the loss in manners, morals, prestige and money.

And finally, let me say that no one in connection with the Moderation League has called on the public in Peterborough to supply, as say one church, $2,000.00, another $2,500.00, $20,000 in all for the people of Peterborough for their purposes and for what! To make one section of the people arbiters of the destiny of the rest of the community.

The Moderation League are not autocrats. They leave the decision of the question to the people to decide for themselves upon their own experience and their own observation.

Yours truly,
W. F. JOHNSTON,
Agent for Moderation League,
West Peterborough.

Dear Sir: Now, that the battle of words, ideas and vices, is nearly over, it may not be out of place to urge upon every elector the responsibility of casting their vote. Whatever a man's views are, I think he should give expression to them at the poll, for in no other way can we know the feelings of the province on this question, and it is for that purpose that the plebiscite is being held, and as I see it the position is this:

1st: I am in duty bound to vote, because it is a privilege won for me after much effort, and is the only way I can safeguard my liberty, and because the government desires to know my opinion on the matter.

2nd: I am responsible how I vote. If I am a father, and by my vote I make it easier for my boy to get drink, and he becomes a drunkard, I shall be responsible for that condition. If I am a wife or mother, and my husband or son falls through the temptation I helped to spread for him, I shall be responsible; if a husband and my wife becomes (through the advent of the bottle regime brought on by my vote) that saddest of all God's creatures, a drunken woman, I shall be responsible, hence it behooves me to think for myself before I cast my vote.

3rd: I cannot evade my responsibility by abstaining from voting, for the absence of my vote may be the deciding factor one way or the other and I am responsible for duty omitted as well as for wrong acts.

Do not let us decide this question lightly; it is a question fraught with eternal consequences, and should not be decided in a spirit of anger, or selfishness, or for the love of gain, but soberly, thoughtfully, in an earnest endeavor to settle it for the best interests of the province.

The decision of Thursday will either make or mar the future history of Ontario and its results will not be easily revoked which ever way it goes. Therefore, let us think.

Yours faithfully,
GEO. LEADER.

To the Editor, The Examiner,

Sir,—There are a couple of "minor phases" in this coming election which have not been stressed.

Firstly—Many statistics have been quoted in paid Prohibition advertisements and by speakers in that behalf, comparing the state of the Province before and after the O.T.A. but it is carefully concealed that before the O.T.A. we had the "open bar". Statistics in questions on a moral issue are always misleading, in this case they are valueless There are no statistics in existence to compare the state of the Province under the O.T.A. and under Government Control so such as are quoted can be ignored.

Secondly—There are a large number of Voters who have no objection to the sale and use of beer, but who do, rightly or wrongly, object to the use of whiskey and other spirituous liquor. It is quite obvious that the price at which whiskey and the like will have to be sold, if Government Control wins out, will be such as to virtually prohibit the use of whiskey as a beverage by the working man and in fact any man of moderate income. It will only be possible for such man to have it in the house for medicinal purposes and for very occasional use as a beverage. The limits of a man's purse will be quite as effective a prohibition as Coercion Act. I leave out of account the "will have its" who can get it now, of a kind and at a price and will continue to do so if the O.T.A. is sustained. Let us try a sane middle course. Of course we cannot satisfy the ultra drys or the ultra wets. The only point they have in common is their intemperance.

Yours truly,
CHAS. HARRISON.

Franks Provides a Fund To Make Son's Murderers Pay Penalty For Slaying

CHICAGO, October 21 (Canadian Press). — Plans for a trust fund that may be used after his death to oppose any efforts to free Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb were announced yesterday by Jacob Franks, father of the boy they killed.

"The murderers must never get their freedom," he declared. "A lenient governor, a shrewd lawyer, an indifferent people—and their liberation would be a matter of only a short time unless provision were made to combat any effort to get them out of Joliet.

"I don't know how long I shall live. During my life I will fight any movement to defeat justice. After my death, the trust fund will be available."

QUAKER OATS DEFEATED C. G. E. TOOL ROOM IN SMART SOFTBALL

Best Indoor Game of the Season So Far Won By the Quakers 6-5.

BRASS HAMMERED

Porcelain Crew Ran Up Score of 28 to 8—Their Defense Good.

The Belmonts failed to make an appearance at the arena last night, and the fans who had gathered to see the L.O.L. No. 50 and the Belmonts clash were disappointed when no game was played. The cause of their not being present was because they had overlooked the schedule. This game was postponed and will be played on the first open date possible.

The Quaker Oats team and the Tool Room of the C.G.E. put on the opening game, and it was a thriller throughout, with both teams strutting their stuff in great form and providing the fans with the snappiest and closest game played in the Rink this season. Abbie Rose did the twirling for the Toolmakers and he performed nicely, while his teammates gave him very good support. Although they had a number of errors, they were mostly minor ones, made on hard plays.

Carruthers, with speed to throw away, burned them in for the Puffed Wheat boys, and for the first five innings he completely baffled the Generals, holding them to one run and four hits in the five frames, while he blew a little in the seventh and eighth, being touched for three more runs. His team-mates also were a little unsteady in these frames, and were the cause of some very exciting moments. The final score stood: Quakers 6, Tool Room 5.

BRASS TROUNCED.

The Brass Department of the C. G. E. put up a poor exhibition against the Porcelain, when they had a total of eleven errors and were defeated by the score of 28 to 8 in a nine-innings free-for-all, full of some good but mostly bad baseball. Nicholls, on the mound for the Porcelain team, was hit freely, but good support by his team helped him to keep the opponents' score down. He was touched for 14 hits, but his team behind him had but one error, compared with eleven on the part of the Brass. Pacey started on the mound for the losers, but after being walloped for 6 hits and seven runs in the first innings, he was replaced by Stuffy Mahood, who met with the same kind of a reception. Mahood was no better than the first pitcher, and in the first innings he was plastered for 7 hits and ten runs, making the score 17 to 0 at the end of the second.

For the rest of the game it was nothing but run after run crossing the plate for the Porcelain, while the Brass muffed everything that came to them.

TILDEN FIRST WON TITLE 11 YEARS AGO

Took National Honors With Miss Browne in 1913, But Was Not Ranked Until 1918.

Although it was not until 1918 that William T. Tilden 2d, the national champion, came into prominence when he was placed second in the national ranking, five years before that he had won a national championship. Paired with Miss Mary K. Browne, of Santa Monica, the national women's champion, he won the mixed doubles title in 1913, and the year following the same pair repeated.

These two victories started Tilden on his way towards becoming the greatest player of his day, if not of all time, but they did not gain any prominence for him. In those days the Philadelphian was a second rate singles player and until he received second place in the national ranking in 1918 he had never been given a rating among the stars.

In 1918 Tilden was runner-up to R. Lindley Murray in the all-comers won the national clay court championship, and with Vincent Richards won the national doubles title on grass. It was rather venturesome for the Philadelphian to enter the championship lists in these days paired with a fifteen-year-old boy. This year Tilden again played for the title with a protege. But the champion Tilden was unable to do with seventeen year old "Sandy" Wiener what he had been able to do with the younger Richards and was put out in his second match by R. Norris Williams 2d and Watson M. Washburn. In 1919, Tilden was runner-up to Richards in the national indoor championship, won the indoor doubles title with him, and lost to William Johnston in the final of the all-comers.

The year 1920 found Tilden at the top, the Philadelphian defeating John ston for the National title. It was a sensational advance for a player who had been unranked three years before to reach the top of American tennis. After years of struggling to get out of the class of the second raters the Philadelphian suddenly had found himself and ha come forward with a rush. In this same year, 1920, he defeated Richards for the national indoor title, was named on the United States Davis Cup team, and with Johnston made a clean sweep against France, British Isles, and Australia in successive rounds, and won the world's championship at Wimbledon.

In 1921 Tilden repeated in the all-comers, overwhelming Wallace Johnson in the final after putting Johnson out in an early round; took the world's title again, won the doubles crown with Richards again, and led in the defence of the Davis Cup with Johnson. In 1922 Johnson succumbed to Tilden in a five set match in the all-comers' final. Tilden also won the doubles title with Richards for the third time, took the clay court crown, and with Mrs. Molla Mallory captured the mixed doubles championship.

He refrained from going abroad to defend the world title. Last year he successfully defended all of his titles, defeating Johnson in the all-comers, pairing with Brian I. C. Norton to win the double crown, coming through again in the clay court championship, and retaining his mixed doubles title with Mrs. Mallory.

Two Canadian Woollens players broke into the scoring list last Saturday. Monkman got a goal also did Jack Cridland after many years of playing..

Frick was censured by the Board for taking part in a game with an unaffiliated club.

The Board of Directors decided that Frick shall be suspended FOR TWO WEEKS and Williams sending off was sufficient punishment. In the referee's report Richmond was reported for his attitude on the field of play and Underwood made not appearance so they will have to be present at next meeting.

COONEY COMES FAST.

Looks as if the Boston Braves had picked up a prize package in Pitcher Cooney. Not only is he a very capable pitcher, but he plays the outfield well and can tickle the old apple a la Rogers Hornsby.

EPINARD

EPINARD'S DAY OF GLORY OVER

Famous French Colt to be Retired After Disastrous Challenge to Americans.

OWNER'S DECISION

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Epinard, famous French thoroughbred, will not race again and will be retired to stud upon his return to France. This was announced Monday by Pierre Wermtheimer, his owner, who said that his decision was prompted by a foot injury, which Epinard sustained last Saturday at Laurel, Maryland, where the horse was defeated for the fourth successive time since his American invasion.

M. Wertheimer also disclosed that he had rejected an offer of $300,000, or approximately 6,000,000 francs for Epinard from a prominent American turfman.. He said that since he had declined the offer he did not feel at liberty to disclose the name of the man making it.

American horseman are united in the judgement that Epinard, four-year-old champion of France, is one of the most remarkable race horses that ever rolled an Epicurean tongue over a succulent oat.

Epinard has started in four races in this country, the first two events Epinard was forced to take second place although he was clearly the best horse in the field.

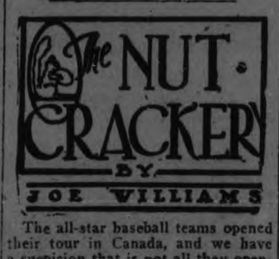
Blames Haynes For Defeat.

Inferior horsemanship on the part of Everett Haynes, who had the mount on Epinard, is blamed for the French champion's successive upsets. Haynes is a product of the American school of riding but in recent years has confined his work to European tracks.

Haynes in the two previous races, appeared to lack the one essential which makes a successful rider—ability to judge pace. The rider who knows when to let his mount "out" and take him "in" has mastered the most important tricks of the trade.

In his first start at Saratoga, Epinard ran a grand race but was beaten in the stretch by Wise Counsellor. Haynes' judgment of pace was bad. He was slow in letting his mount "out." More recently Epinard was beaten by a nose by the three-year-old Ladkin at Acqueduct, and again Haynes' handling was blamed for the defeat.

Epinard plainly proved in that race that he could have stepped in front in the beginning and stayed there until the end. He had enough early speed to have stepped the first half mile in 48 seconds, and that kind of stepping would have run the rest of the field into the ground.



The all-star baseball teams opened their tour in Canada, and we have a suspicion that is not all they opened.

The promoters are trying to match McTigue and Tunney .... This fight would be worth going miles to avoid.

Considering his skill as a mascot, it seems strange that Coolidge did not get a share of the Washington team's divvy.

Jack Renault is distributing pictures of himself and a horse as proof that he was with the Canadian Mounted .... The horse really looks the part, too.

In signing his new contract, we wonder how much Mr. Hornsby will be able to collect on the figures which show him to be better than Ruth.

Jim Jeffries went into the movies and had his eyebrows plucked. .....This was less painful than when he went into the oil fields and had his bankroll plucked.

The hot stove league will soon be in session and what we hate about it most is that the hot air magnates will furnish the fuel.

Among those who agree with Barney Dreyfuss that the world series ought to be abolished are the Boston fans.

While this is the first year Nick Altrock ever batted 1000 in the averages, he has always batted that high with the fans.

PIRATES BEST OF NATIONALS

Pittsburg Team Selected By Rogers Hornsby Month Before Hectic Finish.

Which is the best club in the National League?

One month ago I put that question to Rogers Hornsby, champion batsman of that league.

At the time, New York, Brooklyn and Pittsburgh were running neck-and-neck for the championship of that organization.

"Pittsburgh is the best club in our league," replied Hornsby without the slightest hesitation.

"That team has everything, particularly good pitching, fine fielding and plenty of speed.

"However I don't believe it will win because it lacks the old fight. From my observations Maranville is the only real fighter on the club.

"A Pittsburg victory would be a mighty popular one, but I'm afraid the spirit of McGraw's club will overcome the superior ability of the Pirates."

When Hornsby made the statement, little did he realize what a baseball prophet he was. For the fourth time in as many years Pittsburg has failed in the pinch.

In the decisive series of three games with the crippled Giants, the Pirates dropped them all, with them the chance for a pennant.

Bowling

BELMONT CLUB FORM NEW FIVE-PIN LEAGUE.

The Belmont Club have formed a new five-pin league and will swing into action next Tuesday night at 6.45. There will be ten teams rolling, and each team will be composed of three members. The players are all members of the Belmont Club. This league should be a good one as the boys are all good rollers, and some good games can be expected. The league will occupy all Tuesday evening.

MERCANTILE LEAGUE WILL LIKELY GET AWAY NEXT WEEK.

The Mercantile League will in all probability get away next week as seven teams have been entered and enough to complete the league is expected tonight. The following teams have entered: Cressman, Westclox, Bell Telephone, Nashua Paper, Examiner, C.G.E. and Dentists.

GOOD SCORES BY LADIES IN PRACTICE GAMES

The Westclox ladies had three teams rolling last night at Solomon's Alleys in practice games. Some good games were turned in for the opening rolling of the season by these ladies. Miss M. Caird rolled a high single game of 222.

The C.P.C. ladies were also on hand rolling and some good scores were set up.

SWASTIKAS AND EXCELS BROKE EVEN.

Last night at Solomon's Alleys in the Examiner Ladies' League the Swistikis and Excels each won a game and each lost one. This is the first bowling done by any of the Examiner girls and their showing last night was particularly encouraging, and with a little more practice the girls should be rolling some high scores.

Miss Edna Holmes had the high score for two game, rolling 202 and she also had the high single of 105. Miss K. McCarthy was next best with 168 for two games.

Following are the scores:

VEACH FAILS TO DELIVER

The failure of Bobby Veach to deliver for the Boston Red Sox may mean the passing of the slugging outfielder to the minors. Veach [illegible] the place in the pennant [illegible] $25,000 and wasn't a profitable investment.

JOHNSON'S DAY

Demonstration at Coffeyville (Kan.) When "Barney" is Honored.

COFFEYVILLE, Kans., Oct. 21.—(Canadian Press).—In Gala attire, Coffeyville Monday honored Walter Johnson, pitcher for the Washington world' schampions upon his return home.

Each year, for 18 seasons, Johnson's homecoming has been made a holiday. When it became apparent that Walter was to figure in the world' sseries this year, plans were made to make his 1924 homecoming the biggest Walter Johnson days which Coffeyville has observed.

At Forest Park a crowd estimated at ten thousand persons participated in Walter Johnson Day and witnessed a ball game between the Coffeyville Refiners and the Caney Blus with Walter pitching for the Refiners.. The entire town was bedecked in flags and bunting, and even the school children were given a day off.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS

Meeting in Interest of Ontario Temperance. Act.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Oct. 21.—A meeting in the interests of the Ontario Temperance Act was held in Zion Church on Thursday evening. The speakers were: Rev. W. Elliott of Campbellford, Rev. H. Shaw of Menie, Rev. Chas. Daniels of the Seymour circuit.

Rev. H. Shaw gave a very influential speech, challenging any man to tell him that liquor had ever been a benefit to that man in any way. He said that he had issued this challenge from many platforms and he has yet to find the man who can address him in the affirmative.

Rev. W. Elliott discussed the second question of the ballot very minutely. He also warned the audience that the gaining of Government Control might also serve as a stepping stone toward getting back to the old license system.

Rev. Chas. Daniels dealt with the argument that the "wets" are giving with regard to bootlegging and by means of a few striking examples he showed that the Ontario Temperance Act did not encourage the bootlegger as much as Government Control did.

Mr. Wm. Kemp has rented the "Sarginson" house just below the hall.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Mackenzie of Stanwood are moving into the house formerly occupied by Mr. Wm. Kemp.

Mr. Geo. Mackenzie has rented the farm belonging to Mr. P. A. Mackenzie and has done some fall seeding and plowing there. We are glad to report that Mr. Thos. Fry is improving quite rapidly after the injuries which he received from falling from a scaffold about 18 feet from the ground.

Miss Agnes Thomson entertained a number of the young people at a birthday party on Wednesday evening.

WIFE SEES HUSBAND GET 5-MINUTE KISS; FAINTS

DETROIT, Oct. 21.—Mrs. Carrie Burnstein was awarded a decree of separate maintenance from Morris Burnstein, merchant, in Circuit Court.

Judge Henry A. Mandell signed the decree after Mrs. Burnstein testified she had seen her husband kissing a girl clerk in his store. One such kiss was greatly prolonged, she said.

"I don't know just how long it was," Mrs. Burnstein related. "I watched for five minutes and then fainted."

WINTER COATS

NEWS OF HASTINGS

Church Union Meeting Held in the Village—Personal Mention.

HASTINGS, Oct. 21.—A convocation of Presbyterians for this district was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Hastings to consider Church Union.

Representatives from the following churches were present, Campbellford, Warkworth, Norwood, Hastings and Cobourg.

Reeve W. M. Foulds was called upon to act as chairman and the meeting opened with singing and prayer.

Rev. Kerroll of Toronto, Rev. W. R. Horne of Toronto and Rev. R. J. M. Glassford of Winchester were the speakers of the evening.

The first speaker, Reverend Mr. Horne explained fully the act passed in parliament and also the amendment to the act, and said he was present to give all the necessary information regarding what was considered by the church the serious situation confronting the Presbyterian church at the present time. Mr. Horne made very clear the steps that should be taken by, not only the church, but the congregation and every member individually.

The Act as it at present reads, is that every congregation has the option of voting between the 10th of December, 1924 and the 10th of June, 1925, to ascertain whether the members of the church still desire to continue as it is at present. If a vote is not taken by this date, the church will then be one of the United churches.

The speaker further advised the naming of a central committee to regard the requisition of retaining the church. Those appointed were: Rev. D. A. Thompson, convenor; Mr. Roxborough, Norwood; Mr. J. Brown, Hastings; Mr. Anderson, Campbellford and Mr. Thomson of Havelock.

"There's going to be no change," was the text taken by the second speaker, Rev. Glassford and the most of his address was based on the various changes that will take place in the form of the Presbyterian church doctrine when Union takes place.

A little of the creed from each of the three churches, namely, the Methodist, Presbyterian, and the Congregational will make up the policy of the new United church is what the speaker stated was presented by the advocators of the new church.

An outline of what the Presbyterian church stands for today was given and also the changes that would take place should the churches vote.

Rev. Glassford found many points for argument which he vividly pictured to those present and strongly opposed the policy of the proposed new church.

The third speaker, Rev. Kerroll of Toronto strongly appealed to the people to "be true and cherish and retain your liberties."

The objection which the Act was received was that they were going to be made to go into Union whether the Presbyterians wanted it or not.

The only two arguments found favourable to the speaker in the new church policy was that of efficiency and economy.

Facts will. You are hunting facts when you read the advertisements. Facts about products, what they are and, their worth, how long, how willingly they will slave for you.

LOSS TO SPORT; JAKE SOLOMON TO LEAVE CITY

Prominent Baseball Figure Is To Live In Philadelphia.

PUT CITY ON MAP.

Has Done More For Baseball Here Than Any Other Individual Citizen.

Peterborough and Eastern Ontario are losing one of the most prominent baseball men on Friday, when Mr. J. J. Solomon leaves the city for Philadelphia, Pa., where he is to engage in business.

No one individual has done so much for baseball in this district as has Mr. Solomon who, when he came to Peterborough eight years ago, found the game as dead as last year's bird's nest. It is to him that Peterborough is indebted, not only for the existence of the Central Ontario League, but for the prominent position occupied by this city in baseball generally.

The memory of baseball fans is short. Most of them have probably forgotten already the work done by "Jake" Solomon in putting the diamond game on its feet. When he arrived in Peterborough there was no organized ball of any kind and the grass was knee high at Riverside park. His first move was to organize a City League and his next the daring plan of entering the winner of that organization in the senior series of the newly organized Ontario Baseball Association. They clashed with the crack Hillcrests and were naturally badly beaten, but at all events Peterborough was represented in the Ontario Association and a start had been made.

Then Mr. Solomon conceived the idea of reviving the long defunct Midland Baseball League. Men who thought they knew conditions thoroughly told him the task was hopeless, but the enthusiast from New Liskeard persevered, with the result that the Central Ontario League was launched. It is now recognized as one of the fastest senior organizations in the province.

Other Leagues afterwards planned and organized by Mr. Solomon were the East Peterborough League and the Emily, Manvers and Cavan League, both of which have provided much recreation for the districts in which they operate.

Mr. Solomon became associated with the Ontario Baseball Association as a member of the executive and more recently as second vice-president and has been a tower of strength to baseball in Eastern Ontario as a member of that body. The direction of baseball east of Toronto has been in his hands and the increase in the number of leagues and the wide interest in baseball are proof that his work has not been in vain.

As manager of the Peterborough Central Ontario League club "Jake" has always given Peterborough a fighting team, and although but one pennant has been won the history of the League shows that this city has furnished the chief opposition season after season, even with material that on paper, at least, did not match up with the other clubs. "Jake's" methods and personality have made the Petes the best drawing card on the road of any of the Central Ontario League teams and he has been an outstanding figure around the circuit since the League began. He will be missed not only in Peterborough, but everywhere in the Central loop and outside newspapers and outside fans will have to seek a new target.

J. J. Solomon has been criticized as every baseball leader very long before the public is bound to be criticized. He has made mistakes, as does everybody who really does things—the only person who doesn't make mistakes of course being the fellow who never tries anything—but he has been a bulwark in sport in this section, has helped to develop much baseball material here, has done much to put and keep Peterborough on the baseball map, and this city is under a deeper debt of gratitude to him than most fans realize.

Peterborough's fandom will wish him every success in his new business activity.

JUNIOR CHAMPS ARE ENTERTAINED

Lakeviews Guests At Most Enjoyable Banquet At Grand Hotel.

The members of the Lakeview Baseball Club, Junior champions of Ontario, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fisher at a most enjoyable banquet at the Grand Hotel last night, the occasion being one of the most delightful in Lakeview annals.

The banquet room was attractively decorated with autumn leaves and the blue and white colors of the victorious team, while the City League and Ontario Baseball Amateur Association trophies held by the Lakeviews occupied a prominent place at the table.

A most daintily served and thoughtfully planned menu was done ample justice to by the guests, after which an informal programme of speeches and choruses was given, with F. D. Craig, president of the Lakeview Club, in the chair.

Manager L. W. Lebarr and Coach Walter Jackson both expressed their appreciation of the manner in which the players had supported them during the season, thanking the whole squad for their co-operation, while the players in turn thanked manager and coach for the treatment accorded them all season. Most of the players expressed the hope that the Lakeviews would carry on next year, and Manager Lebarr advised them to stick together, a sentiment that was popular.

All the speakers were warm in their praise of the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Fisher, and in their thanks to the lady supporters who had followed them during their long campaign.

The evening was a thorough success and a fitting climax to a season in which the Lakeviews won provincial honors for the second year in succession.

PREPARING FOR ACTIVE SEASON

Bright Prospects Before the Ladies' Basketball League.

An executive meeting of the Ladies' Basketball League was held in the Y.W.C.A. last evening, when plans for the season were discussed. It was decided to use the Intercollegiate rules, and among the plans considered was that of selecting an all-star team to compete in the Ontario series. Seven teams have already decided to make application for membership in the local league, and prospects are bright for a most successful season. An open meeting will be held next Monday night, at which officers will be elected.

TO BUILD A BIG ZEPPELIN.

Designer Comes From Germany To Assist In Work Of Planning.

AKRON, Ohio, Oct. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Plans to construct a Zeppelin airship of five million cubic feet, twice as large as the ZR-3, the largest ever designed, were announced to-day by Paul W. Litchfield, vice-president and general manager of the Good Year-Zeppelin Corporation.

The ship will be designed especially for Transatlantic service, Mr. Litchfield stated.

Working plans are to be started immediately upon the arrival of Dr. Karl Arnstein, chief of design of the German-Zeppelin Corporation. He is expected to leave Germany in two weeks with a staff of twelve designers.

HOSPITALS MAY JOIN HANDS TO CARRY ON WORK

Mayor Turner Suggests Economical Measure At Isolation Hospital.

ASK CONFERENCE.

Would Provide Necessary Instruction For Nurses In Institutions.

That the work of the Isolation Hospital, now being carried on by the city might be more economically done, and with benefit to themselves, by the co-operation of Nicholls Hospital and St. Joseph's Hospital, was the opinion of Mayor J. J. Turner expressed at a Board of Health meeting this morning. His Worship's suggestion was that each hospital control the Isolation Hospital for three or six months in turn, giving the nurses the necessary training in the handling of infectious diseases.

As an outcome of the discussion a conference with each of the Hospital Boards will be arranged.

Some of the objections taken were that the cost would be practically the same; that the hospitals will not consider the sreheme; that the proper service would not be given; that efficiency would fall down; and that the organization in the two main hospitals would be impaired; but to all of these Mayor Turner had carefully thought out answers, indicating that the hospitals could work in harmony, with great benefit to themselves, and a saving to the city of $4000 or $5000 a year. The question was left in abeyance pending the outcome of the conference.

Instal Sewage Tanks.

The Board decided to instal a sewage disposal tank at the Isolation Hospital, work to be started as soon as possible. The tank will cost $785, guaranteed for twenty years, and if any parts should wear out before five years they will be replaced without any charge; after five years the replacement cost will be 45 per cent of the cost at that time, and an increase of 2 per cent. would be added each year after that time.

Milk was Perfect.

Milk in the last inspection gained full marks, Dr. Young said. In the previous month there were one or two vendors below standard but these had rectified the discrepancy.

Instruction will be sent to several property owners to install sewer connections, following complaints of unsanitary conditions made to the Board of Health.

City Engineer Roy H. Parsons reported that the cost of installing a sewer and pumping system for the Quaker Oats Co., Peterboro Cereal Co., and the Gas Works would be $9,012, with a cost of $40 to $50 a year for operation. It was recommended that the City Council see that this work is carried out as soon as possible.

There were present at the meeting: Chairman G. Duncan, Mayor J. J. Turner, James Lynch and Dr. T. W. H. Young. Sanitary Inspector Charles Stapleton and Plumbing Inspector A. Metheral were also present.

Storm Takes Toll Of Life.

Eight To Thirteen Persons Killed By Tropical Tempest.

HAVANA, October 21. — There are reports that from eight to thirteen persons had been killed and about 50 injured, when a tropical storm hit Arreyes de Mantun, in Pinar del Rio were received here today. Almost every building in the town sustained heavy damage, and the tobacco crop suffered severely. Communication by wire was almost paralyzed.

REFUSES INDICT BANK DIRECTORS

Chief Justice Meredith Thinks Course Should Be Through Police Court.

TORONTO, Oct. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Chief Justice R. M. Meredith, in assizes to-day, refused to consent to a new bill of indictment, presented yesterday by D. L. McCarthy, K.C., being placed before the grand jury, charging the seven Home Bank directors with criminal offences under Section 444 of the criminal code. His Lordship, in a written judgment, declared that he could see no good reason why the indictment should not go through the regular police court proceedings unless the defence waived its right to a preliminary hearing before the police magistrate.

Mr. McCarthy informed the court that he had written instructions from the Attorney-General that the bill should go before the grand jury. Chief Justice Meredith then replied that if the Attorney-General was taking full responsibility he would hear the matter further tomorrow morning.

SOFTBALL TO-NIGHT.

Rotary and Teachers Play the First Game at 7 O'clock.

To-night in the Brock Street Arena three fast games will be run off, when the Rotary play the Teachers in the opening game at 7 o'clock. At 8 o'clock the Engineers meet the Lock Works, and at 9 p.m. the Bowlers and the Belmonts will hook up in a game that should be a thriller.

A large crowd is expected as all games are expected to be first-class performances.

AT TRENT RIVER

TRENT RIVER, Oct. 21.—Mrs. E. H. Fairbrother has returned to Toronto after spending the season at her summer home.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ketts, who have had charge of the Fairbrother estate, have left for Oshawa to reside.

Mrs. Ward Patterson, of Peterboro, has been spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Scott, Church Street.

Mrs. T. J. Brown, of Brownlug Avenue, spent a few days with her mother, Mrs. Hendren, at Norwood, recently.

Mr. Will Christie, of Toronto, was at the Christie cottage a few days last week.

Mr. Robert Kennedy and some friends, of Toronto, have been at Kendon EEEE's a few days.

Dr. Brethour, of Toronto, has been a guest at "Cedar Isle."

Mr. Eugene Parsons, of the American Tent and Awning Co., of Toronto, arrives this week as guest of the Cook cottage for three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Cook and Miss Bessie F. French motored to Peterboro and Port Hope on Sunday, where, at the latter place, they were guests with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mann. Mrs. Ward Patterson returned with them to Peterboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Matt. Greenley and Douglas, of Hastings, called on friends on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Tait and family, of Campbellford, were visitors with Mrs. Charles French on Sunday.

SPRAY.

Not all the flying machines are confining their activities to circus stunts. One plane in southwest Texas is spraying poison dust to kill boll weevils, at $1.30 an acre. The plane flies about 10 feet above ground.

Only $1.30 an acre for the poison and its distribution by airplane! It's a remarkably low price, compared with hand spraying. Isolated cases like this part the curtains and reveal how useful the airplane will be in the future.

Application of planes to poisoning destructive insects is far more important than any round-the-world flight.

Y. M. C. A. BOWLING LEAGUE

The Y.M.C.A. Five-Pin League got off to a good start last night with two of last year's teams leading off. George Street won two and Barries one. There are four new teams in the League this year, making 8 teams in all. The interest is keen and a season of good bowling is assured. The Church League starts to-night with a double-header, St. Luke's and All Saints' at 6.45, and Murray and St. Andrew's at 8.15.

"Marry Her When She Arrives," Parents Say; Lover At Station With License and Minister

DETROIT, Mich., October 21 (Canadian Press). — Keeping his promise literally to his bride's parents, Scott McKee, toolmaker at an automobile plant here, was married to Miss Margaret Currie at the railroad station here late yesterday.

McKee wrote his bride's parents in Glasgow, Scotland, asking that the girl be allowed to come to Detroit to marry him.

The parents consented, on condition that the couple be married as soon as the girl arrived in Detroit.

McKee assented, and when the train bringing the girl arrived from New York, he was waiting with the marriage license and the minister.

TRIED TO SHOW PROVINCE GAIN

Chief Justice Meredith Declares Profits Made For Ontario By Jarvis Do Not Matter.

CASE CONTINUES.

TORONTO, Oct. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Evidence concerning the bank account of Peter Smith in the Stratford branch of the Bank of Toronto was given this morning at the trial of Aemilius Jarvis, Sr., Aemilius Jarvis, Jr., Mr. Smith and Harry Pepall, on charges of conspiring to defraud the Province. G. L. McHattie, who was manager of the bank, told of Mr. Smith cashing many coupons of bonds at the branch and depositing the money. He did not know from whence the stocks had come and made no inquiry. Defence counsel, in the examination of W. N. Douglas, of the Provincial Treasury Department, endeavored to show that the whole transaction upon which the men are accused was a profitable one for the Province. W. N. Tilley, K.C., Crown counsel, said that whether there was a profit or not made no difference in this case. Chief Justice R. M. Meredith agreed, stating that the profits to the Province did not enter into the matter at all.

A representative from Browne Bros., the New York firm to whom Mr. Jarvis, Sr., cabled the profits on the bond purchases in England, was a witness and produced several letters that passed between the New York firm and Mr. Jarvis.

Mr. Douglas' next witness produced an order-in-council authorizing the purchase of the bonds. I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., one of the defence counsel, asked the witness if the province had not made a lot of money on the transaction.

"We are not charging these men with improvidence," said Mr. Tilley. "We submit that Andrew Penall got $19,500 and that it was divided with Smith. The question of profit does not enter."

His Lordship said the matter of profits did not matter a straw in the case.

FIVE MEN MAY NOT HANG.

So Think Counsel For Hochelaga Bank Bandits, Sentenced To Die Friday.

MONTREAL, October 21 (Canadian Press). — Counsel for the five condemned Hochelaga bank robbers are confident that the men will not be executed on Friday, despite the dismissal of their appeal before the Supreme Court at Ottawa yesterday.

Counsel will request a stay of execution from the Judge of the Court of King's Bench.

In their opinion it is "almost certain that postponement will be granted."

The Federal Cabinet meets tomorrow to consider the case of the five men.

"ACE-HIGH" HAS ACTION.

Life, lights, colour, action, and sudden transitions from thrills to tears, to laughter, are all combined to make "Ace-High" the greatest entertainment that The Dumbells have offered Canadian audiences.

"Ace-High" derives its title from the opening scene, which gets its "punch" from an altitude of about 5,000 feet, and ends in a thrilling smash of broke propellers, twisted wings, and battered engines.

Captain Plunkett has given "Ace-High" a series of particularly lavish settings, among them being a shell-wrecked chateau, a practical golf course, an ivy-covered bit of old England, a typical billet, a characteristic coffee stall, a marine scene, a cabaret setting, and several of those little miniature sets, which add so much to the artistic atmosphere of a Dumbells show.

Another setting which has been enhanced to suit the re-organised and now peerless orchestra, is the opening scene of the second act, in which they first appear.

The company is still headed by those two popular stars, Al. Plunkett and Ross Hamilton, while "Red" Newman, Canada's greatest character comedian, has rejoined the organisation. Other particularly favourite entertainers are Stan. Bennett, Pat Rafferty, "Jock" Holland, Ben Allen, Morley Plunkett, and Jimmy Devon, the dancer.

"Ace-High" will be the attraction at the Grand for three days, commencing Thursday, 23rd October.

The new show will be found to be entirely different from any of the previous Dumbells' revues. Not a line or song from any of the other shows has been retained, and there will be no request numbers this season, owing to the length and running order of "Ace-High."

The tour has been arranged to cover all Canada without a return date of this offering, so that those who wish to see "Ace-High" should take full advantage of the present opportunity and secure their tickets in advance.

AT THE CAPITOL.

The always popular Thomas Meighan is at the Capitol Theatre this week, as the hero of "The Alaskan," the big picture screened from the book by James Oliver Curwood. The producers of this picture have retained a great deal of the atmosphere that Curwood injects into his stories of the far north, an atmosphere that blends admirably with the characters he portrays and the story he tells. In 'The Alaskan,' Meighan departs from the role of a somewhat bewildered creature of circumstance in which he has appeared in society dramas of the past. He returns here to the virile, fighting delineations, but it is doubtful if he has yet found his real forte. He seems to lack just a scrap of the punch necessary for a figure such as Curwood draws in Alan Holt, but, as usual, he makes a central figure about which the lesser characters revolve in mild fashion.

Following out Curwood's dramatic style, the picture has a peculiar quality of vivid suddenness. One of the auxiliary villains, Rossland, is stabbed in tragic fashion on the boat that brings the chief characters to Alaska, and, to all appearances, has passed out of the picture for keeps. In the next reel, however, he is on hand, as lively as ever, to do his bit in the siege of the log cabin which contains the hero, the lady who is running away from her husband, and their Indian helpers.

Scenes of natural beauty and grandeur make this picture a memorable one. They have been filmed in the Banff district, and make admirable backgrounds for the story of "The Alaskan." Altogether, it is very entertaining. Estelle Taylor makes a new foil for Thomas Meighan's strong characterization, departing from the silken ways of his former associate, Lila Lee.

The comedy is a Will Rogers mix-up, with the comedian appearing in a hilarious story of studio life.

MARRIAGE CIRCLE PLEASES DISCRIMINATING PATRONS CLEVER, SMART HIGH CLASS PRODUCTION

Galaxy of Brilliant Players in Ernst Lubitsch Production

"If all motion pictures were as good as "The Marriage Circle," I'd go to the movies every day of my life."

That was the enthusiastic remark overheard in the lobby of the Royal Theatre yesterday after the showing of this Ernst Lubitsch production, a picture that contains such a galaxy of brilliant players as Marie Prevost Monte Blue, Florence Vidor, Adolphe Menjou, Harry Myers and Creighton Hale.

You will wait a long time before you see a better picture than "The Marriage Circle." It is at once sophisticated and simple, humorous and serious, with its story of a discontented rich wife who begins to make things hum when she takes a fancy to the husband of her old girlhood chum. It doesn't matter one whit to Mizzi that the husband is very much in love with his own wife; no! she's too much woman to see the logic of that, and she begins to turn things topsy turvy domestically.

The acting of the whole group is beyond praise. One learns what acting is after beholding this wonderful film action. Marie Prevost as the little gadabout coquette of a wife had advanced in impersonation, and is worlds removed from the Marie of the past. And Monte Blue, as Dr. Franz Braun, who tries —and succeeds so dismally— to extricate himself from the cunning plot of the imperturable charmer, lifts acting to new heights. There's no use talking about the acting of the others—you will be able to make your own enthusiastic comments, and the picture is so genuine a triumph that we know you'll attend.

In it Lubitsch has thrown all the atmosphere and charm and beauty for which he is noted in the realm of the cinema.

LARRY SEMON AT ROYAL

The laughs come thick and fast in Larry Semons comedy "The Barnyard" now at the Royal. In fact the entire program is in the lighter vein. "The Leather Pushers" can always be relied upon as clever entertainment with a generous sprinkling of laughs. The Marriage Circle, also has some genuine laughs, although they are of a different nature.

PRIZE-TITLE STORY, WITH AGNES AYRES AND ANTONIO MORENO

COMING TO THE ROYAL

You've heard loads about "The Story Without a Name", now see it for yourself on the screen.

Agnes Ayres and Antonio Moreno are featured in the leading roles of the new Irvin Willat Paramount production, "The Story Without a Name," which will be shown next Thursday at the Royal Theatre.

The story is an adaptation by Victor Irvin of the Photoplay Magazine Radio-Prize-Ttitle story, which will appear on the screen at the Royal under the title the fans themselves selected for it. Arthur Stringer, author of Gloria Swanson's picture, "Man handled," and also the Paramount production, "Empty Hands", wrote the story which is one of the biggest screen novelties seen in many a long day.

"The Story Without a Name" is a gripping melodrama crammed full of pell-mell action. It is the tale of a young inventor and his "death ray" which is destined to open the eyes of the world.

No doubt, you've read yards of publicity given this feature in the press of the country lately. But have you ever really stopped to consider its possibilities? How much would you like to see this death-dealing instrument at work?

Well, here's the chance of a lifetime. The "death ray" and the radio are both features of this new Paramount production which is eagerly awaited by fans all over the country —fans who participated in the magazine contest for selecting title for the picture—fans who heard of the contest and the picture that was to come when it was broadcast from the sixty-odd radio stations throughout the U.S.—all fans in general, in fact. Everyone's going to see this picture. There's never been anything quite like it before.

Playing in support of the principals in "The Story Without a Name" is a great cast which includes Tyrone Power, Dagmar Godowsky, Louis Wolheim, Ivan Linow, Maurice Costello, Jack Bohn and other players, prominent on both stage and screen.

If you're looking for thrills, by all means see "The Story Without a Name."

JAIL REFUSES PRISONERS.

Portsmouth Penitentiary Is Closed to Men With 14 Years and 2 Years and Lashes.

LONDON, October 21 (Canadian Press). — Portsmouth Penitentiary officials refused to accept as prisoners Thomas Fox and Sylvadore Sansone when they arrived there from London yesterday, and they were returned to Middlesex County Prison.

The men were sentenced to 14 years and 2 years with lashes, respectively.

They were not accepted because a recent Department of Justice ruling is that men so sentenced must be kept in county jails for forty days that they may appeal if they desire.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.
It is not strange, that the blessed doctrine of the Resurrection is seldom preached by those holding erroneous ideas concerning death, judgment, and the destiny of man. The idea that when man is dead he is alive is not only absurd, but makes the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead superfluous. Why men hold to error and refuse to receive light must be left to conjecture.—M. T. Butcher. 1d95 6660

RT. REV. P. C. FERRANT DIED IN JERUSALEM

Made Many Friends During Short Stay In Peterborough.

A death that will be regretted by many friends that he made during a short sojourn some years ago in Peterborough and the district, is that of Rt. Rev. Monsignor Peter Celestine Ferrant, who passed away in Jerusalem on the 14th of September.

Monsignor Ferrant was a close personal friend of Rev. J. B. Ferguson, of Warkworth, and paid him a visit there two years ago. His was an outstanding personality, and he will not soon be forgotten by those who had the good fortune to meet him at that time.

Born in Italy, in the city of Naples sixty-nine years ago, the son of an Armenian princess and a French general attached to the papal Court, and at one time in the bodyguard of the third Napoleon, the Monsignor spent much of his early life in Jerusalem, where his father was stationed to protect pilgrims to the Holy Land, and save them from molestation at the hands of marauding desert tribes.

He grew up with a strong desire to labour among the nomads of the desert, but in youth was threatened with tuberculosis. At the age of twenty, when his life was despaired of by physicians, wishing to die in the priesthood, he was ordained, and went immediately into the deserts, where he spent twenty-two years ministering to the wandering Arabs, living their life according to their manner of eating coarse food and sleeping beneath the horses' hoofs and wandering with them from place to place.

A good deal of the romance of the Arabian sheiks was lost after a conversation with the Monsignor, who once simply explained their habit of folding their tents and departing for other quarters once a week or oftener, as necessitated by the incursions of the numerous fleas which followed their unwashed state.

After leaving the desert tribes, the Monsignor was appointed by the Pope as Vicar-Apostolic for the world of all Armenians outside of their own country, and spent much of his time in the United States and Mexico.

He made eight trips back to his native land, and had been in Jerusalem only three days after the last trip when he died, in the house by the Damascus Gate of the city that he loved so well. Here it was that the Arabs he loved, five hundred strong, rode with the "Consul," as they affectionately named him, as a final escort on the day that he left the desert and its missions.

A UNIQUE CONTEST FOR PICTURE TITLE

Some One Will Get $500.00 For a Word—Local Merchants Rive Opportunity.

Twenty words or less—and you get $500. That means $25.00 or more a word. Even the most famous authors can't command that price! But someone in Canada is going to get it!

A title writing contest is now announced in the newspapers. The first prize is $800, the second prize $200, and the third $100. In addition, there are eight consolation prizes of $25.00 each. A picture is run in Congoleum advertising without a title, and the best titles submitted win the money.

The picture tells an interesting story. One can imagine dozens of things that one of the three persons might be saying. There is the young man who has evidently come to call. His raincoat and umbrella are dripping water all over the hall rug. In fact, the older woman in the picture is holding his umbrella without seeming to care where the water runs. The young lady of the house is descending the stairway.

Which one of the people is doing the talking? What is being said? Or can you think up a phrase or sentence that sums up the situation? It is clear as can be that the rug on the floor is waterproof. That gives one lead for a title.

All you have to do to enter this contest with its thousand dollars for prizes is to get an entry blank at the nearest Congoleum dealer's. It might be well to have a short talk with him about the features of this kind of floor covering so that you will have your selling points in line.

Titles must be submitted between the dates of 20th October and 3rd November. Wide-awake dealers in Congoleum are taking advantage of the interest this title writing contest is sure to arouse and are having special sales during the weeks of October 20th and 1st November.

The title may be written in French or English, in slogan form, as dialogue, or a few words of description. But it must not be longer than twenty words. It may be as much shorter as you can make it.

The subject of the address was "The Human Eye," and the audience received some very useful and interesting information. At the conclusion a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Henry. The entertainment was then brought to a close with the serving of refreshments.

Ishbel MacDonald Conducts Campaign For Malcolm In British Election.

LONDON, Oct. 21. — (Canadian Press).—Ishbel Macdonald, daughter of the British Prime Minister is conducting a good campaign on behalf of her brother, Malcolm in the Bassetlaw division of Nottinghamshire. She confessed that she does not care for electioneering work, declaring: "My line is social work and I am doing this because I want to do all I can to help the government".

Her cheerful personality more than compensates for her lack of debating ability.

IN MEMORIAM.
FLEETWOOD. — In loving memory of our dear mother, who died October 21st, 1918:
Time may pass from year to year,
And friends from day to day,
But never will the one we love,
From memory fade away.
Friends may think we have forgotten
When at times they see us smile,
But they little know the heartache
That the smile hides all the while.

CHOIR ENTERTAINED.

George Street Church Songsters Had Enjoyable Evening.

On Friday evening last, a most enjoyable time was spent when the choir members of George Street Methodist Church were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Walker, 774 George Street.

The guests numbered nearly fifty, and all took part in the stunts and games in the most spontaneous manner. Prizes of beautiful roses were given for some of the contests.

After a dainty lunch was served by the hostess a presentation was made to Mrs. Maurice H. Park, who is leaving the choir to assume other duties at the last of this month.

A vote of hearty appreciation was given to Mr. and Mrs. Walker for their kind hospitality.

MANY ARRESTED FOR ROWDYISM AS BRITISH CAMPAIGN GOES ON

Act Passed Against Suffragists in 1908 Invoked To Quell Disturbers.

FLOOD OF ORATORY.

Conservatives and Labor Have Largest Funds—Liberals Feel Strain.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The political campaign is settling itself down to a rather tedious process of discrediting and belittling "the opposing party". This is due to the absence of any great question of principle to stir the mind of the voters. There is, nevertheless, an overwhelming flood of oratory.

Marquis Curzon entered the field for the first time Tuesday with a speech in the city of London. As natural to a former foreign minister Lord Curzon devoted his speech to denouncing the foreign policies of the Labor government, especially the Russian treaty, which he characterized as "astonishing", and respecting which he said:— "The whole annals of our country contain nothing more humiliating or more disgraceful than this treaty."

Curzon also pictured the situations growing up in Egypt and India which might possibly lead to war.

MacDonald Recovers

Premier MacDonald's health has improved and he is again touring the country in an active campaign. There has been some rowdyism at Bristol, Norwich and other places, leading to the arrest of many disturbers, under a special act of parliament passed in 1908, when suffragist disturbances were rampant. This is the first time that act has been invoked since that period.

The difficulty of forecasting the outcome of the present appeal to the country is not diminished by the fact that the government party lacks any adequate representation in the daily press. This is particularly the case in London, where out of the whole field of newspaper activity, morning and evening, only one small paper represents Labor, while on the other hand the Conservatives have a representation in the big dailies far greater even than the Liberal party; hence the people are apt to form an erroneous opinion of the progress of the campaign. Both Liberal and Labor parties are beginning to feel the strain of the annually recurring elections, and it is admitted that this is in great part the explanation of the small proportion of Liberal candidates in the field, in comparison with the two other parties. It is here that the Conservatives have a distinct advantage—the possession of almost inexhaustible campaign funds. This state of affairs will induce the Liberal and Labor parties to advocate some plan either by proportional representation, or other method, to insure a more permanent form of government, to obviate these ever recurring elections

The Labor party makes up for lack of money by the great enthusiasm of voluntary election work of its supporters, but clearly would not be able to stand the strain of yearly contests.

Free Trade Mentioned

The question of free trade has cropped up in Lancashire, owing to the fear of imposition of duties on cotton imports. The Manchester Guardian warns Liberal voters not to be induced by the recently formed pact to vote for Conservatives because it insists that if the Conservatives are returned with an absolute majority they will unquestionably bring in some form of protection, which the party still believes in, despite the fact that the country pronounced against protection at the last election.

Disorders and rowdyism seem to be increasing and are not confined to any particular party speakers. All three parties at different places have experienced howlings and boo-ings. At Glasgow the disorders have been so exceptional that the educational authorities threaten to close the schools to election meetings. In Hackney, London, Sir Alfred Mond was howled down at a Liberal meeting and was only able to deliver a small section of his speech.

FAIR SOCIALIST

Lady Cynthia Moseley, one of the most beautiful women in England, has taken the stump for Labor in the forthcoming British elections. She is speaking in behalf of her Socialist husband's candidacy, despite the violent objections of her father, the Marquis of Curzon.

Detroit Police Use Tear Gas Bombs On Klan Crowd

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 22.—A riot call was sent to police headquarters last night when a crowd of persons, said to be Ku Klux Klan sympathizers, were reported to be attempting to prevent persons from entering the Arena Gardens where Aldrich Blake, former secretary to Jack Walton, deposed governor of Oklahoma, was scheduled to speak.

All available police reserves were called out and the officers succeeded in forcing back a crowd of several hundred persons who were said to be preventing persons from entering the building. The subject of Blake's address had been announced as "the Ku Klux Krase."

Tear gas bombs were used by police to disperse the mob and shortly after eight o'clock the crowd had driven into side streets.

Jury Dismissed When Women Get Hysterical

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 22 A jury of six men and six women which had been locked up for the greater part of the night while attempting to reach a verdict in a liquor law violation case was discharged to-day when three of the women became hysterical after they were told they would be looked up for further deliberations.

Judge Gould dismissed the jury because of the women's condition.

FALSE REPORT LIBELS PRINCE

Never Heard of the Actress Whose Name Was Coupled With His.

AIDE ANGERED.

MONTREAL, Oct. 22—(Canadian Press).—If what is said by certain newspapers about the Prince of Wales were said about an ordinary citizen, the paper making the statements or insinuations, as the case may be, would immediately be sued for libel and damages demanded.

This was the opinion expressed here Tuesday in the Royal suite at the Ritz Carlton Hotel by members of the Prince's staff, who commented on the publicity attending all the movements of His Royal Highness.

A New York newspaper was displayed, in which there was a story coupling the name of the Prince with that of a stage beauty who was reported to be "sailing for England on the same ship," the story tapering off with the text of an alleged telegram from General Trotter, the Prince's side.

Product of Liar.

This "telegram" was branded as the product of "a liar's mind," and the paper that printed it was declared by companions of His Royal Highness, to be an accomplice, "before, during and after the fact." The Prince, said the spokesman of the Royal party, not only lacked acquaintance with the actress, but he never even heard of her.

Discussing published reports that the Prince of Wales had "danced all night" during his stay in Montreal, his champion said: "Why shouldn't he dance all night? It is done by most healthy and normal young men of thirty years of age, and the Prince is both healthy and normal to a high degree—it is unfortunate that certain of the press see fit to lend such emphasis to those things which the Prince does and which all normal young men are expected to do."

The Prince's only rival as one whost movements create the greatest public interest is possibly Jackie Coogan, said the speaker, who deplored the inaccurate reports of the Royal visitor's doings.

CONFINED TO ROOM.

Prince Caught Slight Chill During Hunt on Monday.

MONTREAL, Oct. 22.—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales caught a slight chill following his outing at St. Augustin on Monday, and, following the suggestion of his medical advisor, has postponed his departure from Montreal for twenty-four hours. It was stated last night that there is nothing serious in his condition.

The Prince spent the day quietly in his suite at the Ritz Carlton, resting and receiving a few visitors. After his return from the dance at the residtnce of Col. F. S. Meighen and Mrs. Meighen, he remained at the hotel, arising at a late hour and partaking of luncheon, in the dining room of the suite. It had been thought that he would enjoy a motor trip to some of the historic spots of the neighborhood, and there was a plan for a hurried visit to the monastery of the Trappists at Oka.

It had been planned that His Royal Highness should leave Montreal Wednesday morning for Lowell, Mass., where His Royal Highness was to have taken a motor to Hamilton. It was further planned that His Royal Highness should remain at Hamilton until ready to proceed to New York where he is to embark for home on the Olympic Saturday.

Tea at the Tuckerman Home, at which the Prince was to meet the hunting set of the Myopia Hunt Club and this neighborhood together with friends of the Tuckermans in Boston, was postponed until Thursday.

The change in plans will shorten the visit here of the Prince and his party, because he is to sail on the Olympic from New York at 1 a.m. Saturday, but it may result in adding as a definite detail in his programme with a fox hunt with the Myopia pack Friday morning, has been left open in the programme previously arranged.

GERMAN GROUPS OPEN CAMPAIGN OF BITTERNESS

Elections To Be Held On December 7 Inaugurated By Party Charges.

BEGINS IN PRESS.

Foreign Minister Explains Insecurity of Government as Election Cause.

BERLIN, October 22. — The news that President Ebert had decreed the dissolution of the Reichstag came as a surprise to a great majority of the deputies who either are in Berlin or are on their way here to attend the session of parliament which was to have begun to-day. Political circles had hoped for a compromise which would enable the minority cabinet to continue in office, especially as the cardinal problems of Germany's foreign relations had been definitely solved through the government's acceptance of the Dawes' plan.

The party organs of all shades have inaugurated the campaign for the elections, which will be held on December 7th, with columns of criminations and recriminations which indicate a pre-election season of violent and acrimonious politics.

Favored Coalition.

In a personal statement Chancellor Marx recapitulates the genesis of his negotiations for the creation of a coalition bloc which would be "nationally inspired" and which would gather "under one hat" all factions, from Socialists to Nationalists.

The Chancellor said that after the Nationalists demanded seats in the Cabinet for members who voted against the Dawes plan and the Democrats had announced their unalterable antagonism but failed to include Socialists, he was forced to abandon further parleys and decided to put the issue up to the electorate. Stung by the rebukes administered him by the Liberal organs, Foreign Minister Stresemann, in a public statement denies that he aspires to the formation of a purely Nationalistic bloc. He claims his endeavors were aimed solely at a straight Bourgeois coalition which would constitute a strong "centre" and prove a secure parliamentary anchor for the government.

The existing unsafe parliamentary conditions, Dr. Stresemann asserts, were the source of serious embarrassment to the German delegates to the London conference, inasmuch as they made it impossible for the German agents to give unequivocal assurances that agreements entered into would have unobstructed approval in the Reichstag. This condition, the foreign minister declares, was wholly intolerable to the further prosecution of governmental business and the only alternative, in his opinion, was recourse to the ballot box.

Communists Weaken.

Dr. Stresemann predicts a weakening of the Communists and the German Fascists in the new elections, and looks for a tangible strengthening of the Bourgeois parties, which will enable the formation of an effective "centre basis" which will command a secure majority for a new government.

The Nationalists are the first of the big parties to announce their platform of principles, which are designated as "monarchical, anti-semite, Christian and Social." The Conservative organs are making "down with the Socialists and Internationism" their slogan.

The dissolution of the Reichstag, which involves the abolition of immunity from arrest for deputies, has been followed by the hurried departure from Berlin of a majority of the 62 Communist deputies against whom warrants of arrest have been issued on various charges including treason and conspiracy. Some of the communists also are accused of having manufactured passports and other official documents. One Communist deputy, Herr Roellein, has been arrested.

The United Socialists' press claim that they will win at least 25 of the 50 mandates to the Communists in the elections last May and say that in all probability they will emerge from the forthcoming election as the strongest individual party in the Reichstag, thus regaining their previous post-revolutionary dominance in parliament.

Unions Recover.

The Socialists will enter the campaign better equipped, as regards financial resources and party discipline, than any of the other parties. Not only have the trades unions re-

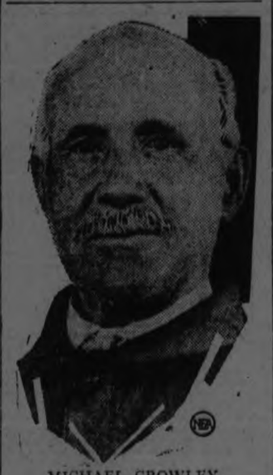
THIRTY-YEAR RIDE ON THE WATER WAGON HE CLAIMS IN SUIT EARNED HIM $30,000,

Col. M. Crowley Presents Promissory Note of Brewer Who Offered Him $10,000.

PROOF OF CLAIM.

Presents Document To Executors of Estate Valued at Seven Millions.



MICHAEL CROWLEY.

BOSTON, Oct. 22. — It's a hard seat and the road is rocky!

That's what Col. Michael Crowley, 85, railroad clerk, says after sticking to the water wagon for 31 years.

Crowley estimates he has missed 140,000 drinks during the dynasty of dust, and calculates it was worth just about $30,000 worth of torment and self-control.

What's more, the colonel is suing the estate of the late Frank Jones, millionaire New Hampshire brewer, for the sum total of his suffering — $10,000 and interest, which comes to more than $30,000!

Jones, according to Crowley, in 1893 offered him $10,000 if he would abstain from liquor for ten years. He says he has lived up to the bargain, but has been unable to collect from the trustees of the estate.

The feat is worth all he asks and more, the veteran water wagoner asserts in no weak voice.

Proof of Claims.

Proof of his claims lies in his document, now yellow with age, which Crowley says Jones signed:

"I promise to pay Michael Crowley the sum of ten thousand ($10,000) if he abstains from drinking liquor for the next ten years. My estate is bound to pay the same. If I pass away during that time the men or trustees will pay him."

The document, which was written by hand, is dated Sept. 15, 1893.

Frank Jones died in 1903, leaving a fortune estimated at $7,000,000. When the claim was not paid during settlement of the estate Crowley says he got another agreement from the brewer's widow, acknowledging the obligation. Now after repeated attempts to collect he has brought suit.

Was "Soak" Once.

Mr. Crowley admits with a reminiscent twinkle of the eye that in the good old days he could hold his own with the best of them.

"I worked for Mr. Jones at one time," he tells you, "and at that time I was taking 40 drinks a day, and kept sober most of the time. Once in a while they didn't mix right and.....

"At first Mr. Jones offered me $100 to stay sober. I lasted six months. Then he raised the offer to $2,000 for riding the water wagon for two years. I jumped off before the time was up.

"Well, after that he said he'd make it $10,000 for ten dusty years and I told him to put it in writing, and he did.

"The offer came just after I got back from a trip for Mr. Jones and I was fairly full of misery.

Ready to Quit.

"One day I drank nine pints of champagne on top of some rum, whisky, ale and cider. When I got back to Boston I just drank nine shots of hot rum and molasses and went to bed to the shrieking of whistles, the ringing of a lot of bells and other noises. Whew!

"I was ready to quit when that $10,000 offer came along, and I haven't touched the stuff since although the ten years has long expired. That's 31 years on the wagon!"

Col. Crowley won his military title while serving in the militia in New Hampshire in his youth. It was then that he met the rich brewer, who immediately took a fancy to him and later made him his confidential agent.

FRICTION OVER O.T.A. CAMPAIGN

Names Intentionally Omitted From Voters' List, Moderationists Charge.

INSTANCES CITED.

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press). — Friction between wets and drys developed for the first time during the campaign on the liquor question Tuesday, when opponents of the Ontario Temperance Act accused women dry canvassers of purposely leaving names off the lists for the vote Thursday.

"We have had complaints in the last couple of days that names were omitted from the lists, but the first case we have investigated was reported this morning," workers of the Moderation League for Government control said.

"This man was informed by women workers that they would look after his registration. His name, however, and that of his wife, have been omitted. He says he believes it was done purposely, because there was liquor on his table when the women canvassers were at his home," one of the league organizers said.

Investigation of complaints made under similar circumstances were going forward Tuesday afternoon.

DEMOCRAT FUND WAS DISCLOSED

National Committee Expect To Conclude Campaign With $750,000 Outlay.

SLUSH FUND PROBE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—With a total of $548,440 in contributions in hand to date, the Democratic national committee expects to conclude the present campaign on a maximum outlay of $750,000, the senate investigating committee was told Tuesday by Clem L. Shaver, chairman and James W. Gerard, treasurer.

Expenses thus far have aggregated $597,119, according to a statement put into the record by Mr. Gerard. Of this sum $461,801, has been paid, the statement shows. There is an existing deficit of approximately $48,000 on the basis of this showing and Chairman Shaver said he anticipated a deficit at the end of the campaign unless contributions came in more rapidly.

At previous hearings officials of the Republican National committee testified to expenditures of $1,700,000 with an estimated maximum by election day of $3,000,000. John W. Nelson, manager of the Lafollette Independent organization told of collections aggregating $190,000; expenditures of $155,000 and said he expected to wind up the campaign on a total cost of $250,000.

The examination of Mr. Shaver and Mr. Gerard consumed less than an hour and as no other witnesses were available the inquiry was adjourned over until late to-day when the Lafollette charges of a Republican "slush" fund will be investigated.

SHIP HELD BY BANK DIRECTORS WAS CHARTERED AS RUM-RUNNER

Secretary of Subsidiary Company Testifies at Home Bank Trial That the "Vaudreuil" Made Two Trips Across the Atlantic.

VESSEL WAS SECURITY ON LOAN.

TORONTO, October 22 (Canadan Press). — It was brought out in evidence at the trial of Clarence F. Smith, director of the Home Bank, which crashed in August, 1923, on charges of making false statements of the affairs of the bank, that the steamer Vaudreuil, whch was held by the bank as security on a big loan, was operated as a rum-runner between Glasgow and "somewhere near New York" in the summer of 1922.

The ship, according to J. C. Austin, Montreal, who was secretary-treasurer of the British Dominion Investment Company which chartered the ship to Walter J. Ellison of New York, made two trips across the Atlantic with liquor as her cargo.

C. A. Barnard, another Home Bank director, who is facing similar charges to those on which C. F. Smith is being tried, chartered the Vaudreuil to Ellison, according to the witness.

Other Home Bank officials, including the late H. J. Daly and J. C. Whittaker, general supervisor, were officers in the British Dominions which operated the ships.

CANADIAN ON FIGHT.

LONDON, October 22 (Canadian Press). — A. W. Haycock, who has just returned from a visit to his old home in Ontario, has plunged into the fight in West Salford, where he is seeking re-election as the Labour candidate.

Mr. Haycock says he has made extensive investigations of the Ontario Hydro-Electric system, and he suggests that something along the same line might be atempted in England.

Describing the Niagara fruit area, Mr. Haycock says that with adequate transportation, Niagara peaches should arrive in this country in good condition, and should be sold at a price within the reach of the working classes.

Plebiscite Bulletin

Oct. 22, 1924 | PETERBOROUGH | No. 28

The Time to Vote Has Come!

ELSEWHERE in this issue appears a statement by the general committee of the O.T.A. that sums up the issues involved in this campaign. There is one point that needs emphasis.

WHAT PEOPLE WILL VOTE FOR.

People who vote for the O.T.A. know what they are voting for. They are voting for the present law which, if it is sustained, Premier Ferguson has promised to strengthen and enforce vigorously.

People who vote for Government control do not know what they are voting for. They do not know what kinds of liquor the Government will sell, what percentage of alcohol it will contain, how many places of sale will be opened by the Government, or where, the character of the restrictions under which liquor will be sold, how many "clubs" for the consumption of liquor will be opened in Peterborough, what provisions will be made for enforcing the law, and many other important points. Whoever votes for Government control votes in the dark on these important points. Premier Ferguson states that Government control does not control in either British Columbia or Quebec. Vote for the O.T.A.

O.T.A. SUPPORTERS ENTHUSIASTIC.

Never have Prohibition supporters in Peterborough and district been as enthusiastic as they have been in this campaign. Never have we had as many willing and enthusiastic workers. Never have we been as well organized. Never have we had such a representative and strong Central Committee.

The reason is plain. After several years' experience of the O.T.A. the people realize its benefits. They are not going to be deceived by last minute advertisements on the other side. They are going to vote, and vote strong, for the O.T.A.

VOTE EARLY.

O.T.A. supporters are urged to vote before noon, and to get their friends to do so. This will give the Polling Booth Committees all afternoon in which to get our the straggling vote.

WHERE TO VOTE.

People who are confused about where they are to vote on Thursday are invited to 'phone 1866 or to call at the Plebiscite Committee Rooms on George street, opposite Barries.

MORE CARS REQUIRED.

People who are willing to use their cars to-morrow or to turn them over to the Central Committee for use by experienced drivers, are requested to 'phone particulars to 'Phone 1866, or to call at the Committee Rooms, George Street (opposite Barrie's).

PLEBISCITE RETURNS.

All Temperance workers and friends of the O.T.A. are invited to visit the Committee Rooms, George street, Thursday evening, where arrangements have been made to receive telegraphic returns from all parts of the province.

For the Honor of Old Ontario Mark Your Ballot Thus:

CAMPAIGN ENDS WITH FLOURISH

O.T.A. Will Stand or Fall on the Arguments That Have Now Been Advanced.

VOTE TO-MORROW.

TORONTO, Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press).—For the sixth time in three years the citizens of Ontario will signify through the ballot box tomorrow their approval or disapproval of prohibitory legislation. The retention of the Ontario Temperance Act of 1916, or the substitution therefor of the comparatively open sale of intoxicants under Provincial Government control, are the two proposals put to the Provincial electorate in the plebiscite to be taken on Thursday.

If the majority vote for Government control, Premier G. Howard Ferguson of Ontario is pledged to bring in a bill abolishing the measure of prohibition which has obtained in the Province since 1916 and substitute a system of the Government sale of liquor in sealed packages without medical certificate.

Within the last few years all four Western Provinces of Canada have abandoned prohibition for Government control. Its success or failure in these provinces have been the chief arguments in the campaign in Ontario during the last few weeks. Full page advertisements have appeared almost daily in the newspapers, setting forth the arguments and statistics from both sides of the controversy.

The campaign has been keen. It ends with a final flourish of argument, chiefly through printed advertisements and last exhortations to electors, to-day.

HENTSCH.

German militarists have a new goat They're blaming Colonel Hentsch, member of their general staff in 1914, for ordering the retreat that lost the Battle of the Marne and short-circuited what might have been a speedy winning of the war.

What really lost Germany the war was the fallacy of the thing she fought for. In a titanic human upheaval like the World War, Providence has a hand in the result and permits no error in the decision. Militarism, rather than Germany, lost the war. Time will prove this. Militarism seems very much alive now, but it's like a chicken after its head is chopped off.

YOUTH SENTENCED FOR FATAL SHOT

Judge Finds Excuse and Declares Mother Was Unworthy.

ST. CATHARINES, October 22.—Henry Beauregard was this morning sentenced by Mr. Justice Kelly to serve 16 months in jail from the time of the shooting of Francis Philbin, on December 17th last.

This means that the youth will remain in jail for another six months.

Beauregard was last night found guilty by a jury on the charge of shooting with intent to do bodily harm, but not guilty on the charge of shooting with intent to murder.

The jury recommended that the prisoner be shown mercy.

His Lordship stated that he believed the prisoner to be a decent young fellow, and had been endeavoring to bring about better relations between his father and his mother, who were separated. Trouble had entered into the family life on account of Mrs. Beauregard's relations with Philbin. "Your mother from the evidence, is an unworthy mother," declared His Lordship, who added that he could not overlook the fact that Beauregard had a revolver in his possession when he came to St. Catharines.

THREE WERE DROWNED.

GENEVA, N.Y., October 22.—Three men were drowned and three women were rescued from a similar fate after a touring automobile, in which they were riding, crashed through an embankment rail at a sharp curve and plunged into the old Cayuga-Seneca canal late last night, three miles east of this city.

The dead are, Frank Tower, 42, and Edward Parish, 45, of Geneva, and Harold Dewey, 43, of Phelp.

The machine with all side curtains tightly fastened, turned over in its plunge, landing upside down in the canal.

ARTIST PLEADS FOR LESS JAZZ

Art of Living Should Have Most Vital Appeal to Our People.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—With the resources for obtaining beautiful and harmonious things tenfold greater than those possessed by America's forefathers, "we nevertheless seem to have lost their sense of taste," Lionel Robertson, prominent artist and decorator, said in a recent lecture to students at the Chicago Art Institue.

The art of living should have the most vital appeal to our people, Mr. Robertson asserted, while the beauty in nature, a wish to be surrounded with harmonious things, to avoid the shoddy and the glaring in homes and in personal appearance, also was the surest way to build worth-while character.

"Beautiful things will enrich our lives and give us beautiful thoughts," the speaker continued. Yet in our homes, particularly the city, we find all in one room imitations of Oriental rugs with pronounced seams yellow oak woodwork highly varnished, ivory walls with no pattern taupe mohair-covered furnture, inverted bowls with indirect light, leaving no beautiful shadows, and stained glass shades on the table lamps. With such a conglomeration naturally goes jazz music and the current theatrical revues.

"The individual should exert his own taste and not slavishly attempt to follow what 'others' are doing. The home furnishings should make for atmosphere. Furniture in a room need not necessarily all be in one period, as it easily might become monotonous. Chinese decorations are extremely useful, for the Chinese are the greatest decorators the world has ever known."

A PHYSICIAN AT 65 WINS A GRUELLING CONTEST

Have you ever ridden ten miles, straight away, on a bicycle? Then you knew it was a real effort, but what would you think of riding 1000 miles in 19 days, in the cold month of May, 1924, sleeping out, almost always wet to the skin? Such is the accomplishment of Robt. J. Jackson, M.D., of Toronto, who achieved this remarkable feat at 65 in contest with C. J. Gregory, 25, a life long bicyclist and an ex-bicycle racer.

Mr. Gregory is the red-headed gray-eyed, lithe, hard-muscled, sinewy tireless type. He lived upon meat, white bread, etc., the usual diet of civilization. Dr. Jackson lived largely upon Roman Meal and milk. He did not taste meat. Although 30 years older and 30 pounds heavier, Dr. Jackson ran away from his contestant. But mark, at 55, Dr. Jackson was a physical wreck when he invented Roman Meal for building his bodily vigor and health. So effective was it that he could now tire out nine out of ten men of any age. It is a wonderful food. Try it and find out the deliciousness and the great health and strength value of Roman Meal. It prevents indigestion and positively relieves constipation. At all grocers.

NO USERS FOR ROYAL CANES

LONDON, Oct. 22.—There is some speculation as to what Queen Aexandra will do with a collection of the late King Edward's walking canes, when she returns to Marlborough House. A large rack contains the favorite canes used by the king, which typify the story of the walking stick in the last century. He was rarely seen without one, and always brought back a few from his many visits abroad.

CHILDREN'S SERVICE MARMORA CHURCH

St. Paul's Was the Scene of Big Gathering of Anglican Children.

MARMORA, Oct. 21.—The service at St. Paul's on Sunday morning took the form of that appointed for Children's Day throughout the Anglican Church. Teachers and scholars occupied the front seats. Suitable hymns were sung and an anthem rendered by choir and Sunday School in unison. The Rector, the Rev. P. Caiger Watson, officiated, and gave a most encouraging address to the young folk from the lectern. Choosing as his text, Luke ii., 29, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business," he asked, "If someone was to come to them and say 'Who is the best man who ever lived,' what would the answer be?" It would be words to this effect: "The Man Christ Jesus." Should they obey His commandments? To whom did that apply? Why, to everybody. Rev. Mr. Watson asked his hearers to think of the Man Christ Jesus in terms of childhood and to notice three particular things about Him:

1. He was a good scholar. Against the idea that there were no schools in the Saviour's time, might be mentioned the setting of a Jewish school which the preacher had seen in an exhibition held in Brighton, England, some years ago. To such a school did Jesus go, of His own free will. He, on a holiday, once attended school. He could, in His early days, see the vital necessity of learning. Children must learn in order to be better Christians and better citizens. They must watch the child life of Jesus, Who did not find learning monotonous, but put His whole heart and soul into it. In like manner, should grown-up people study the character of the Man Christ Jesus as the children should the character of the Child Jesus.

2. Jesus was a good Son and so thoroughly obedient. He must be grieved at those who are not as He would want them to be. Through obedience, He grew in favor with God and man and the same possibility lies before children to-day.

3. Jesus was a good Son of His Father in heaven. When the Christian name is bestowed, children are made children of God. Names are not given to children that they might be tagged as it were. Children to-day should copy Jesus in being about their Father's business.

Summing up, it all meant that children should learn as much as they could, as best as they could, that they should love their parents all their days, and in all life's work should put the Father's business first that the whole of life be hallowed.

The special collection went towards the work of the Board of Religious Education of the Church of England in Canada.

The reopened Siberian route will convey mails from Tokio to London in 21 days, to Paris in 19 days and Berlin in 18 days.

At the same time normal mail service between Japan and Vladivostok suspended since early this spring when the Russian authorities refused to receive mail from Japan, has been resumed.

HONEYMOON

Portland Couple Spend Theirs Like Adam and Eve.

Lowell Dunne and wife, Portland, Ore., took an economical honeymoon. Living in the wilderness for a week, with only a jack-knife to provide their living, they won a bet that enabled them to buy all their household furniture. Mrs. Dunne is shown admiring one of the crawfish she caught to stave off starvation, while her husband is seen spearing a salmon.

UTE CHIEF AND HIS WIFE TO REST UNDER "PALEFACE'S" MEMORIAL

MONTROSE, Colo., Oct. 22.—(United Press). — Chief Ouray, "friend of the paleface," and his favorite wife, Chipeta, whose passing early last September marked closing of the last chapter in Ute history of western Colorado, are to be united in death.

For a score of years Chief McCook, successor to Ouray and brother of Chipeta, kept secret the following location of the mountain crag where lies the body of Ouray, following the custom of the Utes in burial of their dead chieftains.

When Queen Chipeta died, Chief McCook was asked to divulge the secret hiding place of her husband's body that the two historical western characters might be buried side by side, and a fitting memorial erected over their last resting place.

For weeks McCook kept silent but formally called his braves to the council chamber. "It is the will of the Great Spirit and Ouray," McCook decided, that his predecessor's body should go to the "palefaces" whom he had befriended and who think of him in terms of the greatest praise they have for any western aborigine.

Hence, the Whites have won their last treaty with the Utes.

"Buckskin Charlie", emissary from McCook, carried these tidings to officials in Montrose. He said it was the will of his Chief that the bodies of Ouray and Chipeta to be buried in a cemetery at Ignacia, Colo., near here, and the spot favored most by the two when they ruled supreme over this region.

Ouray's body lies under the rimrock only a mile or two from Ignacia, "Buckskin Charlie" reported. "When proper ceremonial services have been arranged, Charlie said, Chief McCook will once again climb to the rimrock, remove the body of Chief Ouray, together with the personal articles buried with it, and and take it to Ignacia. The body of Queen Chipeta will be taken from Dragon, Utah, where it was interred.

Already action has been started here to raise a large memorial fund, to commemorate through all generations to come the Indian who made peace with the white settlers with scarcely a drop of bloodshed, and the once beautiful wife who aided him.

DISLIKE CUSSWORDS

Collier Workers Eager to Stop Using Slang Words.

DURHAM, England, October 22. —Fines collected from blasphemers have paid for a handsome clubhouse opening recently at Newbrancepeth, a Durham colliery village.

The club was first suggested at a dance where some men's "language" caused offence to a group of miners who agreed, there and then, to stop swearing, and to fine themselves if they broke their promise.

They formed the non-swearing club to receive the fines and, strange to relate, new members were added with surprising rapidity.

Everybody kept a sharp ear out for blasphemers who were called upon frequently to pay fines, and the infant club's exchequer soon waxed prosperous.

BEGS LOVE PAIR WILL FACE WORLD

Mrs. Hall-Quest's Mother Urges Couple to Come From Hiding and Defend Actions.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 21.—"Oh, why doesn't Shirley say something? Can't she see that every hour she remains in hiding only casts her deeper into the false light which Professor Hall-Quest's divorce has thrown her? Every hour of silence now means so much more explaining later on."

This plea to her daughter, somewhere in the Northwest where she is awaiting the dissolution of the final bar to her legal union with Frederick W. Hart, the "perfect love with whom she defied society's conventions, was broadcast today from a little red shingled house near the University of Minnesota campus by Mrs. W. M. Knox, the mother who for three days has been "explaining" for the daughter who had been the family pride.

So far, Shirley has been content to leave discussion of her romance with Hart to Professor Hall-Quest, University of Pittsburgh extension college dean, who divorced her that she might marry the other man, and to the mother "who knew it was going to happen but did not expect it to happen the way it did."

Must Defend Herself.

And until today, the little mother, living here with the youngest of her eleven children, had believed this was as it should be, but now she is convinced Shirley "should speak up and defend herself."

There is no criticism of Shirley in the little home here; no raising of eyebrows; no question but that her action, although it may be held wrong by society, is essentially right. It is only to make the rest of the world believe as they do, that the family calls upon Shirley to speak.

Mrs. Knox, nervously tucking back the heavy strands of iron grey hair from her thin face, explains her position this way:

"At first, I didn't feel that there was anything Shirley needed to say. I thought the whole affair was her own and that the public had no right to intrude. But matters have reached a point where she must defend herself.

"I was in close touch with Dr. Hall-Quest before he filed suit for divorce, because he appealed to me to try to bring about a reconciliation.

"I tried, and when I failed I never dreamed that the doctor had any intention of naming any grounds for his divorce other than the formal one of desertion.

Accepts New Style Code.

"I think that in view of his making public Shirley's letter and other details of the affair to call him quixotic is a slight exaggeration.

"Not that I wish to imply anything that would injure him or impair the chances of happiness that are left to him—but, after all, when Shirley was sure she did not love him, what was there left for him to do but divorce her?"

So today an old-fashioned mother accepted a new-fashioned code of conventions—because her daughter staked her happiness on that code.

Swollen eyelids and thin, shaking hands, which fumbled nervously with an apron while she talked, told of the strain in which the elderly woman had gone through in facing alone the curiosity of a convention-bound public.

Mrs. Knox hinted that the whole story, with its triangle and its love nests, might never have been if there had been a baby. She said:

"Shirley longed for children all the years of her married life. The faculty life which her husband gave her was a poor substitute for the children he didn't want."

Waiting Hart's Divorce.

Mrs. Knox said her daughter had not communicated with her since she and Hart registered at the Evanshire Hotel, Evanston, and she denied that she had had any positive knowledge of either her daughter's or Hart's present whereabouts. Then she said:

"I'm as sure, however, as if they had told me that they are registered at some obscure hotel in Chicago under an assumed name. It's easy to hide in a big city.

"They wouldn't try to hide at Bemidii. Shirley wouldn't embarrass her brothers and sisters by going to them now."

The general belief here is that the couple will be married immediately after they receive news of Hart's divorce. Suit by the latter's wife is to be heard in Cincinnati Monday.

HALL-QUEST PRECEDENT IN JOHN RUSKIN'S CASE.

Dr. Alfred Lawrence Hall-Quest, dean of a college in Pittsburgh, who gave his wife to the "other man" with a softly spoken word and a suppression of primitive emotions, had a precedent for his course in the actions of John Ruskin, the British art critic.

Nearly a half century separates the domestic dramas of these men, but they are strangely alike in character.

It was in 1853 that Ruskin, already known as one of the master minds of England, calmly and philosophically gave his wife to the painter, John Everett Millais.

Now Dr. Hall-Quest, racked by the thoughts of sixteen years of ideal home life with the woman whom he loved, as calmly divorces her so that she may become the wife of her "perfect lover," Major Fred. W. Hart.

Ruskin's Sacrifice.

The story of Ruskin's sacrifice is one of the classic chapters in the history of love and sacrifice.

The first time that Ruskin met Euphemia Gray, she asked him to write her a fairy tale. She was twelve then. The critic and poet consented, and the next day he handed her the now famous story, "The King of the Golden River."

Seven years later Ruskin's parents decided that he should marry. They thought that it would help their son to a better state of health and a more cheerful frame of mind.

Euphemia Gray then was a beautiful young woman and fond of fine clothes and society. Ruskin, in none too good health, was absorbed in his work most of the time and gave little heed to amusement after a brief honeymoon hiatus.

It was five or six years later that Ruskin became interested in a new school of English painters known as the Pre-Raphaelites. Among the younger members of this group was Millais, who at the age of nineteen had carried off every prize offered by the Royal Academy.

Beginning of Romance.

Ruskin took a profound interest in his work, and later invited him to spend some time at his home during the summer. The young artist began a portrait of Mrs. Ruskin. It was not long before the interests of the artist and the hostess became unconsciously intimate.

They first talked of painting and Millais' work, but soon, like true lovers, they discussed only themselves. They found themselves deeply in love.

Millais was a gentleman and a man of honor, however. He could not remain a guest in Ruskin's home when he had learned that he loved his host's wife. He ended his visit abruptly, but not before he and Mrs. Ruskin had confessed their secret to the melancholy husband.

Ruskin took it calmly. What happened in the next few months will never be known, but soon Mrs. Ruskin brought suit for divorce in the Scottish courts.

As soon as possible after the divorce Mrs. Ruskin was married to the man she really loved.

Friendship Unbroken.

Ruskin remained a fast friend of Millais and an admirer of his art.

Although Millais was a friend of royalty, his wife was not received at court. Queen Elizabeth had a strong prejudice against every woman who had been divorced. This was a cloud on Lady Millais' happiness, and Ruskin knew it. On his deathbed, when Queen Elizabeth asked him if she could do him some favor, he requested that his former wife be invited to the royal drawing room. The Queen granted his last request.

Green's Sponge Mixture has for years been a universal favourite in England, both from the fact that only the highest quality ingredients are used in its manufacture and for the all-round satisfaction it gives. Millions of packets are sold yearly.

Green's Sponge Mixture is made in six different flavours—Plain, Vanilla, Orange, Lemon, Almond, Maderia—offering you a wide choice. Recipes given on the back of every packet. Get it from your grocer, 20c a package.

Here's Another Recipe: Madge Buns

1 packet Green's Sponge Mixture, 4 ozs. Pastry Flour, 2 ozs. Butter, 1 oz. Lard, 1 small Egg, a little Raspberry Jam.

Mix well together the Green's Sponge Mixture and Pastry Flour. Rub in the butter and lard. Add the well-beaten egg, which will provide sufficient moisture to make a rather stiff paste. Take small pieces of paste and roll into a ball and place on a baking tin. Make a hole in the centre of each and drop in a small quantity of Raspberry Jam, close up, and bake in a fairly hot oven. WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1924.

THE ELECTION RETURNS.

The Examiner has completed arrangements for as complete as possible service in connection with the returns from the Ontario plebiscite tomorrow, and urges the co-operation of the citizens in making the service as successful as possible.

This co-operation can best be shown by using some judgment in regard to telephone queries.

The Examiner will endeavour to answer all 'phone calls promptly and to give the latest general summary of the situation, but cannot undertake to furnish information as to results in any particular locality.

Our friends will appreciate that when hundreds of readers are endeavouring to get into telephone communication with this office it would be impossible to give detailed answers.

The results, however, will be bulletined outside of the office and election extras will carry the latest details as received by the Examiner over the Canadian Press wire installed for the occasion.

HOW TO VOTE.

1. Are you in favour of the continuance of the Ontario Temperance Act?

2. Are you in favour of the sale as a beverage of beer and spirituous liquor in sealed packages under Government control?

These are the two questions you will find on the ballot paper that will be handed you tomorrow—that is, if your name is on the list and you have sufficient appreciation of your responsibility as a citizen to present yourself at the proper polling booth.

The process of voting on this particular issue is simple.

All the elector is required to do is to place a cross opposite the particular policy he favours.

One cross, remember, and answer but one question.

The placing of any other mark on the ballot paper simply means that you have nullified your vote.

Even at this late date people are heard of who declare that they will mark "yes" opposite the first question and "no" opposite the second, or vice versa.

Such voters and any others who may be equally mistaken about what is required of them should understand that nothing whatever must be marked on the ballot except a cross opposite one or other of the questions.

That should be clear enough—at all events this is the last opportunity to warn the electors.

177,000 ARRESTS.

The figures announced by Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes of the United States would seem to indicate that bootlegging has become a major industry that threatens to outdo some of the leading industrial activities.

In the last three years, the Commissioner says, Federal agents have seized about 39,600,000 gallons of liquor, while 11,077 motor cars and 444 boats and launches have been captured by the authorities.

The fines apposed on those convicted of offences under the Volstead Act have amounted to more than $18,000,000.

These are amazing statistics.

What percentage of the men engaged in illicit handling of liquor is actually caught, the Commissioner, of course, cannot begin to say.

Common sense, however, would suggest that the vast quantity of liquor seized was but a fraction of the amount actually being handled.

Many of the bootleggers are lucky enough to keep out of the law's clutches, and knowing that it is somewhat of a shock to find that there have been more than 177,000 arrests in three years.

Jail sentences for those convicted of illicit sale, the Commissioner declares, are proving a real deterrent and will eventually crimp the bootlegging industry.

However, if offenders are to be jailed at the rate of about 60,000 a year, the upkeep of our neighbor's jail system is likely to assume serious proportions.

TOMORROW'S DUTY.

The campaign is over so far as the advertisements and the posters and the oratory and all other forms of propaganda are concerned—and tomorrow the harvest of votes will be gathered.

Reports of advanced polls seem to indicate that the vote may not be as large as was expected.

Tomorrow, however, may offset this condition of affairs, and in the gereral interest it is to be hoped that it does.

The issue to be decided upon by tomorrow's vote is one of great importance; probably one of the most vital questions that has been submitted to the people of Ontario.

The lives of thousands of citizens will be touched more or less deeply by the answer Ontario gives to these two questions.

Manifestly, then, every citizen of the Province whose name is on the list should go to the polls and endeavour to give an honest answer as his conscience and his judgment dictates to the plebiscite questions.

There should be no slackers; no citizens who will not face the issue and try to reach a conscientious conclusion as to the right policy.

The Examiner realizes that there are many people who tonight, on the eve of the voting, are honestly perplexed as to what their duty should be tomorrow.

For that the apparent recklessness with which both sides have made illogical statements and used carelessly built-up arguments must be blamed.

The prohibitionists have, for example, been so violent in their condemnation of conditions under Government control in British Columbia that the Vancouver Daily Province has been constrained to plead for fair play for its home city and for its Province through the medium of a large advertisement in Eastern newspapers, while the Moderation League has been similarly unfortunate in some of its statements.

Between them they have succeeded in puzzling many electors who are still at sea with voting only a few hours away.

THE TEMPER OF SOME WESTERN PEOPLE.

"Amazing," "throttling of people's rights," "outrageous injustice." Such are some of the terms used by the Manitoba Free Press, Mr. Robert Forke, Mr. T. A. Crerar and other leaders of Pairie opinion anent the Railway Commission's ruling over the Crow's Nest Pass agreement. They are illuminating sidelights upon the temper of the West, says the Ottawa Journal.

What has the Railway Commission done? Briefly, it has but ended a rate condition of indescribable confusion, terminated a position reached by no principle, but by barter, eliminated rates that robbed Peter to pay Paul which had not the slightest foundation to justice or in equity.

But quite a number of people in the West, judging from the utterances just quoted, are oblivious to such things. They suggest that to some extent the West has become a spoiled child of Confederation, an irascible product of demagogue leaders, concerned too much with its own selfish ends, caring too little for the rest of Canada.

The protest is that the West is discriminated against. The real discrimination takes the form of the fact that the people of Ontario pay more in income taxes than all of the Provinces West of the Great Lakes combined; that Canadian farmers all told pay something like one per cent. of the total income tax of the Dominion; that most of the things that farmers use in production, as well as most of the things they sell, are exempted from the Sales Tax; that they have just been given tariff concessions at the expense of the rest of Canada; and that, repeal of the Crow's Nest Pass agreement notwithstanding, they have still perhaps the lowest railway rates in the world.

What on earth do those in the West who grouch want? Farmers there are infinitely better off than their neighbors across the line, where, on the testimony of the United States Senate, high freight rates, bank failures and other things have brought them to desperation. Canada, during the past twenty years, has done everything possible for the West. Internal grain elevators; docks and shipping facilities on both coasts to handle grain; loans to purchase seeds (most of them never paid back); $25,000,000 in a crazy Hudson Bay scheme; freight rates that meant loss for the rest of Canada; tariff concessions; exemption from taxation—these are but some of the things that have been done.

Yet some people in the West clamor about discrimination!

WHAT IT COSTS TO RUN A CAMPAIGN.

On October 10 the Republican National Committee had collected and expended $1,714,317. The third ticket has raised $190,525 and spent $155,062. An incomplete report from the Democrats' Western headquarters showed an expenditure of $32,500. These are the sworn figures laid before the Senate Special Campaign Fund Committee sitting in Chicago.

Thus far there is no "Big Money," such as other campaigns have known in this contest. Republican funds are about one-fifth of what was spent in 1920. They are less than half the minimum need of a campaign. In 1920 the Republican National Committee spent $5,319,000 and had a deficit of $1,600,000. Democrats spent $1,318,000 and had a deficit of $300,000. These figures do not include money spent by congressional, senatorial and State committees. These in 1920 brought the Republican totals up to $9,700,000 and those of the Democrats to $2,537,000.

Actually, the cost of a general election in America will run somewhere between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 for all parties. County and local committees, groups and candidates spend millions. State and presidential primary costs run into more millions.

A national election costs as much as a war once cost. Campaign expenses mount quadrennially. The high cost of living has hit politics. In 1885 the Buchanan campaign cost the Democrats $250,000. A single county's campaign expense may go higher now.

Grant's first campaign cost $150,000; his second, $250,000. In 1880, with Garfield, the Republicans first went over a million, with 11,100,000. In 1884 the Blaine forces spent $1,300,000; those of Cleveland, $1,400,000. The Democrats set a new mark of $2,350,000 in the third Cleveland campaign. The Republican fund raised by Mark Hanna in 1896 was popularly supposed to be as much as $12,000,000. Actually, it was only $3,500,000. Bryan had only $650,000 that year.

In 1912 Woodrow Wilson was backed by $1,130,000 against Taft with $1,070,000, while Roosevelt's third party got along on $670,000. In 1916 Hughes had $3,829,000 and Wilson had $1,958,000. High-water mark in these National Committee expenditures was reached in 1920, when Harding's forces spent $6,619,000 and those of Cox $1,618,000, including the deficits afterward made good.

Where does the money go? Is it spent lawfully or crookedly? As a matter of fact, millions are wasted. A campaign is as expensive as warfare. Thousands of tons of "literature" are printed, addressed and shipped. Headquarters rent, furniture, halls, bands, speakers, transportation, advertising, buttons, banners, sample ballots and, by no means least, election-day expenses swallow up millions. Figure the cost of mailing three pieces of "literature," the printing, handling, addressing and postage, to $55,000,000 American voters!

The Borah committee may uncover contributions from big business, but it is not likely to find any money used for plain vote-buying. Not more than 2 per cent. of the electorate, practical politicians say, is corruptible. Practically every dollar of every party's fund is used legitimately, even though wastefully.

The estimate of $30,000,000 as the total cost of a general election includes the $10,000,000 expended by the States is setting up the election machinery. The general total means that we are spending more than $1 for every vote cas tin a national election.

PHILIPPINES SUGAR CROP

Better Times Looked for on Philippine Islands.

MANILA, Sept. 22.—(Associated Press).—The centrifugal sugar crop of the Philippine Islands for the coming season, 1924-1925, is estimated at 418,000 metric tons by the Philippine Sugar Association. This is an increase of 107,911 tons, or 34.7 per cent. over the previous year. In a statement the Sugar Association says:

"This is expected to be the largest increase in tons shown since the development of modern sugar culture in the islands, although not the largest percentage of increase shown in any year. The big increase in production will mean much more money for the planters and better times for the islands generally, especially if the upward tendency of prices continues. Practically every sugar central in the Philippines will have a big increase in output this year."

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, October 22 (Canadian Press). — The egg situation is very strong both in Canada and the United States. Stocks in both countries show a large deficit as compared with last year, and some dealers here predict storage eggs will advance 3 to 4 cents per dozen from present prices before Christmas.

Figuring upon the present level of prices in Chicago, storage eggs from there could not be laid down at Toronto or Montreal under 41 cents.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, October 22 (Canadian Press). — The demand for supplies in the market for cash coarse grain yesterday was limited, and the volume of business was small, with car lots of Ontario No. 3 extra malting barley quoted at $1.08, No. 3 grade at $1.07, Ontario No. 2 white oats at 65 to 66 cents, and No. 3 grade at 62 cents per bushel, ex-track.

There was no further developments in the spring wheat flour situation, prices being steady at the recent decline noted. A little trade was done with English importers for November shipment.

No change of any importance occurred on the winter wheat flour.

The volume of business done in millfeed was large owing to the fact that the demand is steadily increasing for supplies on account of the colder weather prevailing. Prices were firm.

HARVESTERS DRUNK SAYS PREACHER

Many Crews in West Had Only Two Sober Men, Audience Hears.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 22.—The rally of the young people and others, on invitation from the young people of St. Andrew's church, met in great numbers on Monday night in the Sunday School room of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, for the purpose of seeing lantern slides with reference to the question of the O.T.A. The meeting was opened at eight o'clock with Mr. J. D. McEachern, president of St. Andrew's young people, in the chair. Rev. C. F. McIntosh, Rev. W. Elliott and Rev. C. D. Daniel were present and assisted in the evening's program.

The chairman spoke a few words of welcome to those present from the other churches after which he announced the programme. Mrs. C. W. Turner and Miss Ruth Taylor sang a duet "I'll be a hero", after which Mr. McIntosh gave an interesting talk in connection with the slides, showing the effects of alcohol.

All Harvesters Drunk.

Mr. McIntosh told of a man who had just come from Winnipeg last week to Campbellford and he said "that within the last eight weeks he had seen many threshing outfits where only a couple of the men would be sober and they were men who never drank." He also said "there were a great many more car accidents."

Miss Cherrie Turner played an instrumental solo. Rev. C. D. Daniel then gave a splendid address. In speaking of Government Control in Quebec he gave a list of statistics showing the difference between Quebec and Ontario and in Ontario's favor.

Comparing Montreal and Toronto. Only five percent of the people in Montreal own their homes while in Toronto fifty-five owned their homes. The average person in Ontario is in far better condition than in Quebec, he said. The taxes in the average cities in Quebec show and increase of fifty percent.

Mr. Daniel opened his remarks by declaring "The price of success is everlastingly sticking to it." The contest of right against wrong is hard and long but sure. The enthusiastic address was instructive and thoughtful and was enjoyed by old and young present.

Miss Verna Shore and Miss Lily Weston favored the audience with a vocal duet and the meeting was closed by Mr. J. A. Anderson.

Cup and Saucer Shower.

Mrs. C. A. Wilson, Bridge street, gave a cup and saucer shower for Miss Georgia Dickson on Monday afternoon. About fifteen young ladies, friends of the bride-to-be, were present and part of the afternoon was spent in hemming dusters and kettle holders provided by the hostess for the guest of honor.

There was also a contest, A love affair in a flower garden." Then little Elizabeth Free, presented the gifts in a beautifully decorated carriage. There were white ribbons and a doll bride dressed for the occasion in the carriage. The bride-elect thanked her friends for the many beautiful cups and saucers. A very dainty lunch was served, the dining room being decorated with pink candles and pink "mums."

Miss Dickson is to be married on Saturday of this week and her girl friends were glad to have such a pleasant afternoon with her.

New Summer Cottage.

Mr. Williamson of the Williamson Lumber Co., Toronto, is building a summer cottage at Crow Bay, on Mr. Thos. Carr's property, just north of Mr. F. J. Smith's cottage.

Mr. Williamson with four carpenters and two large trucks of lumber arrived on Monday and will rush on the work of building.

Mrs. Thos. Johnston of Peterboro spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. James E. Johnson, Queen Street.

Mr. Thos. Craighead and Miss E. Fame spent Sunday with Mrs. Foster at Colborne.

HOW MARY VOTES.

She's studied it quite carefully
At least, so Mary thought,
And knew just where to place the cross
On the ballot that she got.
Then just to make it quite, quite sure,
And to show just where she stood,
She marked a second, bigger cross,
So her ballot was no good.

Our Mary was a wonder
At making people smile;
To keep her friends all happy
She considered well worth while.
But when one day they spoke of votes
She said, "I hate a crowd,
And voting seems unladylike,"
Then her friends smiled right out loud.

HARDSHIPS PROMISED

Veterans of England Have Hard Winter Ahead of Them.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—(Associated Press).—Closing of the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley shortly will result in additional serious unemployment among former service men, according to officials of the British Legion, who are making extra efforts to provide work for the men now employed in the exhibition grounds and buildings.

Pointing out that for the last three months unemployment figures have been heavier than for the corresponding period of last year, the official of the legion said that there was every indication that the coming winter would produce more distress among former service men than any since the Armistice, due to the completion or abandonment of the many municipal relief schemes undertaken since the war.

Individual cases of hardship and poverty reaching his notice, he added, were increasing alarmingly in number.

BUDAPEST USES METAL HOUSES

BUDAPEST, Oct. 22.—(Associated Press).—The successful use of thin sheet metal in the making of toy houses has been developed in this city into the manufacture of dwellings.

Fireproof materials, covered with a veneer of metal and made to standard design and size, are used to run up four room bungalows which, complete with bath, can be erected in 24 hours. The price for such a dwelling is about $950.

MURRELL'S BODY NOT WANTED IN QUIET CEMETERY

Remans of Slayer May Be Moved to Public Burying Ground.

PROTEST MADE

Grand Jury and Judge Agree To Exclusion From Private Graveyard.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Whether the remains of Sidney Murrell, who was executed six months ago for the murder of Russell Campbell, bank manager of Melbourne, may be permitted to rest indefinitely in the little private owned cemetery of Pond Mills, is just now a matter of considerable conjecture.

The body of the former gunman rests beside the remains of a boyhood friend, having been buried there with the consent of the latter's mother. But the families of others whose last resting place is also the little cemetery have objected vigorously to the presence there of the slayer's remains and it is probable that this objection will induce Murrell's mother to have the body exhumed and interred in a public cemetery.

Sidney Murrell's tumultuous career of crime ended with death at the hangman's hands, but the memory of his crimes did not die with him, nor apparently did the aversion which the knowledge of these crimes aroused.

Finish Written On Gallows.

"It is too bad," said a local clergy man, "that there should be a fuss about Murrell's burial now, but it is natural, I suppose. Murrell was an arch enemy of society, but he has suffered for his crimes. The wages of sin is death, it has been truly said and Murrell is now dead. Why not let the finish that was written on the gallows be the last word.

Hunted as a fugutive across the continent, held in close confinement with special guards quartered outside his cell pending his execution, Murrell expiated his crime on the gallows on April 9 last, the last words on his lips being:

"Good luck and God bless you all. My time has come to part with this world."

And as he was shot into eternity a chaplain uttered the prayer:

"May God forgive you and have mercy upon you."

Reputation Too Notorious.

But Sidney Murrell, even though his death expiated the requirements of human justice, left behind him a reputation so notorious that it continues to arouse curiosity seekers, and it is because of this fact that those who would otherwise let him sleep in the burial ground of Pond Mills are disposed to agree with others, who do not think such a spot suitable for his grave.

When Murrell was hanged his body was turned over to his mother. Without funds with which to buy a lot in a public cemetery and with the sympathy of only those friends who knew her and who realized that, criminally inclined though her son was, she was not to blame, the sorrowing mother might have had to return the body to the public officials on the ground that she could not bury it had it not been for the kindness of a Mrs. Gilmore who knew the Murrell family for many years.

His Boyhood Friend.

Little Jimmy Gilmore and little Sidney Murrell had been playmates together in the days when the policeman passing his home was the friend of Sidney and when his favorite pleasure was to walk hand in hand to the corner with the big blue-coated officer and then run home to tell his mother of the great honor of it. These were days before "the cop" had become the sinister and forbidding creature he was to become to Murrell only a few years later, the days when neither Jimmy nor Sidney had ever heard the word bandit and knew of "bad men" only as persons with whom they never came and never wanted to come in contact.

The ways of Murrell and Gilmore, however, did not cross after they left school. Gilmore's life was that of the peaceful, quiet citizen until he died a few years ago. Murrell's life was that of the gangster, gunman and bandit. The newspaper readers of an entire continent know it well because during the past four years since the killing of the bank manager at Melbourne they have been told it over and over again in connection, with his arrest, his escape, the hunt for him through the United States, his recapture, his trial and his execution.

"Little Jimmy" To Her Still.

But to the mother of James Gilmore, his boyhood chum, Murrell continued to be "little Sid" and when he was executed her mother's heart went out to his mother and she approached her and said:

"Mrs. Murrell, you can bury your boy along with my boy if you wish."

Mrs. Murrel thankfully accepted the offer. Nobody in the locality knew of the arrangement and had it not been for the publicity in the daily papers it might never have become public knowledge. A little block of granite bearing the inscription "S. Murrell" was placed over the resting place of the slayer and it would not probably have been ever seen save by those searching for it had it not been for one or two who opposed the burial. Several feet from it and tending to minimize it or give it the appearance of a survey mark, is a big marblo block surmounted by an equine figure which the Gilmore family raised to the memory of James Gilmore.

One or two residents of Pont Mills with relatives buried in the cemetery, did, however, notice the new grave and they asked Mrs. Gilmore who it was that occupied the position next to her son.

"Just a young man," she would answer, "that Jimmie used to think a lot of in his school days."

Identity Disclosed.

But this did not suffice and trips of inspection were made and the identity of Murrell's grave was thus made public. The two graves, one a grassy mound and one still a rough scar, are only a stone's throw from the placid waters of the "Pond." Big spruce skirt the cemetery, but the surface of the little lake and the grassy edges are visible through the branches.

As the public learned where Murrell was buried they began in increasing numbers to visit the cemetery, until the notoriety of the spot became quite painful to residents, and regret was frequently expressed that the beautiful cemetery had become nothing but a resort of the curious.

The cemetery is the property of the Pond Mills Cemetery Association. It is owned, in a sense, by the community and is administered by a board of trustees. To them the protest was made that the Murrell burial was objectionable.

Were Not Consulted.

"We were not consulted," was the reply of the trustees made to this objection. "It may be that a plot holder can bury whom he pleases in the cemetery, but in any case the question should not be opened up now. There has been too much talk as it is."

But the protest although the feeling of most Pond Mills residents now is that it should be dropped, went further and a few days ago it was taken up by the Middlesex Grand Jury at the County Assizes.

The Grand Jury in its report, as a consequence, recommended that persons convicted of murder and executed should not be buried in private cemeteries. The wording of the report was not specific, but Sidney Murrell was the convicted slayer referred to. Angus Beatty, of Westminister Township, was a member of the Grand Jury, which presented the recommendation, and Angus Beatty is a trustee of the Pond Mills Cemetery Association. Angus Beatty was a consistent objector to the interment of Murrell here from the time of the burial up to the present.

Judge Concurs.

"I think you are quite right in this," was the remark of Justice Riddell as he expresed desire of forwarding the presentment to the Attorney-Generals' department.

What will be the result remains to be seen. It has been the ambition of Mrs. Murrell since the burial of her son, to erect a better monument over his grave, and to this end she had been working and saving. The cemetery authorities would have no objection to the monument, it is said, but it is now suggested that instead of using the money she is putting away for this purpose, Mrs. Murrell to allay the objection that has been raised at Pond Mills, may instead use it to purchase another grave for her son.

To bob or not to bob is a question just as vexing to the Indian maiden as it is to her pale-faced sister. J. C. DAVIDSON CASE IS AGAIN REMANDED

Further Evidence Taken In Charge Of Stealing From Cordova Mine.

In County Police Court this afternoon before Magistrate O. A. Langley, J. C. Davidson, charged with the theft of scrap machinery valued at between $5,000 and $10,000 from the Cordova Mines appeared, defended by J. C. Strickland, while Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C. acted for the Crown.

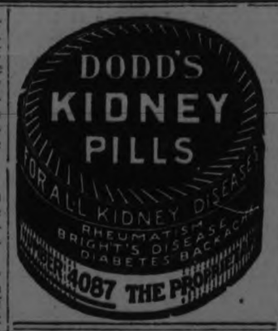
To the knowledge of the Company there had been no scrap or junk sold or shipped by the Company since 23rd June, 1923, when scrap worth $1,050 was sold to junk dealers by Mr. Peter Kirkyard, manager of the Company, evidence showed.

J. C. Davidson, hired by the Company as caretaker and paid by the month was allowed to collect rents from a number of houses about the mine and owned by the Company.

The Company was defunct at the last and about the only money coming in was that collected by Mr. Davidson and sent in. Besides being caretaker at the mines, Mr. Davidson operated an Auto Specialty Company where he made parts for cars.

Harry S. Moore an accountant of Toronto, who was formerly employed by this Company, said he had been employed by this Company in September of this year to go to the Cordova Mines to take stock and make an investigation. He said he did not take stock, but when to the station master at Marmora and asked him if he could look over his files. He was allowed to look over them and found that on February 9th, of this year, there was a bill of lading for a shipment made this year. He reported to the Company.

The accused was granted bail and will appear again before Magistrate Langley on Monday, October 27 at 2 o'clock when more evidence will be presented.



FOR THE NOTEBOOK.

A vernier condenser is necessary for sharp tuning.

Radio sets now range in price from $14 to $5000.

When a storage battery fails to take a charge, it is an indication that it needs to be overhauled at a battery service station.

Wire for the antenna should be a good conductor of electricity. Some good conductors are copper, phosphor bronze and aluminum.

Joints of an antenna should be first soldered and then wrapped with several layers of tinfoil and then a layer of water-proof tape.

One of the greatest hazards to good reception is a tin roof, and an antenna should be erected at least 10 feet above a roof of this kind.

PITY THE POOR BEGGAR!

LONDON Oct. 22 — (United Press).— An old man, while haired and shabbily dressed, was brought into Court at Birmingham charged with begging. He was fined the equivalent of about four dollars—which he paid in cash from a fat roll, showing at the same time a bank book with about $3,500 deposited to his credit. Then he dropped an English bank-note representing about $5 into the "poor box" of the court and strolled away with the observation that the begging business hasn't been so bad of late years; and if the law forces him hereafter to live upon the income from his investments—well, he'll just have to do it!

And Now Comes the Day to VOTE

Ontario's Only Safe Course is to Keep the Gate Closed Against Booze

Men and Women of Ontario:

On the morrow you have it in your power to do a great good for the Province and for yourselves. The ballots cast will be a mandate to your Government to do one of two things: Either

1—To hold fast to the fruits of years of temperance effort, crystallized in The Ontario Temperance Act, and to "strengthen" and "give active and vigorous enforcement" thereto; or

2—To go into the discredited business of selling intoxicating liquor to the people of Ontario as a beverage, thereby becoming the sales agent for brewer and distiller.

Weigh the issue calmly and face your responsibility squarely. Look beneath all camouflage, and let reason guide your actions in the polling booth on Thursday.

Do Not Re-Open the Flood Gates

The more accessible intoxicating liquor is, the more it will be drunk. The more liquor drunk, the more will the drink appetite be developed, and the crimes associated with liquor increased. Ontario, once cursed by the blight of liquor, is now protected from it. Thousands of families have found new happiness under the protection of The Ontario Temperance Act. Infinitely less drinking and drunkenness—infinitely more comfort and progress.

The only alternative is misnamed "Government Control", a system that does NOT produce "moderation", but does bring to our Province a system worse beyond compare than the open bar ever was; a law that puts the seal of the Government upon an evil that is no less a curse because it is in a nice "sealed package".

Booze will Vote to a Man—Fight it With Your Ballots

Every citizen who desires the best for the Province and who believes even a little bit in the O.T.A. is urged to get out on October 23rd and vote. The opponents of the Act, to the last elector, will be at the polls. No pretext or lame excuse will keep THEM away.

The defeat of the O.T.A. means DOLLARS to the liquor interests who are behind this effort for repeal. The defeat of the O.T.A. may mean disaster to your boy, your girl, your home, your business. What care the liquor interests for your home, your boy, your girl, your business, the moral good of your community, or personal liberty? They care only for the profits they can get out of their discredited business.

The booze traffic is doomed the world over. Take off your coat, roll up your sleeves, vote yourself and get out the last possible vote. Pile up such a majority that the booze trade will never again even whisper the word "repeal".

For the Honor of Old Ontario mark your ballot thus:

1	Are you in favour of the continuance of The Ontario Temperance Act?	X
2	Are you in favour of the sale as a beverage of beer and spirituous liquor in sealed packages under Government control?

SEEK REVISION MUNICIPAL LAW

Premier Ferguson Would Have Legislation That All Who Run May Read.

COMMITTEE BUSY.

TORONTO, October 22 (Canadian Press). — A clarified municipal law for the Province is the ambition which Premier Ferguson is desirous of achieving at the next session of the Ontario Legislature.

Already he has taken the initial steps in compassing such a purpose, having issued instructions to a committee which is to revise the Province's statutes, to concentrate immediately upon the Assessment and Municipal Acts, in the hope that suitable Bills may be drafted for submission to and ratification by the local House.

Municipal and Assessment Acts, which so largely dictate the administration of cities, towns and villages in Ontario, can no longer claim the status of simple legislation which all who run may read.

The desire of Premier Ferguson is to remedy this condition and to effect a consolidation of the Municipal and Assessment Acts which shall make them easy of interpretation. Having furnished such legislation, it is his intention to discourage any amendments to it until it shall have had a fair opportunity for demonstrating itself in practice.

The members of the committee who will perform the decennial revision of the Province's statutes were announced yesterday by Premier Ferguson as follows:

From the High Court Bench, Justices Ferguson, Kelly, Smith, and Middleton; from the County Court Bench, Judge Wallace, of Oxford County; representative of the viewpoint of municipalities, J. W. MacKay, of St. Thomas, editor of The Municipal World.

ROMPING PONIES

Riches Brought to Doncaster Through St. Leger Race.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—(Associated Press).—The famous St. Leger race, which was run recently at Doncaster in the north of England, is not only a big sporting event but one which from first to last has added not less than $5,000,000 in profits to the municipality of Doncaster.

Every year the St. Leger, which is to the people of the north country in early autumn days what the Derby is to Londoners at Whitsuntide, adds from $60,000 to $75,000 profits to Doncaster's receipts to lessen the taxpayers' burdens. This is because the Doncaster corporation owns the course.

Doncaster derives profit both directly and indirectly from the big race meet, which is the most drastic test of speed and staying power for the best three-year-olds of each season. Though never quite so large as the assemblage on Epsom Downs for Derby day, the St. Leger crowd usually exceeds 500,000.

covered from the economic blow they suffered during the inflation period, but the Socialist party, as such, also has measurably strengthened its internal organization and again commands a constantly growing and paying membership.

Of all parties the Socialists have been most consistent with respect to their position on the Dawes plan and with an improvement in labor conditions and the economic situation reflecting a gradual return to normal, the Moderate Radicals are experiencing less difficulty in weaning workers away from the lure of Bolshevism.

Through their rowdyism in the late Reichstag, the German Reds are declared to have forfeited a large number of their following in the ranks of disgruntled workers, and the Communists are generally believed to lack sufficient organization to constitute an important factor in the present campaign.

HISTORICAL FICTION HAS ITS ATTRACTION

Is Not History, But Interests Pupils and Others In Study Of History.

A friend of mine asked me a few days ago to recommend a good book by Sir Walter Scott as he was anxious to interest his children in that author's works. His request started a train of thought, and for a full half-hour after he had gone, I leaned back in my chair and pondered all the pros and cons that came to my mind in connection with the reading of historical fiction. When I reached the end of my cogitations, the pros were so far in front that the cons had become almost a negligible quantity.

Strangely enough, whilst I was thus engaged, my eyes, straying towards the mantelpiece alighted on a book with which I have been familiar for years, but to which, sad to relate, I have never attached that value which its very great merit demands. The title of the work is "A Guide to the Best Historical Fiction," and the editor of it is Dr. Ernest Baker at the present time Director of the University of London School of Librarianship and Lecturer in English in University College, London. It seemed to fit in so harmoniously with my musings that I forthwith took it down and engaged in a closer survey than I had yet made of its contents. That examination only served to confirm the opinion previously conceived that the reading of historical fiction was in the highest degree to be commended because of its power to interest pupils and others in the study of history.

Sticklers for exactitude claim that the anachronisms and garbling of facts which abound in many books of this description must prove a hindrance rather than a help to the student of history. A certain amount of weight may be attached to this but it is surely neutralized by the counter consideration that historical fiction is not history, and that for verification of this or that incident one must necessarily go to Government records or text-books.

As a matter of fact there are very few writers of this sort of novel who can be regarded as absolutely reliable. Just as, on the stage, every emotion, every phase, has to be accentuated in order to impart the sense of reality, so the historical novelist has to use his imagination in order to produce that colour which lights up the shadowy background and makes a clear picture of the past.

Dr. Baker's compendium is of especial value because it offers lists of books dealing with almost all countries of the known world. We are given in regular sequence titles of books relating to every century. A person desirous of gaining an intelligent knowledge of the progress of the world in relation to the arts of war and peace could very easily map out a course of reading from this volume. He would obtain a three-fold benefit thereby. First, he would experience the pleasure of reading interesting fiction; secondly, he would gain a knowledge of the lives and customs of his forefathers, no matter what country he hailed from; and, thirdly, he would be stirred to a probing for the truth, of which those histories so often regarded by him as a bane rather than a blessing, are the acknowledged custodians.

As a pendant to this short article, I would like to bring the claims of Stanley Weyman to the notice of readers. He is amongst the most accurate and painstaking of present-day novelists, and his historical romances are most interesting and enjoyable.

HOG PRICES BREAK.

Market Tuesday Off $2 From Previous Week's Price.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.— With demand so slow that more than 30,000 hogs were left over unsold Tuesday at the Union Stock Yards, closing prices on hogs were $1.50 to $2.00 lower than Monday of last week. This is one of the most severe price declines in years.

The bulk of the hogs sold in Chicago yesterday brought around $9.25. Many sold around $9.00.

Everett C. Brown, president of the Chicago live stock exchange, said that commission men were urgently advising the holding back of pig and hog shipments during the remainder of the week. He predicted a sharp reaction from the break in prices if the country shippers would do this.

NEW VESSELS FOR TRIANGULAR RUN

The Canadian Pacific is adding two other vessels to its already large fleet of steamships, the Princess Kathleen, recently christened by Lady Mount Stephen at the Clydebank yards of John Brown and Company, and destined for service on the Pacific Coast triangular run—Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle, and the Princess Marguerite which is being fitted in the same yards for the same service. The photograph reproduced above shows the Princess Kathleen on the ways just prior to launching. This vessel is scheduled for delivery in December of this year, and the Princess Marguerite for February next.

Both of the new steamers are twin-screw, oil burning vessels with a capacity for 2,000 miles and a speed of 22 knots. They have been specially designed for sea steadiness and are most commodious. Night accommodation has been arranged for 325 first class passengers, and there is day accommodation for over one thousand. All modern electrical conveniences have been installed, and special attention has been given to the design of the spacious public rooms—sitting, writing, observation, smoking, dining, library and verandah. The vessels will be placed into immediate service upon delivery at the Pacific Coast.

GERMANS HAPPY WHEN INVADERS GO HOMEWARD

Evacuation of Dortmound Continued Throughout the Night and To-day.

MAIDENS WEEP.

Affectionate Farewells To-day—Unbounded Rejoicing To-morrow.

DORTMOUND, Germany, Oct. 22nd—(United Press).—Throughout the night, by the light of roaring blast furnaces, French troops were on the march out of Dortmound. Dawn found the evacuation of this important centre in full swing, camions and field pieces rumbling through the cobble stone streets while curious German citizens peered from behind window blinds and many could scarcely repress cheers. Dortmound, the first large Rhur centre to be evacuated will be cleared of enemy troops by Thursday morning.

Forlorn Maidens

Wesel, another city of the occupied area seized by French and Belgians nearly two years ago, was also evacuated to-day.

There the burgomaster with difficutly repressed the joy of the inhabitants—fearful lest some untoward demonstration might cause a change of mind on the part of the withdrawing troops.

Throughout the Ruhr, the departure of the blue clad soldiers who have been billetted in towns and cities and become familiar sights since early 1923 was hailed as the dawn of a new era. The French have ordered all occupied mines, customs offices and the like returned to their owners by October 28th.

There is no doubt that the evacuation of the Rhur has begun in earnest.

Scenes here this worning were of martial but friendly activity. Little pyramids of guns in the square and soldiers in full marching equipment sitting on packs awaiting the bugle call to fill in for the trek to the rail way, was the sight that greeted early risers. The troops appeared fat and well fed and there were not a few German maidens with tearful faces, and here and there an affectionate farewell.

UNEMPLOYMENT DOWN LABORITES REJOICE

Rowdyism and Heckling In British Campaign Exceeds Previous Record.

(By Lloyd Allen, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, October 22. — Undaunted by the prospect of continued rowdyism and heckling, which exceed in bitterness similar disturbances of recent election campaigns, the leaders of Britain's three political parties continued the intensive speaking campaigns to-day.

Premier MacDonald addressed meetings in his own constituency — where the Conservatives and Liberals are ridiculing the Russian Treaty, and predicting that they will defeat MacDonald and win his seat for a Liberal opponent.

Labour leaders were jubilant today when the unemployment figures showed 5,375 fewer jobless men and women than on the last check on 13th October.

This is the first decrease in unemployment since June.

David Lloyd-George, speaking at Haverforrest, continued to tongue-lash the Government, despite the interruptions and threats of the Labour hecklers, who kept up a stentorian chant of "liar," "liar."

CHURCH SUPPER AT LAKEFIELD

Anniversary Entertainment Of Presbyterian Church —Peterboro Talent Assisted.

GOOD PROGRAMME.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 21.—The anniversary supper and entertainment of the Presbyterian church was held on Monday evening, the supper being served in the church and the concert held in the church. The supper, which was served from 5 to 8 o'clock was a bountiful repast with an abundance of good things well served by the young people of the church.

At exactly eight o'clock Rev. P. L. Jull called the large audience to order and in a brief address expressed his pleasure at the success of the anniversary, both on Sunday and Monday, due in a great measure to the team work of the people of the congregation, and hoped that the community might be better for it.

Mrs. H. E. Connelly, of Peterborough, made her first appearance before a Lakefield audience and made a decided hit, all her numbers being encored. It is safe to venture that Mrs. Connelly will be asked to return to Lakefield at a later date.

Three winsome lassies made their first appearance at this entertainment and received an ovation. Miss Daisy Wilson of Young's Point, sang very sweetly and Misses Ruth Jull and Evelyn Grant in their piano duet showed real talent.

All the numbers were well rendered and were appreciated to the full by the audience, each performer giving of his or her best and finding a ready response in the sympathetic audience.

Apropos of Mrs. Connelly's recitation, "Should Women Propose," the chairman said that he was now in the eighth year of his ministry in Lakefield and that this present year had far surpassed all the rest in regard to weddings and if all those which he was told he might expect materialized, it would be better than all the previous years combined. The speaker was not prepared to state the cause of this, but appreciated the reality.

The ladies of the congregation will have a 15 cent social on Tuesday evening in the school room, to which all are invited.

The programme is as follows:

HIGH ROMANCE BY BRITISHER

M. P. Shiel's "Lord of the Sea" Revised in American Edition.

REVIEW OF BOOKS

Quite the most amazing personality to be introduced to American readers in many a decade is M. P. Shiel, the eccentric Britisher, whose "Lord of the Sea" has just been revised into an American edition by Knoof after kicking around for some 14 years.

Shiel is as fascinating as any of his fiction people.

It is his custom to run several miles before breakfast each morning, though he is 59. He is fanatic on the question of health, making genius synonymous with nimbleness, health, strength, youth, interest, consciousness, life. He boasts that he never has suffered a pain.

He has a veritable mania for scaling the mountains he encounters, however steep or treacherous.

In his youth he mastered languages and now can play upon the English language as a musician masters the technique of a violin or piano. He believes in word harmony and tone, as in music, and applies his genius to his pages with effects that are astounding.

Also he studied deeply mathematics, statical sciences and chemistry. His interests have no bounds, leaping from toxicology to astronomy.

What such a man can do to a tale is difficult to imagine, and yet his book is high romance. He has long been overlooked, even in his native land where Hugh Walpole has been shouting his genius, an echo of which reached the American Van Wyhten who now plays town crier.

Walpole announces unqualifiedly that "he is the best romantic novelist writing in English."

And "Lord of the Sea" merits all the fanfare.

Will James is a cowboy, but also he is an artist. In his own cowpuntry vernacular and with his own sketches of bronchos and steers and cow punchers, James has done an epic thing, in its way. He analyzes his scenes and pictures them in the plain idiom of the people. There is no attempt at false grand gesturing and his final philosophy is: "There never was a horse that couldn't be rode or a man that couldn't be throwed." The book is "Cowboys North and South" (Scribners).

Terser comments from jurors follow:

"Talk" (Harpers)—Emanie N. Sachs, one known as the "child wonder of the suffrage movement," tells a very well written story of a small town girl crushed between the opinions of two generations."

"Cargoes for Cruesoes" is Grant Overton's annual entertaining round-up of books and authors put out jointly by Appleton, Doran and Little Brown.

"The Friend of Diggeldy Dan" (Little, Brown) is another high-caliber children's book by Edwin Norwood, erstwhile press agent for Barnum & Bailey's circus who spins fascinating yarns of circust animals and folk.

Harold McGrath's "The Green Stone" (Doubleday, Page) kept one juror up until two in the morning with mystery and romance.

Roland Pertwee writes of adventure in far better style than most. "Treasure Trail" (Knopf) deals with a swindle that carries on in a far-away isle.

Another "love strain" type is "Youth Wins" (Dodd, Mead), by Muriel Hine. She writes smoothly and agreeably.

Kate Douglas Wiggins has a series of quite Wigginsy tales in "Creeping Jenny" (Houghton, Mifflin).

BEAUTIFY IT WITH "DIAMOND DYES"

CHURCHILL HAS HOPE IN LEAGUE

Only Instrument By Which War Can Be Averted, Britisher Declares.

MAN IS COMBATIVE

The Right Hon. Winston Spencer Churchill has written for the current history of Nash's Pall Mall Magazine of London an article in which he pictures ruin, verging on utter annihilation, which another war might bring to mankind, and pleads the case of the League of Nations as the only safeguard of the world to-day.

Mr. Churchill, who was First Lord of the British Admiralty at the beginning of the World War and through nearly two years of its progress and who at other times held the portfolio of Secretary of State for War and other offices in various British Governments, is credited with considerable authority for a description which he gives of some appalling weapons of future wars.

His article for most of its length reviews the combative character of mankind, from its beginning to the present day. "The story of the human race," he says, "is war. Except for brief and precarious interludes, there has never been peace in the world; and before history began, murderous strife was universal and unending. But up to the present time the means of destruction at the disposal of man have not kept pace with his ferocity. * * * So on the balance the life-forces kept a steady lead over the forces of death, and gradually tribes, villages, and Governments were evolved.'

To-Day the Most Destructive

It was not until the dawn of the present twentieth century that war attained the status of becoming the "potential destroyer of the human race," Mr. Churchill states, and after reviewing the manner in which the entire peoples of whole nations became involved in the struggle, and subject to all its terrors, just as were the fighting forces, he says of the future:

" 'Wars,' said a distinguished American to me last Summer, 'are fought with steel; weapons may change, but steel remains the core of all modern warfare. France has got the steel of Europe and Germany has lost it. Here, at any rate, is an element of permanency.'

" 'Are you sure?" I asked, 'that wars of the future will be fought with steel?'

"A few weeks later I talked with a German.

" 'What about aluminum' he replied. 'Some think,' he said, 'that the next war will be fought with electricity.'

"And on this a vista opens out of electrical rays which could paralize the engines of a motor car, could claw down aeroplanes from the sky and conceivably be made destructive of human life or human vision.

"Then there are explosives. Have we reached the end? Has science turned its last page on them? May there not be methods of using explosive energy incomparably more intense than anything heretofore discovered? Might not a bomb no bigger than an orange be found to possess a secret power to destroy a whole block of building— nay, to concentrate the force of a thousand tons of cordite and blast a township at a stroke? Could not explosives even of the existing type be guided automatically in flying machines by wireless or other rays, without a human pilot, in ceaseless procession upon a hostile city, arsenal, camp or dockyard?"

Of present tendencies he says:

"Let it not be though for a moment that the danger of another explosion in Europe is passed. For the time being the stupor and the collapse which followed the World War insured a sullen passivity, and the horror of war, its carnage and its tyrannies, have sunk into the soul, have dominated the mind of every class and in every race. But the causes of war have been in no way removed; indeed, they are, in some respects, aggravated by the so-called peace treaty and the reactions follow ing thereupon."

League the "Hope of Sanity."

Mr. Churchill pictures Europe today as containing "two mighty branches of the European family who will never rest content with their existing situation. Russia," he says, "stripped of her Baltic provinces, will brood incessantly on the wars of Peter the Great," while Germany, with her masses of population maintaining "from one end to the other an intense hatred against France, dreams of a war of liberation or revenge."

The article concludes:

"Against the gathering but still distant tempest the League of Nations, deserted by the United States scorned by Soviet Russia, flouted by Italy, distrusted equally by France and Germany, raises feebly and faithfully its standards of sanity and hope.

"Its structure, airy and unsubstantial, framed of shining but too often visionary idealism, is in its present form incapable of guarding the world from its dangers and protecting man kind from itself.

"Yet it is through the League of Nations alone that the path to safety and salvation can be found. To sustain and aid the League of Nations is the duty of all. To reinforce it and bring it into vital and practical relation with actual world -politics by sincere agreements and understandings between the great powers, between the leading races, should be the first aim of all who wish to spare their children torments and disasters compared to which those we have suffered will be but a pale preliminary."

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

by Shirley Sharon

The new straight silhouette must fit so closely at the hip that one sees the outline of the figure in walking, but it may be relieved by tunics, scarfs, etc.

For several seasons Paris has been saying, "the silhouette is straight and narrow." It sounds the same each season but actually there is an important difference in degree. This year to be smart the narrow frock must fit so closely at the hip that one can just sit down. If the unbelted dress is at all easy it looks baggy and clumsy. It must be narrow from hip to hem. If the fitting defines the lower back too much the plaited tunic hides your curves and keeps your silhouette straight. It is especially smart for kasha, silk alpaca, light-weight cashmere, etc.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Dear Mr. Editor:

In a controversy such as is going on at the present time where the interest of the public is at stake against a great Octopus like the Brewers and Distillers Assocation of which the so called Purity League is a representative agency the true character of men most interested in the business is likely to be shown. Since the temperance people have overwhelmed the arguments of Government control with facts showing the enormity of the liquor traffic under that system wherever tried Burnham has increased his efforts at misrepresentation and vilification. Why is it necessary to insult and defame the character of the clergy by quoting cases of newspaper accounts of men who dishonored their professed calling by acts which proved them not genuine, just as J. H. Burnham is now and for years has been; pretending he is the interpreter of the bible while all the time the brewers are having him so absorbed in doing the devil's work that he occasionally throws discretion to the winds and attacks the christians, especially their leaders and their works. This is absolutely unmanly. I must say his writing are ridiculous and untruthful. I have a letter here from Rev. W. A. Cameron, Toronto, emphatically denying any such meaning as J. H. Burnham attributed to his remarks on militarism, as applied to prohibition.

I am glad to note that the "Mail and Empire" which no one can claim to be a "dry" paper states that the issue is between "wet" and "dry", that Government Control is not Prohibition, and, as newspaper investigators show that Government Control increases bootlegging, drunkeness, poverty, taxation, even in Quebec, a man who votes for Government Control with those facts before him must surely be badly in need of a drink. Surely business is bad enough without adding to it alcoholic misery. Read the Star of 16th October for proofs. Readers of the Globe would see the pathetic appeal of a brewer to a business man who, he thought, was favorable to the wets asking for assistance in this campaign because the O.T.A. had put so many breweries out of commission that they had to fight to keep what is left. On every hand proofs arise of the great good the O.T.A. with such enforcement as was given it has done. What may we expect when bootleggers are pailed instead of fined as Mr. Ferguson promises. The Whitby Gazette and Chronicle claims that ninety per cent. of the press of Ontario are for O.T.A. The Montreal Star and Standard, leading newspapers called for a clean up of the horrible conditions caused by drink under Government Control. The pictures of Vancouver, Edmonton, Winnipeg and Calgary are luridly described in the press. In a letter to the Star a writer accused it of interviewing only dry.

The Star replied by giving the number of wets and official including police, magistrates, etc. it interviewed.

Read it in Saturday's "Voice of the People". But in answer to Mr. Burnham's latest against Raney and Drury let me state a case in point of interest to Peterboro. When I lived more than two hundred miles from here in a contest such as this for local prohibition the wets sent up an advertisement stating "that the conditions of Campbellford under "Local Option" were something awful, more drunkeness among all classe of people with its attendant evils, and a proof twenty-six names of temperance men were given who would never vote again for "Local Option." We wired the Reeve. He answered "Local Option working splendidy. Liquor will never come back to Campbellford. Names given you are all wets such as ex-hotel men, hotel stablemen and other wets."

All we had to do to win was to show up their lies just as official and reliable reports show them up now, the same crowd, the same old misrepresentations. My father at one time sold liquor when it was respectable but my father couldn't see the respectability even of legal selling, so quit and became the enemy of "alcohol".

I am interested in the progress of Peterboro.

Yours truly,
A. H. ALLEN.

The Editor of Examiner:

Sir,—Although you have probably read Mr. Henderson's letter and found it agreeable to your viewpoint or otherwise, I would nevertheless suggest its insertion (partially at any rate) as clearly showing up the peculiar situation the voters of the Province are placed in.

Yours truly,
WM. C. THOMSON,
Organist St. Luke's Church.

Bootlegging and the O.T.A.

To Editor Mail and Empire.

Sir,—So much has been written about the evil of bootlegging and the desirability of ridding the Province of this crime that I cannot refrain from setting forth a few facts, which should be understood by all electors before October 23rd. All decent people are agreed that in any case the bootlegger must go. Your own leading article recently pointed this out quite forcibly; the point is, how to effect this desirable end. Will the permission to purchase liquor as a beverage secure even a reduction in the temptations to this type of wrongdoing? Let us look fairly at the question and see.

First, it will be admitted that the bootlegger is simply in the game for the money in it. He is not concerned with politics or parties, but is solely a moneygrubber. Anything, then, that reduces his profits will tend to force him out of business—that much all will accede, I think.

Now, sir, I have on the highest authority (an authority I am prepared to disclose to you if you or any responsible reader so desires) the statement that the liquor at present dispensed for medicinal purposes at $20 per gallon costs exactly 98c to make—the balance of $19.02 being absorbed in taxes—almost entirely Federal taxes and duties.

Liquor that is made for export purposes, or imported under bond for exportation, however, is not subjected to this enormous taxation, and it is this fact that creates the bootlegger's opportunity, and not prohibition or O.T.A. or any other single thing.

Liquor is made by the breweries and sold for exportation to some foreign port, and once on the water is smuggled back into Ontario to supply the bootlegger's customers at less than the cost of the Government-made liquor, or rather than the legitimately obtained liquor.

Now, it is clear that to repeal the O.T.A. will not affect this situation one iota, the cost of manufacture will not go up nor the taxation come down under Government control as far as alcoholic beverages are concerned, so that there will still be a margin of $19.02 per gallon for the bootlegger's profits. It is safe to say he will not go out of business while he can secure those dollars.

This situation can only be remedied, not from Toronto, but from Ottawa, by the imposition of heavy export taxes or the abolition of all or most of the taxes or duties, but in the latter case the money thus lost would have to be raised by other means.

However your readers vote, let us all understand what we are doing.

Vigorous enforcement with imprisonment for any form of bootlegging will check crime even if it isn't eliminated, even as thieving is not eliminated entirely. We can rely upon a strong Government to uphold its laws and surely the people of Ontario will support it in its efforts.

Yours, etc.,
COLIN E. HENDERSON.

Mr. John Clipdale held a sale of his household goods on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Ridyard and daughter Vivian of Detroit, Mich., motored to the village on Sunday and spent a couple of days with the latter's father, Mr. W. Rogers.

The engagement is announced of Miss Myrtle McLaren of Havelock and formerly of Norwood, and Mr. Warden Brown, son of Mrs. Brown and the late Maxwell Brown of Dummer.

The death occured on Monday morning, October 20, of Mrs. John Corneil at her home on Alma street.

Name Alone Will Tell Anatole France's Fame

TOURS, France, Oct. 21.—The opinion of many of the friends of the late Anatole France that his name alone on the bronze plate on his coffin would be sufficiently descriptive of the fame and literary glory he had achieved, led to a decision to inscribe upon that plate "Anatole France, 1844-1924."

STATISTICIAN SEES PROSPERITY IN COLD FIGURES HE GLEANED ON TRIP FROM COAST TO COAST

R. Hanna Tells Chamber of Commerce Low Point Past and Business Recovering.

HALL WAS CROWDED.

Peterborough Organization Opened Winter Season With Brilliant Lecture.

As he reviewed in an impressively analytical manner the business conditions of Canada as he had seen them from coast to coast, I. R. Hanna, editor in Babson's Statistical Organization, last night led his audience in the Chamber of Commerce to a point where the forest of uncertainty as to business recovery opened out in a vista of prosperity. Dealing in the field of market analysis, Mr. Hanna first told of the systems adopted in feeling the pulse of business and then explained the application of the data obtained to the diagnosis of present business conditions and the forecast of the future trend.

There was no blatant talk of "the golden era," or futile endeavour to declare the present a perfection of trade conditions, but a coldly impersonal stating of facts from which conservative and accurate deductions might be made. And these facts, Mr. Hanna pointed out, indicate that "seventy per cent. of the period of depression has been accomplished, and we are over the low point. Without any question, we have gone down to rock bottom and are now building upward on a very firm foundation."

The occasion of the address, which will be remembered by the members as one of the most interesting and instructive in the history of the organization, was the first general meeting of the Chamber of Commerce for this year, presided over by J. Wells Fraser. The audience taxed the seating capacity of the large hall, and the measure of the interest taken in the subject could be judged by the attention with which the speaker's remarks were followed.

A telegram from Leon Frazer, Secretary of the Chamber, intimated that he is putting Peterborough on the map at the convention of Secretaries of Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade at Washington, D.C. In his absence, W. R. Morris, Treasurer of the Chamber, acted as Secretary.

TREND OF THE TIMES.

NEW BUILDING was this year 18 per cent. below last year's figures, but this year's building was of factories and plants rather than dwellings.

BANK CLEARINGS were 2 per cent. above last year's figures.

FAILURES were 26 per cent. below last year's figures.

IMMIGRATION was this year the greatest since 1914, with the exception of a slight bulge in 1920.

EXPORTS were the greatest since 1920.

IMPORTS were lower than last year.

CANADIAN EXCHANGE is at par.

STOCK MARKETS are healthy compared with previous years.

These are facts presented by Mr. Hanna, and in commenting upon them he stressed the fact of Canadian exchange reaching parity in trade with United States. "I believe it is there to stay," he declared, amid applause. "Perhaps there is no other one thing that so well indicates the stability of the Dominion."

With reference to the building, the speaker said this is a fundamental barometer, but one that follows tardily on general business conditions. New buildings being off 18 per cent. does not mean that business is poor. "New building is like measles; it is catching, and in Victoria and Los Angeles it has reached the extreme. The bright spot in this year's situation is the number of industrial buildings that are being put up in place of the dwellings of last year."

The best barometers of business conditions are the boot and shoe industry and the stock market, which indicate the general trend in the cycle of trade. Bank clearings and failures show healthy signs, and the liquidation point is past. The findings of the statistical organization are based upon the theory that for every period of expansion there must be an equal and opposite period of deflation.

Mr. Hanna instanced the observations of the past ten years, in which it was apparent that Canada is not so extreme as United States. In 1922 and 1923 there was a spurt in United States and many business men, thinking the good old days were back again and that they could charge and receive any price they liked, were disappointed. In this period, Canadian conservatism was apparent.

At the present time, while United States has not more than 60 per cent. completed the period of deflation following a similar inflation, Canada is fully 10 per cent. ahead on the way to normalcy. There are not the violent fluctuations in Canada that occur in United States, and business men are better satisfied when business keeps near the x-y line that indicates normal conditions.

Advantage in Crops.

There is a great difference in the handling of the crops in the two countries, the speaker pointed out. In Canada the surplus is exported, and the provinces being practically self supporting there is no great trade within the Dominion.

This has made Canada the greatest exporter of wheat in the world, pushing the United States to third place, with every prospect of leaving the world market altogether.

In the United States, with its great home consumption, the sale of wheat simply means a transfer of wealth from one point in the country to another, without bringing in new wealth. "Canada," he said, "with a wheat crop that commands high prices and runs to large quantities, is ahead of the game."

Reviewing in detail the agricultural and industrial situation prevailing throughout the Dominion at the present time, Mr. Hanna analysed the situation as reported in the authentic records of his organization.

Quebec this year had a good crop compared with 1923, and with the difference in prices there should be prosperity in the agricultural sections of that province.

In Ontario, the second largest crop in history has just been harvested, and the farmer will have at least 25 per cent. more money than last year.

In the Maritimes the crop situation is not nearly so good.

In British Columbia they lay great stress on lumbering, mining and fishing, but in the Peace River country they claim they have the greatest agricultural section in Canada.

Their fruit crop is low this year, but the difference in prices will make their income about equal to last year's.

Improvements in the marketing system there will enable all of the crop to be harvested instead of lost as before when half was allowed to waste.

Mr. Hanna waxed enthusiastic in speaking of the Kootenay Valley as an orchard country, but said a great deal of capital is needed to carry the beginner over the unproductive period during the growth o. trees to the fruit-bearing period.

Business is quiet in British Columbia just now. The power of the Orientals is being felt through farms and stores and trade war is waged on the older settlers.

Tourist Trade.

Victoria has had a very successful tourist trade this year, and their bank clearings were double last year what they were in 1922, and this year they again increased, due directly to the tourist traffic.

A committee went through the Western States of the Union selling the idea of vacation in Victoria with great success.

In Alberta there is a very great division between the southern and the northern parts. The coal miners who are on strike, worked on the farms during the summer and the province did not need to import the great amount of labor required in previous years.

The farmer in Alberta has learned that he must depend upon diversified farming, and considerable improvement may be expected in every line as a result. Chickens, butter and cream are now bringing in big proceeds hitherto unthought of. Many farmers are being transferred from the southern grazing areas to the north.

While there are many vacant stores in Calgary, the conservative business man is doing a good business. In the north conditions are very much better.

In Saskatchewan, business is down to rock-bottom, crops being very poor in nearly all localities. The present price is helping, and tales of farmers being in distress refer more to those who were content to sow on stubble rather than ious than in previous years and did ious than in previous year, and did not nearly reach the proportions reported in the United States. The feeling in Saskatchewan is not bright, but the people are getting down to business and expect to pull through.

In Manitoba the grain crop is grading low and many farmers are deserting the co-operative clubs to sell surreptitiously through friends. Business in Winnipeg seems to be on a sound basis. The crop in Manitoba this year is $12,000,000 higher than last year.

Unemployment Acute.

Unemployment in Winnipeg and Vancouver is acute, with thousands of men walking the streets. It is impossible to walk on the streets of Vancouver without being asked for the price of a meal. In these two cities the problem this winter will be very great. Eight hundred men a day have been leaving for the East.

The greatest problem Canada has is to get these men settled so that they will develop Canada.

Co-operation among farmers is needed more, and is being realized in the West. Formerly every farmer thought he had to do his threshing in the same week as all his neighbors, but now the spirit of helping one another is gaining force. If this movement toward co-operation can be developed it will mean much to the West.

It will take time for this crop money to filter through, but the bankers and big business men of the Dominion are optimistic and fully believe in the future of the country, Mr. Hanna said. Everywhere there is a note of conservatism, but we are over the low point. Seventy per cent. of the period of depression has been accomplished, and the bottom of hard times is the beginning of prosperity. Without any question we have gone down to rock bottom and are building on a very firm foundation.

There is not now the spread between farm products and manufactured goods, but the farmers are still restive. Much might be accomplished by more co-ordination between the eastern manufacturer and the natural home market in the West.

"We do not expect a boom but there is no reason why there should not be a steady improvement in business during the next year."

Dawes Plan Insufficient.

Mr. Hanna said, in reply to a question from W. R. Morris, that the boot and shoe industry is improving only slightly at present. This is one of the first businesses to re-act to prosperity or depression.

Debit balances to individual accounts in banks indicate immediate business conditions much more accurately than bank clearings, but have not been available until this year.

In answer to another question, Mr. Hanna said Canada is seeking and obtaining world-wide markets. In his opinion, Europe will be some time in recovering, as the Dawes plan is no panacea for the recovery of an impoverished continent.

J. T. Braund asked whether transportation is costing more than a fair share of production.

Mr. Hanna said the unproductive distances in Canada militate against low freight rates. Electrification would reduce hauling expenses, but the initial cost is tremendous. There is great justification for the rates as they are now.

Mr. Braund said railroad labor has not taken the same drop that other labor has had, and Mr. Hanna pointed out that this is due to the strong unionization of the workers.

Vote of Thanks.

G. A. Gillespie, in moving a vote of thanks, remarked on the benefit derived from the address of the evening. He pointed out the applicability of watching the cycle of good and bad business periods to his own company and others.

J. Hamilton, seconder, expressed appreciation of the address, which, he said, would be beneficial to every business man who heard it.

A Fool To Be Married Says Foot-Loose Youth To Excuse His Roaming

As an example of the spirit that animates many in Canada to the detriment of the best interest of the Dominion, I. R. Hanna last night told this incident in his address at the Chamber of Commerce.

While halted at a station in the west, a young man boarded the train and took his seat beside Mr. Hanna. Later several newly married couples climbed aboard, and Mr. Hanna remarked to his seat companion: "It seems as thought that may be Canada's best crop this year."

"Yes", the young man replied, "d..... fools. They will get back from the honeymoon and he will have to stay at home on the farm. What chance has he? I'm foot-loose; I can go wherever there is a job."

Mr. Hanna remarked that this is a problem that should be met and overcome, this problem of anchoring the migratory population. "It's larger than any of us think, and placing these wanderers permanently where they would settle, produce, and build up the country would be more valuable than bringing more people into the country, although we need both."

The Affair at Flower Acres

Finley went to his room, but he did not at once begin to pack his things. He sat down by a window and gazed out over the flowers to the sea and sky, and let his thoughts grow calmer and more practical.

Was there no way he could help Nan? No task would be too hard, no service too difficult, if he could but make up for the trouble and annoyance he had caused her.

For he had small doubt but that Raynor would wreak on his wife the anger he must feel toward himself, Finley.

A long time he thought and sighed as he pondered.

And then, instead of packing his kit and starting for the train, he bathed and dressed and presented himself on the western terrace just as tea was being brought there.

Finley did not look at his host or speak to him, but as there were present most of the family, and a few neighbors, this omission was not noticed.

"Oh, yes, then you may," she beamed. "After I pass the buns we'll talk it over."

Finley had seated himself, not near Nan, but where he could watch her. In fact, he was beside Miss Mattie, who was more than ready to entertain him.

And it was during one of her long and rambling discourses that Finley, watching Nan, again saw that quick, furtive motion as of dropping something in Raynor's teacup.

"Saccharine, sure," he thought.

"She can fool him, then," he thought. "But seems to me she could fool him oftener and better than she does."

Tea over, they lingered on the terrace. Another gorgeous sunset was under way.

"Rarely does that old sun get a chance to sink to rest in such a bed of beauty," said Eva Turner, who was always loquacious at tea time.

"There she goes!" cried Dolly, as the last of the great flaming disc dropped out of sight. "And I must go, too, or mother will blow me up sky-high. Who'll walk to the bridge with me?"

"I will," said Orry, who was a born cavalier, and likewise fond of gay little Dolly.

But they tarried until the other guests had taken leave, and then, as they sauntered across the lawn, down toward the bridge over the tiny brook that separated the two estates, the sinister dusk was creeping in from the darkening horizon.

"I'm jealous of your other Prince," Kent bantered, and Dolly said, seriously, "He isn't really, mine he's Nan's."

"Nonsense! What has Nan to do with Princes?"

"Oh, it doesn't matter that she's married to that old hobgoblin. I mean that can't stop her loving her Prince."

"Don't, Dolly; it isn't nice for a little girl to say things like that."

"Nice or not—it's true talk. You see, Nan ought to have married Mr. Finley in the first place."

"Hush, Dolly," Kent spoke sternly. "Nan's my sister, and I forbid you to gossip about her."

"All right, Orry, I won't. Miss Mattie isn't your sister, is she? May I talk about her?"

"Yes, if you like," and the young man smiled.

"Well, she's a meddlesome Mattie. What do you s'pose she's doing now? She's looking down here at us!"

The two were on the bridge now, the little rustic affair that added picturesqueness to the scene. Dolly had turned and was looking back toward the house.

"What sharp eyes you have," Kent said, looking, too. "I can scarcely see her. The dark comes quickly."

"Yes." Dolly looked at her wrist-watch. "It's just seven o'clock. I must run. Goodby, Orry."

"Goodby." Kent said, looking at his own watch, and starting off toward the house.

Meddlesome Mattie had been looking out her window at the two strolling across the lawn, but there was no more to it than idle curiosity.

It was her habit to watch everything and everybody, in hope of learning something she was not meant to know.

From her own room, with the windows all open, she had heard her brother leave the terrace and go into the sun parlor—that was doubtless to avoid the dampness.

She had heard Malcolm Finley, at the same time, leave the terrace and go into the house, walking through the rear hall, and out on the east veranda. She had listened intently but didn't hear Nan follow him—a distinct disappointment to Miss Mattie.

Mr. Goddard, she knew, was in his own room. And Eva Turner was bustling about, now in her bedroom, then on the stairs, then to the kitchen and back again—of course, intent upon her dietary duties.

Despairing of any further sounds of interest, Miss Mattie snapped on her lights and looked at her clock. It was five minutes to seven then, time to begin to dress for dinner. And then, though not listening intently, Miss Mattie's ears were startled by the sound of a single shot.

Indeed, at first she didn't recognize it as a shot. So often a supposed shot had been a blow-out or a burst tire, that now, when it was really a shot, she naturally thought it was something else. For a moment no sounds followed, and then various light footsteps could be heard below.

Still unthinking of tragedy, Miss Mattie stepped out into the hall, and, though hall and stairs were as yet unlighted, she felt her way to the banister rail and started slowly down the stairs.

When half way down she could discern a white figure standing in the door between the hall and the sun parlor, but as she went on, the figure, which she knew to be that of Eva Turner, went through the doorway and the next instant the lights of the sun parlor were flashed on.

Miss Mattie scurried the rest of the way down and peered through the hall door into the sun room.

On the floor lay her brother in an ungainly heap, near him stood Malcolm Finley, an automatic pistol in his hand, and by the door, her hand still on the light switch, stood Eva Turner.

She was not looking at Finley, but in the opposite direction, toward the west door of the sun room.

A DEMONSTRATION OF PECULIAR INTEREST

The Westinghouse Electric Range Shown In Action and Its Principal Features Explained at Grant & Thorpe's.

A demonstration of real interest is going on at Grant and Thorpe's where the Westinghouse Electric Range is being shown in operation and its many exclusive features explained all this week. About one of the first things shown is the removable elements, both on top and in the oven. They simply plug in the same as an electric iron or toaster, making any repair a simple matter. This also discloses the double coated enamel seamless interior of the oven, which can be stripped in a moment for washing out if required. The way in which the current is reduced to half, when less heat is required, is also an exclusive Westinghouse feature. The outer elements are cut off entirely, leaving the center with full strength heat on, so that, with reduced current, a smaller vessel can be given quick heat without waste. The stove top is a nice clean enamel finish, of an attractive gray shade. Switches are turned on with an individual fuse just below it, so that should a fuse burn out, it is a simple matter for any lady to find which one it was and renew it without the delay and expense of sending for an electrician.

The lady in charge very pleasantly explains the different features, and her talk and demonstration of cooking form a profitable break in a shopping tour for any lady contemplating the installation of one of these modern kitchen conveniences.

THE O.T.A. OR GOV'T SALE

ARE YOU

"FOR" OR "AGAINST"

TO THE CITIZENS OF PETERBORO

The time has come when we must decide by our ballots whether or not Ontario is to continue to have the O.T.A.—strengthened and improved—or the government sale of liquor.

The issue is fraught with such tremendous importance it is desirable that every citizen should vote. Only in this way will the government be able to determine the real mind of the people.

EVERY QUALIFIED CITIZEN SHOULD VOTE!

The indifferent citizen is the cause of 50 p.c. of our Municipal and Government misdeeds—for his voice is not heard, his decisions are never rendered.

The indifferent citizen is the bane of all democratic institutions. He is the force that if alert and active would help to solve many problems of Government to the right end. As it is, he is the non-exploding cylinder, useless in public matters, and a drag on the whole machinery of social betterment, and political progress.

INVESTIGATE! THINK! ACT!

Don't be a shirker or a nonentity to-morrow. Look facts in the face. Let reason and conscience be your guide. Don't let foolish sentiment or self gratifying appetite influence you.

THE ISSUE SUMMED UP. TWO SIDES OF THE CASE STATED.

Look at the results of both systems as developed. Quebec and British Columbia are a sample of Government Control for a long enough period to judge the results. Ontario is a sample of the O. T. A. Its more thorough enforcement is promised, if sustained.

BRITISH COLUMBIA AND QUEBEC GOVERNMENT CONTROL.	ONTARIO O.T.A.
Money diverted from home needs to the liquor stores —$47,000,000 in one year.	The money of the people is being spent for useful purposes.
More "clubs" meaning lessened home ties.	Better homes.
Homes neglected, children neglected and undernourished and insufficietly clothed.	Children better cared for.
Legitimate business seriously curtailed.	School attendance increased.
Increase in brewing and distillery business.	No liquor "clubs" where people are debauched by scandalous carousals.
More accidents on the roads and in the cities.	Greatly decreased manufacture of beers and liquor. Dozens of brewer's and distilleries closed.
Free importation of booze into the Provinces.	Business and industry benefitted.
Revenue of about $1.00 derived through sale for every $10.00 spent by the community.	Some bootlegging.
A marked increase of costs to the community because of lessened efficiency and laxity of moral tone.	Some laxity of enforcement, but better enforcement promised.
Increase of crime, increase in policing, increased expense in Government institutional requirements.	Less accidents on the public highways.
More Government employees.	Vastly greater tourist traffic than in Quebec or British Columbia.
Increased cost in maintaining criminals.	Commitments for "drunks" and "disorderlies" enormously decreased. In Peterborough by 90%.
Poverty on the increase, demanding increased institutional help and community service.	Lower taxes, because of decreased cost of law enforcement and reduced gaol commitments.
Increased taxes.	White slave traffic almost unknown.
More "bootlegging" and unlawful sale.	Some home brew, but not as much liquor consumed in the homes as where liquor is sold in "sealed packages" and taken into the homes.
Government gradually, if not actually, getting into the control of the liquor interests, because of the tendency to supply large money donations to subvert legislation. Pressure brought to bear through this and other methods yet more subtle.	Drunkenness on the streets or in public places practically unknown.
Premier Ferguson says that neither the Quebec nor British Columbia Governments have been able to "control" the traffic. They simply sell liquor for revenue purposes.	Extreme cases of poverty—as in the olden days—unknown.
	Tens of thousands of children who have never seen a drunken man.
	Importtion of liquor prohibited.
	No public flaunting of advertisements encouraging increased consumption of liquor.
	No Government sale or any other legalized sale or importation. we

"Personal Liberty" versus "Social Rights"

The purpose of any law is not to make men moral.

The law has no regard as to what the motives may be of those who obey, whether fear, self interest, or good citizenship.

What the law seeks to do is to prevent people from acting in opposition to the rights of others.

If drinking means the debasing of manhood, and womanhood, the impoverishment of the home, the handicapping of children, cruelty to and neglect of wives and mothers, the lowering of the morality and efficiency of the whole community, and an incentive to crime, no one can gainsay the right of Government to see that the family, the children, the manhood and the womanhood of this land should be protected. They have rights in a larger measure than any so-called "personal liberty" rights.

What The O. T. A. Does!

The O. T. A. does not interfere with the highest good of the individual. It seeks rather to subordinate selfish desires and appetites to the good of all. It builds and places service above self.

Vote O. T. A. and have the law more stringently enforced.

Science Finds a Terrific New Heat Ray That Melts Diamonds and Battleships

Amazing Results Achieved by a Californian Who Has Harnessed Sunbeams and Turned Them Into the Greatest Known Force

TWO amazing rays have just been developed by scientists that are astounding the world.

One of them will harness the dancing sunbeams and turn them into heat so terrific that it will melt diamonds and cause battleships to turn into molten steel.

The other is so diabolical in its machinations that they call it the "death ray," and England and France are already in a quarrel as to which shall have it for its own—in case of emergency. Its inventor claims that he can electrocute a human being half a mile away by merely turning the "death ray" upon him. Or he can start or stop a motor car or an airplane at an equal distance.

The man who has harnessed the sunbeams is an American of French descent, Marcel Moreau, who lives in California. By a combination of mirrors and magnifying lenses he has produced a temperature of 15,000 Fahrenheit, which is at least 5,000 degress higher than has ever been produced in an electric crucible or furnace. He practically brings to the earth the flames of the sun. Just what this means may be judged from the fact that the flame that shoots from an acetylene torch, capable of boring its way through half-inch Harveyized steel, is three inches long, while the flames from the sun shoot out for a distance of 2,500,000 miles!

If Moreau's ray were focused upon a battleship lying a mile away it would bore a hole through the ship from stem to stern, the inventor claims. If this withering heat were flooded on the vessel at close range, it would melt it to the water's edge. It will not only melt diamonds but it will, when moderated, create them just as they were made under the terrific heat which followed the birth of the world.

Moreau has invented three different models of his device for harnessing the sun.

The first and most powerful, which creates the greatest heat of which there is any record, is an open steel framework about six feet wide and five feet deep, on which are set up twenty-two rectangular flat mirrors each ten by twelve inches in size.

Twenty-two powerful magnifying glasses or lenses, each six inches in diameter, catch and magnify the rays from each mirror and focus them on a large central lens.

Through this lens the rays are concentrated on a small area, shooting downward through a tube. This tube, built of firebrick, would be immediately melted if the end were closed up. Instead, the rays pass through it, creating their maximum heat at the point where they emerge.

The hardest substances when subjected to this concentrated heat—including babbitt metal, flint rock, mica, steel, scrap iron, quartz, crystal and diamonds—melt quickly and disappear in the form of gas.

The second machine, which produces a heat almost as great, consists of a bowl or funnel, four feet wide at its top, completely lined with 1,575 mirrors, each of which has a lens or magnifying glass attached to it. The multitudinous rays from these lenses are concentrated downward to another set in the tapered bottom of the funnel, like the eye-pieces of a telescope, producing a steady, concentrated heat of about 13,000 degrees.

The third machine is simply a smaller model of the one above, except that it has a tiny motor attached to it, which is driven by hot air, to illustrate the possibilities of developing direct power.

Scientists have watched in amazement while the heat from the first machine caused a diamond to bubble, melt and disappear and a piece of solid carbon vanish in a puff of smoke with only half the machine's power turned on. They saw, too, platinum, vanadium, molybednum and the other metals that require the highest temperatures to melt, turned to vapor in less than a minute.

The inventor has a method of regulating the machine and can figure to a degree the amount of heat he wants to develop. He was aided by his father, Gratien Moreau, in the experiments. An amusing feature of their activities is that while they were engaged in the early stages of the work, Moreau, senior, used to "tune down" the terrific heat and broil bacon, held on an ordinary fork, for his own and his son's lunch.

The greatest general interest which is attached to the invention is the fact that it may be turned into general use, to develop heat and power at a cost materially less than either water, steam, or electricity.

Death Valley, California, where the force of the sun is more terrific than at any other point in the country, and where it is rarely hidden by clouds, is to be the scene of later experiments with larger solar furnaces. Here the inventor, who has already produced a number of synthetic gems in the rough, expects to be able to turn them out in any quantity desired.

The three oldest dreams of the scientists have been the harnessing of the sun, of the ocean tides and of volcanic heat. Moreau, it is believed, has solved the most important of them.

While he has been making this dream a reality, Grindell Matthews, an Englishman, has been developing the "death ray." Although it has stirred up a vast amount of trouble, no one seems to know just exactly what the ray is, except that it is "something terrible." Matthews is an Englishman and most of his experiments to date have been made on English soil. Then, all of a sudden, he packed up and went to France. There he has since been working in association with Eugene Royers, Frenchman, who invented a ray that cuts steel under water by means of "luminous vibrations."

Immediately the English Government set up a great hue and cry, declaring that such an amazing, death-dealing invention should not be allowed to fall into the hands of what might some day prove an enemy government. That matter is now up in Parliament.

In describing his murderous ray, Matthews said:

"It is not a single ray, but a combination of three or four vibrations. When directed against a magneto it short-circuits it by forming an invisible path for magneto energy as effectively as though a wire were used. Unlike the X-ray, it can, under certain conditions, be reflected or refracted. On my ray I can put a high potential current, direct it against a man and electrocute him."

Matthews also thinks that his ray will be of great assistance in the treatment of cancer.

On the other hand, the chief interest in the Moreau invention lies in its general utility for the production of heat and power. Each of them, while able to do so much for humanity, may also be frightful as destructive agencies.

There is a huge power plant at Larderello, Italy, now operated by the Italian Government, which is actually using volcanic steam to drive turbines which in turn generate electricity, which is used not only to operate factories but the street cars and electric lighting systems of the town and countryside.

The French Government has just appropriated 500,000,000 francs for the construction of a huge experimental series of locks and dams at Finisterre, in Brittany, where the tides run very strong and high, with the hope of utilizing their power to drive water turbines.

The principle is to have the water rush in, turning wheels as it enters, and after it is banked up behind the dams, rush out again through a different opening, turning other wheels in the opposite direction, and thus producing continuous power.

And now the third dream, the harnessing of the sun's rays, has apparently come true through the invention of the solar furnace by Marcel Moreau.

The bitter controversy that has been stirred up between England and France over the "death ray" of Grindell Matthews well illustrates the importance of the invention. Moreau's ray is declared by scientists to be of far greater value, both commercially and as a war or peace asset. And America has undisputed claim upon it.

TEACHERS HAMMERED ROTARIANS LOCKWORKS AND BELMONTS WIN

Pedagogues Jumped on Rotary's Softball Team For Eleven in First Innings.

ROMP FOR BELMONTS.

Trimmed Bowlers 25-9—Teachers Led With 28 Hits at Arena.

Chris. Graham and his Rotarians got away to a bad start last night when they blew completely in the first innings and allowed their opponents, the Teachers, to score eleven runs. From then on the game was the Teachers and although the Rotary had high hopes of coming through with a win they were badly outclassed and outplayed, the Teachers collecting 21 runs in eight innings, while they held the Rotarians to two which were all Chris Graham and his gang could muster out of a total of ten hits. The game was featured by some snappy plays on the part of both pitchers but was too one sided to be interesting.

Both Matthews and Dunkerley were touched for a number of hits but good support behind Matthews would have made a big difference in the score:

ENGINEERS DEFEATED.

With the Lock Works nine in tip-top condition and the breaks all in their favor, they had practically everything their own way in their game against the Engineers. The C.G.E. crew made a strong bid for a victory, but sensational plays by the Lock Makers always spoiled their chances. "Bizzy" Thorndyke was on mound duty for the Lock Company, and he made a perfect job of it, holding the heavy bunch from the south to 9 hits and 3 runs, while he whiffed 10 of them. His team turned in their best performance so far, and appeared to be unable to miss one, while at bat they had no mercy on Langley's offerings, and clouted him for a net total of 13 runs and 25 hits.

It was a wild and woolly game that the Bowlers and the Belmonts put on last evening between 9 and 10 o'clock, the latter winning easily by the score of 25 to 9.

The Belmonts were far too lively for the "old men" and they romped around the bases at leisure, while the old lads would get all het up in their hurry to catch a runner and throw the ball around the arena.

Holyman did the twirling for the Belmonts and turned in a fair game, while his opponent, Fox, was hit hard and often by the Belmont sluggers.

BROAD JUMP TO MAKE NEW RECORD

Haiti Athlete Shattered French Record When He Cleared 24 Feet.

PARIS, October 22. — To hold the undisputed broad jump championship of the African race is the life's ambition of Sylvio P. Cator, of Port-au-Prince, Haiti, who recently shattered the French record with a leap of 7 meters and 30 centimeters, or practically 24 feet.

For this purpose Cator has placed himself under the direction of Trainer Quilgars of the Racing Club of France with the avowed intention of bettering the marks of De Hart Hubbard and Ned Gourdin, the two American negroes who, until Bob Legendre's tremendous jump of 25 feet 6 inches during the Olympic Games, held most of the leaping honours.

Cator came to France last June to represent Haiti in the Olympic Games, but like "Dick" Hyland of California, the American Olympic rugby player, he decided to enter school in France and incidentally to get the benefit of French training methods to improve his athletic performances as well as his studies.

His best jump duringthe Olympic competition was seven meters ten. Quilgars says the Haitian is improving every day, and he has hopes that before spring he will negotiate seven meters fifty regularly.

WALKED 69 MILES ON HIS SIXTY-NINTH BIRTHDAY

James Hocking Covered the Long Jaunt In 14 Hours.

JAMES H. Hocking was 69 the other day. He celebrated by walking 69 miles in 14 hours and five minutes. That was 55 minutes less than he took to walk 68 miles on his last birthday.

He started from his home in Yonkers at 3 a.m. and had the benefit of a full moon until dawn. He went through Hastings, Dobbs Ferry, Elmsdorf, Briarcliff, around Croton Lake to Amawalk, and ate a light lunch at Peekskill, 41 miles away, befores noon. He returned to Getty Square, Yonkers at 5.05 p.m. He was paced part of the way by Mr. Murphy, principal of Hastings High School, and by Alexander Jessup, former president of the Walkers' Club.

In his youth Hocking was pathfinder for the Walkers' Club of America.

FABLES ON HEALTH

"Don't do this and don't do that," were admonitions of the mothers of Anytown, as well as of any other part of the world.

It is quite natural that a mother should warn a child against various dangers, but to put definite fear into the heart of the child is something quite different.

The proper procedure is to explain carefully the conditions of a thing which a child needs to fear—whether it be automobiles or disease. And it should be a sense of caution rather than of fear that is implanted.

The offices of nerve specialists are crowded with cases of "fear neurosis." These are people with nameless fears and when their minds are trailed back to childhood it is frequently found that nameless fears were implanted in them for years.

Teaching of caution is intinctive. It is to be found in the lower animals, but the parent should be most careful not to confuse it with fear. For fears are terrible things and lead to depression and general unfitness for enjoyment.

Don't frighten the children with threats of the bogey-man.

Don't frighten them with fears and threats.

Instruct them, and there will be no need for threats and fears.

READING MANAGER

READING, Pa., Oct. 21.—At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Reading International Baseball Association last night, E. J. Poole was elected president to succeed M. G. Moore, Spencer A. Abbott, whose resignation as club manager was reported at the close of the baseball season, but subsequently denied, was re-elected manager for the 1925 season.

Manager Abbott announced that a general shake-up would take place in the club's roster for next season.

WALKER BEST SINCE WALCOTT'S DAY

Welter Champion Overshadows His Division and Ranks With Real Kings.

(By Joe Williams.)

NEW YORK, October 22. — It is neither simple nor sane to single out a modern fighter and present him as a counterpart of one of the old immortals.

Who is there to say, for instance, that Fitzsimmons could hit harder than Dempsey, or that the present champion would have whipped the old one?

It is our opinion that young Edward Walker, of Elizabeth, N.J., is one of the greatest fighters of current times. You know him better, no doubt, as Mickey Walker, welter weight champion.

Walker is fast, game, an explosive hitter and revels in a bristling contest. A stinging punch fires him to redoubled fury. That is the unfailing mark of the thoroughbred fighter. Dempsey has it. So has Leonard. McTigue, Tunney, and Goldstein haven't. And they aren't thoroughbreds.

Grey-bearded gentlemen, who look on to-day's events through the mighty glasses of retrospect, tell you Joe Walcott was the greatest title-holder the welterweight division ever knew. Walcott was just a trifle over five feet tall and a gorilla for strength.

Knocked Out Heavyweights.

Walcott fought welterweights, middleweights, and heavyweights. He knocked out Joe Choynski, who towered over him like a granite spire. Walcott leaped from the floor to land the punch that brought the Hebrew heavyweight down to the canvas.

Walker may be another Walcott, and again he may not. It is no crime to say that the New Jersey man approaches the old-timer in some respects, notably hitting power, courage and confidence. He has no heavyweight wins in his record, but many of his victories have been scored in what seems to have been the Walcott manner.

Walker completely overshadows the 147-pound set. The action of the New York Commission in suspending him for ignoring Dave Shade is significant of nothing other than the Commissioners' rare sense of humour. Walker has pulled the shades down on Mr. Shade on two previous occasions.

Would Knock Out Leonard?

Benny Leonard is probably the only man within whispering distance of the weight capable of extending Walker and the feeling is strangely widespread that Leonard would not go far. Gentlemen of the fist who have fought both men unhesitatingly predict a victory for Walker by a knockout.

Walker has every weapon that Leonard can show," says Jack Britton, from whom the champion won his title, and besides he is a harder hitter, with youth on his side.

Incidentally, Britton was one of the first of the welterweights to make real money out of the division.

Packey McFarland and Mike Gibbons, both stars, could have had the championship for the asking, but preferred to fight at mongrel weights where the purses were heavier and the honours lighter.

Walker, with his exceptional ability, is in a position to make more money as a welterweight than all the preceding champions combined.

BROOKLYN GIRL WINS PLACE AS NEW SCREEN FLAPPER

By HAROLD E. SWISHER.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 21.—(United Press). — Just when the word goes forth that the day of the flapper type on the screen is nearing its close, they step in with Clara Bow to give the lie to the decree.

Such a clever little minx is Clara, with the impudence of assertive 17 mixed with a depth of feeling which generally is far removed from one of her tender years.

They picked her up back in Brooklyn a couple of years ago when she shoved her pretty bobbed hair and impish eyes into a beauty contest and gained recognition. She was just a little kid in the neighborhood, motherless, and living with a father, who earned what his daily toil brought in, and a younger brother.

Someone gave her a chance in a small part on Long Island, and a far-seeing manager signed her on a long-time contract and sent her west, together with father and brother.

Success has come rapidly for Clara. It's all so dream-like and mysterious she doesn't know herself how to account for it. There was the flapper role in "Black Oxen," and there are those who say that she stepped in and "stole the picture." Then there was the lead in "Wine," with other parts following as rapidly as she can accept them.

Father Bow sits back in the pretty Hollywood home and revels in it all. He watches Clara with paternal solicitude, and drives her about town in the shiny new car, not minding in the least when she directs some shop girl to "just leave the package with my chauffeur outside."

Nothing Upstage in Clara.

Still, there's nothing highbrow in Clara's manner. Coney Island and the poorer sections of Brooklyn are all too vivid a remembrance for that—yet. And let's hope the "Ritzy" demeanor will be a long time coming. It's the absence of it which makes her what she is.

Just a genuine, fun loving little miss, bubbling over with life, a hoodlum, a fascinating roughneck, and with it all, possessing a sex appeal which makes her ingenue parts stand out from all the rest.

In any role of that type Clara steps into her own. She can run the gamut from frolicksome childhood to deep-feeling womanhood as easily as if there were years difference in her age between the two.

But no matter what she acts, Clara Bow is always the jolly little flapper, the kind any big brother would delight to "step" out and show off to the boys. Let's hope she never grows up.

Big Production Season.

Second unit of the big Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production program is getting underway under the supervision of Louis B. Mayer and his business associates, Irving G. Thalberg and Harry Rapf.

The "double hyphen" studio at Culver City promises a highly diversified program for the coming season, according to advance reports on the pictures already completed or underway. Certain it is at least that the stories chosen for picturization are widely varied.

Mr. Mayer stresses the point that his "Ben Hur" company in Italy is taking every possible step to avoid "machine-made" pictures, a general fault in large scale production.

He selects several representative stories at random as an example of this. Victor Seastrom's "He Who Gets Slapped" is a tragic story of a clown in a European circus; "His Hour," an exotic, romantic tale of the Royal Russian court before the revolution; "So This is Marriage," a comedy drama of married life; "The Great Divide," a western film; "The Snob," a film version of Helen R. Martin's highly sophisticated novel of a school teacher; "The Silent Accuser," a novelty picture, with Peter, the police dog.

"Fighting Bob" An Actor.

Had Robert M. LaFolette, independent candidate for President, been just an inch or two taller he might have been the Ernest Torrence, William Farnum or George Fawcett of the movies today, instead of aspirant for the White House.

This is the assertion of John Griffith Wray, production manager for Thomas H. Ince, who was was raised and educated in Senator LaFollette's own State, Wisconsin.

"I remember well the time when LaFollette's big ambition was to become an actor," said Wray. "His favorite 'stunt' was an oration on 'Hamlet' which he gave at every possible occasion.

"I believe he trained for the stage. At least he paid attention to elocution and voice training. But he was told that his short stature would be against his success in such heroic parts as would have fitted his temperament.

"It is interesting to speculate on what his career might have been had he been a few inches taller. A stage career no doubt would have led to the screen, and the fire-eating chief of the independents at Washington might now be a screen idol. This is one case, at least, where the lack of a few inches in height may lead a man to presidential chair."

A few drops of oil on the speedometer drive once a week will cause the drive to operate quickly and for a long period without other care.

To prevent grease working out to the brakes see that the felt washers at the end of the axle housing or within the rear hub are properly installed.

Ordinary talcum powder will sometimes stop cone clutch slippage. First clean the leather or fabric surface with gasoline and then sprinkle with talcum.

Just because it's a cold, bitter night don't imagine that your car is not so likely to be stolen. That's just the time there'll be no one standing around to see the thief!

JOHNSON STORY TOLD BY EVANS

Washington Pitcher's Final Victory Proved Right Ultimately Prevails.

DESTINY'S PART.

Right ultimately prevails.

Often the road is beset with many obstacles.

Take the case of Walter Johnson as a concrete example, Billy Evans writes.

No finer character has ever graced baseball. His whole life has been one of right. He is the ideal for every youngster who aspires to shine in sport to pattern after.

For 18 years Walter Johnson strove for the chance to pitch in a world series. It finally came.

In his first two starts he was beaten. He gave a heroic exhibition in the first game, a 12-inning affair, but was badly battered in the second.

The word painters counted him out. The gist of their obituary was the big chance came too late.

* * *

Destiny and the power of right had other plans.

Destiny shaped Walter Johnson's greatest chance after he had been consigned to the class of once greats.

He made the most of it and emerged from the series its biggest hero. The world at large was pleased.

* * *

A half hour before the start of the final game of the 1924 series I walked into the Washington clubhouse. It was deserted save for Walter Johnson. He was sitting on one of the trunks in a remote corner of the dressing room looking off into space.

He didn't hear me enter. I stopped to grieve with him. His face was a picture of one who had failed. There was a look of sadness there that was unlike the smiling Johnson I knew.

"Sorry to intrude, Walter," I said, "but I have a couple of baseballs I would like to have you autograph. The request came this morning from some admirers of yours in the west."

A smile once more played over his face as he replied in characteristic Johnson fashion.

* * *

"That's pleasing news and I certainly will be glad to autograph them. I feared after my failure in those two games that the signature wouldn't mean very much."

* * *

There was no jest in the reply. Johnson was in dead earnest. To him the series was over. He had no idea that he would get a chance to work in the final game. The world series that he had waited 18 years for had been a failure.

Then Destiny stepped in to play a most important part. When Washington tied up the score in the eighth Johnson was the only man left with a chance of holding the opposition.

His performance in the last four innings of the deciding game is now a matter of history. He struck out five men, all of them in a pinch.

It was a fitting finale to a great series. It may have rung down the curtain on Johnson's big league career. He is not certain that he will return.

It was a thrilling climax that pleased every sportsman regardless of how he was pulling.

* * *

Baseball needs men like Walter Johnson, a real man.

DOLAN TO SUE LANDIS.

Alleges Slander and Will Attempt To Clear Name.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22. — Cozy Dolan, former New York Giant coach, who was banished from baseball with Jimmy O'Connell on charges of attempted bribery, will bring suit against Commissioner Landis and organized baseball for alleged slander, according to announcement yesterday by W. J. Fallon, noted criminal attorney who has been engaged by Dolan to handle the case.

At the same time, Fallon said, Dolan will make his action a basis for an attempt to clear his name, gain restoration to baseball ranks and obtain his share of the 1924 world's series money.

"Dolan is an innocent man," Fallon declared. "When the true facts of the case are published and Dolan's complete testimony before Judge Landis is revealed, instead of just one sentence, the public can judge for itself whether Dolan is implicated in the scandal or not.

"Action will be started in Federal court in New York against Judge Landis and organized baseball within three or four days for alleged slander, for Dolan's restoration to baseball and for his share of the world's series

SUICIDES INCREASE

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—With Berlin rapidly acquiring the ghastly title of Suicideville, averaging this year four a day, and with birth-control cutting down births until fewer children are born than marriages recorded, the Germans are looking anxiously at their capital wondering what is the matter.

In the first nine months of 1924 there were 1,081 suicides. At that rate there will be 1,519 during the whole year, or 300 more than last year. This is double the pre-war rate, yet the causes most often assigned are not economic, but spiritual. The increase has taken place during a period when Germany is in better shape economically than any time since the war. The suicide methods most frequently used are hanging, drowning and shooting, with gas coming rapidly into favor.

At the same time birth statistics are alarming advocates of the big-family, big-army, big-nation idea, particularly since it is obvious birth control is now the decisive factor. According to an analysis just made public by the director of the City Statistical Bureau, births reached their lowest point in history last year with 10.4 to each thousand of population. There were 11.2 marriages, signifying the hitherto inexperienced situation of more marriages than births.

The average family in old-time Germany numbered six children, but this generation probably will cut down that average to three. Conscious reduction in the size of the family is shown in the fact, that in the years 1900 to 1909, 32 per cent. of all births were first children and that in 1923, 50 per cent. were first born. Last year there were 87 per cent. fewer fourth-child births and beyond than in 1900.

German sociologists say the effect of the small-family habit is more detrimental to increase of population than any other factor, economic or political. They point to France, where all efforts of the Government have failed to bring improvement once the people lost the desire to have many children.

"Eddie" Sticks on in Stock Yards

The Prince of Wales may have difficulty remaining astride a horse back in Great Britain—but during h is visit to the Chicago stock yards Edward David Windsor showed th em he could stick on. The man on the prince's right is Louis F. Swift, whose guest the prince was during his 17-hour stay in Chicago.

RADIO NEWS

Range of Receiving Set.

The receiving range of a set is determined by testing for signals between 11 o'clock in the morning and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Stations that can be picked up regularly between these hours are the ones upon which the receiving range should be based.

An Indoor Antenna.

Sometimes an indoor antenna can be successfully operated by erecting the wires on ordinary doors in the house. It provides a good solution for the indoor antenna problem, since the swinging door alters the directional effect and acts as a regular loop antenna.

The Required Number of Tubes.

Never use more tubes than are sufficient for the results desired. It frequently happens that inexperienced operators will have more tubes burning than are necessary, and then detune to lessen the volume of sound. For local staions, for instance, the first audio stage is amply sufficient.

Non-Corrosive Flux.

Celluloid dissolved in acetone makes a very good binder for radio work. It should be used in place of shellace, collodion, etc. Rosin dissolved in rubbing alcohol, with a couple of drops of glycerin, makes an absolutely non-corrosive flux. A drop on a piece of wire suffices for most joints and makes a neat and noiseless job.

Placement of the Receiver.

Noises in a set are often picked up as a result of placing the receiver in the magnetic field surrounding lighting wires running behind the wall, and the receiver should therefore be moved to another part of the room to make sure that the iron cores of the intervalve transformers are not picking up interference from this source.

Inspection of Aerial and Ground.

Because winter storms mean heavy strains on aerial and ground installaions, now is the time to make a thorough inspection of the outdoor wiring system. See if the guy-wires holding the aerial masts and the aerial wires in place are all taut and tight. Look over all soldered connections and try to determine if they have become corroded during the hot summer months.

BRAZIL PLOTS BIG REBELLION

Leaders Arrested at Rio de Janeiro—Government Works Quickly.

NIPPED IN BUD.

(By U. G. Keener—United Press Staff Correspondent).

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 21. — A widespread plot to overthrow the Government has been discovered and the leaders have been arrested, it was announced officially to-night.

The news, following the three weeks' rebellion in Sao Paulo in July, caused a sensation, but the Government appeared to have the situation well in hand.

Widespread arrests have been made in connection with a seditious movement designed to overturn the established authorities, says the official statement. The plot has been so fully worked out that even the Cabinet posts in the proposed regime had been disturbed.

"The Government has had knowledge for some time," the statement said, "of the criminal intentions of the plotters and awaited only the proper time for repressive action.

"When full proof was obtained, Government agents succeeded in surprising the malcontents who had evidently planned their outbreak for to-day.

"The leaders were arrested at a meeting where preparations were being completed for the uprising and compelled to reveal all their plans with the names of persons participating and those who had knowledge of the affair."

NORMAL STUDENTS AT ENTERTAINMENT

Trinity Young People Are Hosts at Happy Evening Party—200 Present.

On Monday evening nearly 200 students of the Normal School were entertained at a social gathering in the Reid street Hall by the Trinity Young People's League.

The chairman of the evening, Wm. Giles in his opening remarks welcomed the students in the name of the Young People of the League, expressing the hope that the evening would prove to be very enjoyable

The Pastor, Rev. A. J. Langford, followed with a short talk, giving advice on many little points, gleaned from his own experience as a Normal student, which were well received judging by the laughter and applause that punctuated his remarks.

The following artists also contributed towards the enjoyment of the evening.

Miss Elva Nugent, pianoforte solo; Miss Irene Wright, a reading and an encore; Miss Katherine Taylor, violin solo.

Each number was excellently rendered.

The second half of the programme consisting of games was in the hand of Osborne Smith, who carried out the duties allotted to him in a way that left nothing to be desired.

The whole company being formed into nine groups each represented by a letter of the alphabet then got in readiness for a group singing contest, each group was given one verse of a popular song to sing, all different, the prize being eventually awarded by the judges to group "G", It was very noticeable during the contest that the singing of many of the groups was of a high order and showed talent The contest also proved to be the source of much merriment.

The greatest fun of the evening was when each individual group in turn ascended the platform and by curious contortions and uncanny signs and noises tried to convey some pre-arranged popular advertisement, which it was the business of the on-looking groups to fathom, two prizes going to the group which guessed the greatest number.

The last and important item of the evening was the serving of refreshments followed by a very hearty vote of thanks by the Normalites to the Young People of Trinity League for the very enjoyable evening spent in their company and many were the sincere thanks from individual students for the good time they had had which many said they would not quickly forget.

The principal and staff of the Normal school are to be congratulated on having such an intelligent and very promising party of students under their care.

Many professional and business men have difficulty meeting dietary demands they are frequently called upon to follow.

At least such was the case with associates of Mr. Mann of Anytown.

The noon lunch generally meant eating at the handiest place and accepting such foods as the bill of fare may offer. And, fresh from a morning of possible overactivity, he of all persons should be careful.

He expects a pill or laxative to counteract the evil effects of violating hygienic and dietary laws. And so he goes on overtaxing the alimentary canal and lays the foundation for diabetes, indigestion, dyspepsia and a long list of other troubles.

First of all, the too-hasty consumption of food should not be tolerated. When worry over business affairs is added to this hasty lunch, it is worse. For the busy type of man the noon meal should be the lightest of the day. He should have a hearty breakfast, however, and hurrying home to dinner at night he should not immediately sit down to eat but should find some means of recreation or play for half an hour or more; then resting for a few moments.

BOND SCANDALS CASE PROCEEDS

Defense Counsel Battle Every Piece Of Evidence—To-day's Testimony.

CROWN AT PEAK.

TORONTO, Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press). — With the Smith-Jarvis-Pepall trial advanced only two days, the Crown late yesterday afternoon wound up the presentation of its more important evidence and reached the crux of its case when A. E. Nash, chartered accountant, produced the results of his investigation of Peter Smith's bank account at Stratford and swore that the serial numbers on the bond coupons cashed to Mr. Smith's credit were identical with the numbers on the bonds included in the list of securities received by A. H. Pepall from Aemilius Jarvis and Co. through a New York brokerage firm following the redemption of some $6,753,000 worth of Ontario succession duty free bonds held in Great Britain. According to Mr. Nash's evidence, bond coupons to the total value of $6,535.22 were cashed to Mr. Smith's credit during the years 1920 and 1921. It was stated that the amount cashed during the first of the years named represented interest on bonds to the face value of $184,306.02, or a market value of $146,326.19. The face value of securities sent to Brown Bros., brokers, New York, to the order of A. H. Penall was put at $423,188.43. Mr. Nash's testimony in this regard was not read into the court records before all four defence lawyers had argued against its admission.

CIVIC EMPLOYEES EVADE LIABILITY

Hamilton City Officials Deny Their Responsibility For Theft.

HAMILTON, Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Evasion of responsibility by department heads for the theft of $50,000 by Harold Forbes from the city treasurer's office pervaded yesterday's session of the judicial inquiry into the civic scandal. Both City Treasurer W. H. Davis and Assistant Treasurer Eric Bower disclaimed all responsibility in the matter. They held that the duty of striking the cash balance in their own department was something not devolving on them, but on City Auditor E. A. Dempster.

Mr. Dempster was too ill to appear. Through his counsel, however, he too disclaimed any responsibility. He was not accountable for the cash in the city treasurer's department. A. F. Dowie, independent auditor, said that Forbes' shortage to date is $94,980, although this sum is not final. He said that Forbes had made no attempt to conceal his shortage since last May. Enquiry thus far has shown that the system of bookkeeping in both the city treasurer's and city auditor's departments has been ineffective.

OLD PARTIES RESTIVE.

Radicals Among Them May Vote For Labor Where Only Two Entered.

LONDON, Oct. 22. — (Canadian Press).—The more extreme members of the Liberal and Conservative parties display considerable opposition to the pact between the two old line political factions. Notwithstanding that H. H. Asquith, Liberal leader, has bestowed his blessing on the reciprocal arrangement by which the candidates of either party are standing aside to avert three-cornered contests, some people hint that the veteran leader takes a roseate view because the Conservatives have allowed him to make a straight fight against a Labor candidate in Paisley. Disgruntled Liberals maintain that they are not getting a square deal as far more Liberals are standing aside for Conservatives than vice versa.

The bulk of the Liberals seem satisfied with Asquith's attitude, but it is quite on the cards that many who incline to the radical wing of the party will prefer to vote for Labor rather than Conservative in constituencies where there are no Liberal candidates.

EDUCATIONAL NIGHT

On Monday, St. George's A.Y.P.A. held an Educational evening, when in a visit to the Bell Telephone Co., a very interesting hour and a half was spent in learning something of the workings of the telephone exchange. The young people extend their thanks to the Bell Telephone staff for their kindness in showing them around.

BARBARA LA MARR AND BEN LYON, IN 'THE WHITE MOTH' At the Capitol, to-day and Thursday. Conway Tearle has the leading male role in this gorgeous produc tino.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: Caroline Birnie, in last night's Examiner provided the first roorback. She compares British Columbia and Ontario, when she must know that British Columbia has private sale and importation, which Ontario is not to have.

D. SLOANE.

O.T.A. ONLY ASKS $2,000.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: In last night's issue of the Examiner, Mr. Johnston, the official agent of the Moderation League, makes the absurd statement that the O.T.A. Campaign Committee are asking the churches to supply them with Twenty thousand dollars ($20,000.)

This statement is 900 per cent exaggeration. We are asking the churches for a portion of a total of Two thousand dollars ($2,000), and no church or individual is assessed for any sum. All contributions are voluntary, and the Moderation League's statements that the churches were asked for $2000 and $2500, are absolutely false.

If the League's other p blic statements are no nearer the truth than this the public would be well advised to discount their whole last-minute propaganda.

A. B. CUNNINGHAM.

TO PRESERVE THE CHILDREN.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—To the parents of our beautiful city, when we go to mark our ballots on the 23rd, let us ask ourselves, the question, "Which shall it be, the bottle or the boy?" Let us all think deeply about the so-called Government control of the liquor traffic. It has not been, neither can it be controlled. What it will do is to control the Government. Let us all cast our ballots to keep this Ontario dry and a safe place for our boys and girls to dwell in, and if we do this we shall soon have a dry Ontario and also a dry Canada. Our boys and girls expect us parents to do our duty towards them.

W. STEVENS.

306 Brock Street, City.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: I notice in walking the streets of your fair city, these words painted upon the walks in many places: "Stop, Look and Live," and "Always be Careful" put there, I understand, by the "Kiwanis Club" to warn people of the danger of motor traffic. Would not these words of warning apply to the liquor traffic as well? Men are discussing this question upon your streets, and I hear these words: "We would not want the old system back again," or "Or if this vote was to stop the sale, manufacture and importation, we would gladly support it." No doubt men and women are thinking upon this question, but so many apparently are not thinking of the past. How easily it is to forget that all the reforms we are enjoying to-day, from the closing up of the liquor selling houses that were dotted every few miles upon the highways in the pioneer days of the country, which debauched the early settlers, to the closing up of the old bar, with all its repulsive sights and sounds. These conditions have been brought about by the untiring efforts of temperance workers and church people (Protestant and Roman Catholic alike) and if ever we reach the goal that the great majority would rejoice to see, viz., the prohibition of the sale, manufacture and importation, it will only be arrived at by the same class of workers which have given us past reforms, and who have fought every inch of the road to the present.

Would it not be heartless to forget the past? Would it not be a tragedy to sacrifice our present position? Would it not be a calamity to again legalize the traffic, and start it upon it onward march of ruin?

This fair province is having its extreme moment. Will it win?—or will it lose? Let every one that is entrusted with the franchise remember these warning words: "Stop, thing, look and live!" and "Always be careful." Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for this favor, I remain, yours respectfully,

THOS. E. SARGENT.

THE DUMBELLS IN "ACE HIGH."

The only thing about The Dumbells new revue that may be referred to as being "up in the air" is the opening scene. It is about 5,000 feet up in the air—before the crash. That is where the show gets its title—"Ace High." It's the fifth ace, in a R.A.F. tunic, that takes the first trick.

After the first punch the show swings along in the usual snappy stride that has kept The Dumbells' revues so popular with Canadian theatre-goers.

And what a cast Captain Plunkett has assembled this season! There's Ross Hamilton, Al. Plunkett, "Red" Newman, Stan. Bennett, Pat Rafferty, "Jock" Holland, Ben Allen, Morley Plunkett, and all the other favourite soldier-stars of previous seasons.

Not satisfied with just having the greatest case ever assembled under The Dumbells' banner, the Captain has augmented and replaced his orchestra to such an extent that he now has not only one of the best, but the best syncopated band in Canada. The orchestra, always a promient feature, is now an outstanding hit of the show.

The Dumbells Company, Limited, will offer "Ace High" at the Grand Theatre for three days, commencing Thursday, 23rd October.

TOURNEUR FILMS FRENCH DRAMA.

Story of Director's Native Land Given Realistic Atmosphere—Erects Two Huge Sets—Barbara La Marr and Conway Tearle Star in Unusual Production.

"The White Moth," being shown at the Capitol Theatre to-day and Thursday, is one of the most sensational and colorful stories that has been made for First National. Maurice Tourneur spared no expense in building magnificent settings and engaged an expensive cast to work with him. Hundreds of pretty girls were used in the chorus scenes and the Bal des Artistes. They wore gorgeous gowns and costumes. The most dramatic moments of the story were filmed against a background of gaiety and fun. The contrast is only one of the remarkable touches that a master director has woven into this story.

Two extraordinary settings were built to form the background for the tense moments. One was the interior of a French theatre. Six hundred people were employed to act as the audience in addition to a thirty-piece orchestra. Two elaborate settings were used on the stage; one for a specially staged dance.

The other impressive set is an exact reproduction of the grand ball room of the Tuileries Palace. In this setting is held the Bal des Artistes. Seven hundred people, all in different costumes, are seen. This scene is a typical Parisian ball and shows the carefree and abandon manner with which these affairs are conducted.

Barbara La Marr, together with Conway Tearle, play the leading roles.

Charles de Roche, the French actor, plays the heavy part.

Other members of the cast include Josie Sedgwick, Edna Murphy, Ben Lyon, Kathleen Kirkham and William Orlamond.

AT THE ROYAL.

"MARRIAGE CIRCLE" CLOSES TO-NIGHT.

It is safe to say that no production in a long time has caused such favourable comment among that class of theatre patron called discriminating. "The Marriage Circle" is in the class of entertainment that must be seen to be appreciated.

There are so many subtle touches and inspirational direction that it is a treat to those who demand quality. To-night is the last screening.

ANDY GUMP AT THE ROYAL TO-MORROW.

Andy, Minn, and Chester are back in their new series of movies at the Royal to-morrow. Joe Murphy plays Andy and resembles him at that.

To-morrow's comedy is entitled "Oh Min," and is said to contain as many laughs as their first, which was at the Royal some weeks ago.

"THE STORY WITHOUT A NAME" ENTERTAINING ADVENTURE—TALE OF LOVE AND THE RADIO, WITH BIG ALL-STAR CAST.

"The Story Without a Name," the new Paramount picture coming to the Royal Theatre on Thursday next, is a pleasing radio-romance, featuring Agnes Ayres and Antonio Moreno. The picture is an adaptation by Victor Irvin of the Photoplay Magazine Prize-Title story by Arthur Stringer.

Picture patrons of late have been more or less fed up on "high-society" pictures, so-called "super-specials," lavishly produced, etc. But now for something that's really off the beaten path of screen entertainment—something with a real kick in it in the line of adventure tales. And that's "The Story Without a Name" to a "T."

The picture opens with a bang with the first real test of "death ray" machine. Novel? You said it. And the final fade-out finds the villains in the hands of Government officials and the hero and heroine safe in each other's arms on the broad decks of one of Uncle Sam's battleships which arrives in the nick of time in response to a radio message.

The "death ray," radio, plots and plotters, fist fights galore, with the scenes ranging from the gorgeously-appointed homes of the rich to desert island and back again. What a picture this one is!

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH HOLDS CHAUTAUQUA

Members Of Parish Who Travelled Overseas Tell Their Experiences.

One of the most enjoyable and inspirational events of the season at St. John's Church was a Chautauqua evening held last night in the Parish House, the occasion being a reception to several members of the congregation who visited England during the past summer, to receive from them something of the information they gained and the inspiration they received when overseas. There was a large attendance at the meeting, which was held under the auspices of the C.W.A., and presided over by S. T. Medd, the church warden.

The opening address was given by Mrs. G. S. Cameron, who spent two months of the past summer in Switzerland, and who described very vividly the life of the residents of Lausanne, Lucerne and Interlaken. The habits of the people, the educational life and the customs of the people were impressively interpreted.

F. D. Kerr, K.C., who went to England last year with the members of the Canadian Bar Association, described the generous hospitality of the British Bar Association, who, with the Canadian Bar Association, acted as joint hosts to the American Bar Association. Events especially emphasized by Mr. Kerr were the great opening service in Westminster Abbey and the receptions at the Guild Hall in London and at Buckingham Palace. The address, excellently delivered, was listened to with rapt attention.

Colonel W. N. Ponton, of Belleville, was also present. He, as president of the Ontario Bar Association, and also as special representative of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, also attended the meeting in London, and described in entertaining and graphic fashion the reception to the Bar Association in Edinburgh and some of his experiences in Paris.

During the evening, Mr. David Melton, by request, sang in delightful manner "The Sweepers," a vocal solo descriptive of the street sweepers.

Members of St. John's Parish who went abroad during the past summer were: Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Stratton, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ackerman, Mrs F. Trebilcock, Mrs. G. S. Cameron, Mrs. C. Fessenden, Miss Alice Price, Miss Edwina Palmer, Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse. Miss Williams, an English teacher who is working on the exchange system between England and Canada, and is a member of the staff of the Queen Mary School, was present last evening.

Court Chemong Members Spent Enjoyable Evening In Music and Song.

A large number of members and friends of Court Chemong gathered at the home of Comp. and Bro. Chandler, Reid Street, and spent a very enjoyable evening at cards, singing, games and dancing.

The singing was led by Mrs. Bugg and Mrs. Gray, who were greatly applauded for their numbers, after which dainty refreshments were served.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Comp. and Bro. Chandler for the use of their home, also to Mrs. Bugg and Mrs. Gray who had given their services to make the evening so enjoyable.

DRURY ON STAND DEFENDING SMITH

Ex-Premier Gives Evidence In Case Against Smith and Jarvis — Never Doubted Honesty.

TORONTO, Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press).—The defence in the trial of Peter Smith, former Provincial Treasurer, Aemilius Jarvis, Sr., Aemilius Jarvis, Jr., and Harry Pepall on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Province of Ontario started this morning with E. C. Drury, former Prime Minister, as the first defence witness. The trial is drawing a large number of colleagues of Peter Smith in the Legislature. Mr. Drury stated that he had never had any reason to doubt the integrity and honesty of Peter Smith. He told of the proceedings leading up to the decision to buy in the bonds in England. The matter was discussed at several meetings of the Cabinet Council.

Mr. Drury said that he did not know that Andrew Pepall, who was sent to England as a representative of the Government, had a brother in the Jarvis firm or he would not have sent him. He also stated that the Government had decided to pay a set price to Jarvis, Sr., for three kinds of bonds to be purchased. Prices were 89 for three and a half per cent.; 90 for four per cent., and 90 for four and a half per cent.

Letters and other evidence showed that Jarvis paid 87, 82 and 84½ for these bonds respectively. Mr. Drury was asked directly by W. N. Tilley, K.C., Crown prosecutor, if the price to be paid by the Government was fixed, why it was necessary to send Andrew Pepall to England at all. Mr. Drury said he didn't know, beyond the fact that the Government sent him to watch the transactions for the Government. Mr. Drury, in reply to direct questions, said he did not know that Mr. Smith ever got anything out of the transactions.

Mr. Drury said that the Government had decided to buy the bonds in as cheaply as possible. He was asked by His Lordship why the price was set at the figures mentioned when the market values of these bonds were much below those figures. Mr. Drury said that he had personally felt that the Government would not be able to buy many of the bonds at a low figure because the prices would rise when it became known that the Government was in the purchasing field. He said he could not explain beyond that when His Lordship pressed for further reasons.

On conclusion of the Crown's case this morning, the defence asked for dismissal on the ground that no case had been made out. This was refused by His Lordship.

KILLED BY HORSES.

Samuel Bugg Met Death While Driving In His Buggy.

GUELPH, Oct. 22. — (Canadian Press).—Driving to this city from Erin village this morning in a horse and buggy, Samuel Hogg, butcher, was killed when the two horses drawing a wagon in which his brother, Hugh Hogg, was riding, bolted. Leaping on the lighter vehicle in front, Mr. Hogg was severely injured, and died before reaching the hospital here.

The brothers were driving down a steep hill, the wagon in the rear, when the king bolt broke. The frightened horses, bumped by the heavy vehicle, raced madly ahead.

NEW INDICTMENT DRAWN.

Home Bank Directors Face New Variation of Conspiracy Charges.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—A new indictment drawn up by the Crown against the Home Bank directors was put in the hands of the grand jury in the assizes to-day. The nature of the charges was not disclosed, but it is believed to be a variation of the conspiracy charges contained in the former which was abandoned.

In his charge to the jury Chief Justice R. M. Meredith pointed out that the new bill was pressed by the Attorney-General, through D. L. McCarthy, K.C., Crown Prosecutor. He declared it was a mistake to think that the Attorney General had special power over the court; he had only the same right as any other citizen to lay an information.

His Lordship declared that the Crown should have waited until the present charges against the directors were disposed of and then if necessary lay another charge. He declared that in the cases all facts must come out.

4 CHINESE SHOT IN CHICAGO.

One Is Killed and Three Wounded In New Tong Outbreak.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—One Chinese was killed and three others were wounded seriously Monday when the tong war broke out again in Chicago. Three shootings occurred in rapid succession in various parts of the city.

Police officials despatched seventeen squads in fast cars to pick up every Chinese found walking the streets or riding in street cars or automobiles. Uniformed and plain clothes men were sent to every chop suey restaurant, Chinese store and laundry to arrest every Oriental who was not able to give a good account of himself.

Squads also were rushed to every railroad station and points of exodus from the city to prevent the Chinese from leaving town.

FUR OR CLOTH FOR WINTER COAT? IS QUESTION BEFORE OUR WOMEN

Anatole France and his wife in his study.

With the passing of Jaques Anatole Thiebault, known to the world as Anatole France, there will be thousands of readers seeking to read books concerning the life and work of this contemporary master.

To these, the Book Survey suggests that one of the best portraits to be had may be found in a recently published work, "The Opinions of Anatole France" (Knopf), a really remarkable piece of reporting on the part of Paul Gsell. In this the most mordant ironist of his time and one of the kindliest humorists of all time is shown at gatherings, pictured intimately expressing his views and revealing the processes of his argumentative method.

Another quite recent portrait is provided by James Lewis May in "Anatole France: The Man and His Work" (Dodd, Mead & Co.). In a biographical first part May concedes that he is dealing with a most difficult subject "because of his multitudinous interests and his bewilderingly rapid change of point of view."

In discussing the immortality of this great wit, poet, stylist, critic, philosopher, May believes it is "France, the poet, who will outlive the rest"—that is, France will live because of his style, rather than what he said. May will find plenty to argue this point with him.

Another excellent study was done by Lewis Shanks, an American, and published some years ago in Chicago because, at the time, there was a superstition in New York that only Englishmen were capable of producing commentaries on French letters.

* * *

To all who would write or would study writing there is one of the greatest lessons to be found in France's criticism of his early work, "Jeanne D'Arc." It goes something like this:

"Beware of pastry! Pastry is factitious, adventitious. It is whipped cream that fails to hide the poverty of the cake. It is a hideous plaster garland trying to transform a garret into a palace. It renders the most beautiful pages precarious.

"In my early versions of Jeanne D'Arc I gave them pastry. I wanted to be picturesque. Be pitiless toward these studipities! Today, they make me sick at heart."

France was one of his own most ruthless critics. He is pictured with shears turning printers' proofs of his writing into jigsaw puzzles.

Also he was a relentless searcher for opinion. He would rise grumbling in the morning, a philosophic question on the tip of his tongue. This he would ask of the chambermaid when she came to clean the room. Later he would ask the delivery man, the antique dealer, the house painter and the book-binder. At the end of a week he would be ready to write one of his inimitable papers.

Alduous Huxley takes his finger away from his nose in "Young Archimedes" (Doran), a series of six finely drawn character studies. In "Chrome Yellow," 'Antic Hay" and previous books Huxley wielded a very joyful slapstick, swatting manners, and conventions and man—quite sophisticated and whimsical was he, earning a name in some quarters as a smart aleck and Continental bad boy, while others heralded his comedy far and wide. Here is a more serious mood, with the ironies more biting and the whimsy more ironic. "Fard," a brief study of an old French nursemaid, is probably the best study in the book.

* * *

Many Sabatini swashbucklers have crossed the page since Graustark did a fadeout. One of the early Sabatini novels, "Saint Martin's Summer" (Houghton, Mifflin), has just been given its first American printing. It was written before "Scaramouche," but has a leading character of similar type in M. de Garnace, lean, hard man of many fights and hasty temper.

* * *

There is something reminiscent of "treasure trove" in the discovery of an ancient and obscure manuscript. And such romance surrounds "The Manuscript of St. Helena" (Appleton), presumed to be the personal confessions of the banished Napoleon. Willard Parker, translator and president of the Bacon Society, relates that the manuscript is dated 1817, two years after Napoleon's banishment; that it reached France about that time but was refused publication; that a copy of it got to London a year later and was published in the French language; thereafter it disappeared only to show up two years ago at a sale of the personal property of two French ladies of Elwood, N. J.

If it was written by Napoleon, himself—and this will doubtless be disputed—then he was a greater combination of bombast and egotism than heretofore pictured by his worst enemy. Superiority and self-righteousness burst from every paragraph and, in his own opinion, he is another case of "Me und Gott."

BANDIT ATTEMPTS TO SAVE HIS PALS

Doubtful If Effort Will Receive Notice, As All Were Accomplices.

MONTREAL, Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press).—When the Cabinet meets in Ottawa to-day to consider the case of the six Montreal bandits sentenced to be hanged on Friday for the Bank of Hochelaga collection car hold-up which resulted in the death of Henri Cleroux, chauffeur, it will, it is stated by a local paper, have before it the confession of Louis Morel, one of the ringleaders of the gang, exonerating Frank Gambino, Mike Valentino and Tony Frank, from any part in the hold-up itself.

These three are among the six condemned men. Morel has previously sworn Leo Davis was not present at the hold-up. The men named, however, figured in the organization of the hold-up and are therefore accomplices.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT ST. GEORGE'S

Rev. J. L. Hughes Addressed Large Congregations—Four Children Baptized.

Sunday last, being "Children's Day" throughout the Anglican churches of the Dominion, the services in St. George's church were fittingly observed. Large congregations were present both morning and evening, and instead of the usual morning and evening prayer the services were of a special character. The distinctive feature of the day was a choir of girls and boys of the Sunday school, whose sweet voices were heard to great effect at each service in the three special hymns, "God Is Ever Good," "If I Come To Jesus," "My School, My School, My Sunday School."

At the close of each service, many comments of praise upon the singing of the children were expressed by members of the congregation.

The Rev. J. L. Hughes preached two forceful sermons. The morning subject was, "The Child Jesus," the rector's remarks being addressed chiefly to the scholars of the Sunday school, who were present in a body.

At this service, four infants were admitted into the church, through the Sacrament of Holy Baptism.

In the evening, the words chosen as text were: "The children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children," (II. Cor. 12, v. 14), the rector dealing with and emphasizing the work of the Sunday school, in conjunction with the spiritual training of the child in the home.

The importance of "the child" was given special significance in every part of each service, and children's hymns were used throughout the day.

Ontario Plebiscite Opinions In Favour Of Act

Lady Eaton: I think it would be a decided step downward not to support the Ontario Temperance Act. I am hoping that it will be well supported. While I do not think the act is perfect, yet I do think, in spite of imperfections, conditions in Ontario have improved.

Prof. G. M. Wrong, Head of the Department of History, U. of T.: I have not found it easy to make up my mind. The present act is a rather clumsy measure and ought to be improved. But I am not impressed by the argument that it interferes unduly with personal liberty. Shall we abandon compulsory education or a protective tariff for the same reason? Nor does the argument that people will refuse to obey the law impress me as a reason for repealing it. Probably, for nine people out of ten in Ontario the Ontario Temperance Act has little personal significance. Normal, healthy people use liquor either sparingly or not at all, and they can satisfy their needs under the terms of the present act. Shall we accept the principle that we must repeal a law because a small minority of lawbreakers say they will not obey it? Shall we repeal laws protecting property because thieves are persistent? Here we have a really grave issue. It is no argument against the Ontario Temperance Act that it is frequently violated. To abandon it for that reason would be to surrender to anarchy. Much good has come to us under the act, if also some evil. I am going to vote for it as against Government control upon which the people are not asked to place any restrictions.

BROKEN FRIENDSHIPS STREWN ON FIELD OF LINDSAY'S O. T. A. FIGHT

Ministerial Association's Strictures on the Rev. Canon Marsh's Attitude Toward O.T.A Drew Many Protests From Citizens—Feeling Fired To a High Pitch.

MANY VOTES MAY BE TURNED.

LINDSAY, October 23. — With rumours of libel actions, threatened divisions in church congregations, and near pugilistic encounters on the street, this town faces the issue to-day with the citizens worked up to a high pitch.

Never in the history of political contests—Federal, Provincial, or municipal—has such feeling existed as is in evidence to-day. The unfortunate part of it is that it will leave its impress on the people for some time, and will create a breach that only time will heal.

Attack Deplored.

Tuesday's issue of the Post contained letters of protest from bankers as well as the Mayor and ex-Mayors of the town against what they characterise as an unfair attack on the honesty and integrity of Canon Marsh because he had the courage of his convictions and stated his position on the issue before the people.

The attack on the venerable Canon is deplored on all sides.

Many supporters of Prohibition have voiced their protests, and have come out in defence of the Canon, who has been a resident of Lindsay for over thirty years.

Ministerial Silence.

It was expected that the members of the Ministerial Association, who fathered the communication that provoked the storm, would have replied to the letters of protest, but nothing was published in Wednesday's issue of the Post—not even a last minute appeal from the organisation in support of the O.T.A.

It is claimed that the incident has turned many votes into the Government control column, and many predict that the O.T.A. will be defeated in Lindsay, although the advocates of Prohibition claim that they will carry the town.

JOSEPH PICARD BURIED TO-DAY

Merchant For Many Years on George Street Succumbed To Illness of Eight Months.

DIED ON TUESDAY.

A new grave in St. Peter's cemetery received this morning, with the solemn blessings of the church he had loved so well and so dutifully served, the body of Joseph Picard, who died at his home, 299 Maitland Avenue, late on Tuesday evening, in his 73rd year.

The death of Mr. Picard creates another gap in the diminishing ranks of the business men of the old town from which the present city has developed. Few of the merchant associates and friends of his vigorous years are left. Most of them were gone before he was called, their names disappearing one by one from the stores which seemed so long to be inseparable from their lives and personalities. And as their numbers dwindle and new faces are seen in their places, the years that were theirs merge more definitely into the past, vanishing with their work, and their generation.

Joseph Picard was one of Peterboro's oldest citizens and business men. Born in the province of Quebec in 1851, he had been a resident of this city for sixty years, and had been in business here forty years. He was best known throughout this district in his connection with the men's clothing store of H. LeBrun & Co. Employed for a long time by the late Harry LeBrun, who was one of the prominent figures in the old town's affairs, Mr. Picard became proprietor of the business he had materially helped to build up, and continued to direct it until his retirement, two years ago, when his son, the late Joseph Picard, Junior, succeeded him.

It was in these continuous contacts with the public that the late Mr. Picard became known to so many citizens and farmers, both men and women, and in this searching test, through personal dealings, Mr. Picard's characteristics of integrity and kindliness were revealed in their clear light, winning for him an enviable measure of confidence and esteem by which he will always be remembered by those who knew him. His patrons became his friends to such an extent that few of his fellow merchants acquired for their investments as much of that intangible asset of good-will as he did.

He lived for the most part of his married life in the house at the south-west corner of Lock and Romaine streets. There his family grew up, and there, too, he found himself in the new Catholic parish of the Sacred Heart, whose congregation remembers him as an exemplary Christian, always actively interested in the welfare of the new church. In particular he was supervisor of the sanctuary boys, some of whom have since been elevated to the priesthood or are studying for it. Mr. Picard's original directions to the sanctuary boys have become something of a tradition in the Church of the Sacred Heart, of which he was a member from its opening and dedication until he moved from the parish a few years ago. A good citizen, unassuming, and with deep and broad sympathies, a practical Christian, Joseph Picard will live in the memory of his friends by the kindly, gentle and, withal, manly nature which had won and retained his friendships.

His illness covered a period of eight months.

He is survived by his wife, three sons, Alphonse Picard, of New Rochelle, N.Y., Leo A. Picard, of Lansing, Mich., and Euclid J. Picard, at home; and three daughters, Mrs. George Pope, of Windsor; Mrs. William Hickey, of this city, and Sister Marie of Mount St. Joseph.

Mr. Picard was predeceased by his eldest son, Louis Joseph Picard, four months ago, by his daughter Alma, and by his son, Captain Romulus Picard, who was killed in action overseas.

FUNERAL TO-DAY.

The esteem in which the late Joseph Picard was held in the city was evidenced by the numbers that attended the funeral mass in St. Peter's Cathedral this morning, when His Lordship Bishop O'Brien celebrated the funeral mass and preached the sermon. His Lordship was assisted by Rev. Father McAuley, of Ennismore, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Rev. Father Costello, and the service was attended by Monsignor McColl, Rev. Father Butler, Rev. Father Finn and Rev. Father McGuire.

In his address, His Lordship referred in touching terms to the Christian life of the deceased, and to the good example he had set in his dealings with the public. He was a credit to the city, and no good work in the Church lacked his assistance. Throughout this life he maintained the highest standard of morals, making his Church and his city better for having been associated with them.

The pall-bearers were: L. D. Letellier, P. J. Doris, W. Pope, I. Hickey, John Corkery, Sr., and W. Merrell.

BETHANY MAN DEAD.

John Cairns Was a Pioneer Resident of Manvers Township.

BETHANY, October 23. — The death occurred on Wednesday of Mr. John Cairns, Sr., at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. Lee, Fleetwood. Mr. Cairns visited his daughter in usual good health a short time ago, and before leaving for his home took ill, and was confined to bed until the time of his death.

He and his wife emigrated from Ireland 61 years ago, and resided in the Township of Manvers since coming to Canada.

Mr. Cairns was a highly respected citizen and an industrious farmer.

Although 82 years of age, he assisted with the root crop and other farm work of a light nature during the past summer.

He leaves to mourn his loss a sorrowing widow, four sons and a daughter — William of Fraaklin, Lavid of Bethany, Richard and John at home, and Mrs. H. Lee, of Fleetwood.

The funeral will be held on Friday afternoon from the family residence to St. Mary's Cemetery, where interment will take place.

FRENCH CANCEL VATICAN GRANT

Appropriation For Embassy at St. Peter's Defeated By 20 to 12.

AVOID SOVIETS.

PARIS, Oct. 23. — (Canadian Press).—The Finance Committee of the Chamber of Deputies yesterday heard Premier Herriot on the Government's viewpoints on two questions which are occupying much attention—an appropriation for the French Embassy at the Vatican and one for the resumption of diplomatic relations with Russia.

The Premier recalled that his Ministerial declaration had promised suppression of the Vatican Embassy and the committee voted for the suppression of this appropriation by 20 votes against 12.

Deputy Maurice Bokanowski attempted to draw out the opinion of the committee on the Russian matter by moving an appropriation of 500,000 francs for the installation of the French Embassy at Moscow. Leon Blum, Socialist leader, moved an adjournment of this motion on the ground that there was no government text dealing with it before the committee and an adjournment was carried by 20 votes against 3.

GREEKS APPEAL TO THE LEAGUE AGAINST TURKS

Protest Against Arrest of 3,000 Nationals in Constantinople at Bayonet Point.

THROWN INTO JAIL.

Turks Ignore the Lausanne Treaty and Allied Commission is Impotent.

GENEVA, Oct. 23. — (Canadian Press).—With the recent alleged wholesale arrests of Greek residents of Constantinople, followed last night by a special request from the Greek Government that the question of the expulsion of Greeks from Turkey be placed on the agenda of the special session of the League of Nations council, which opens in Brussels Monday, Greece has invoked Article XI. of the League covenant into the controversy.

This article is used as the basis for the present action, Greece alleging that the expulsion of the Hellenic population from Constantinople is contrary to the provisions of the special convention for the exchange of Greek and Turkish populations which was adopted at the Lausanne conference as an annex to the peace conference.

Concern Whole League.

As Article XI. declares that any war or threat of war is a matter of concern to the whole League which may take any action that it deems wise and effective to safeguard the peace of nations. It also declares that it is friendly right of each member of the League to bring to the attention of the assembly or the council any circumstances whatever affecting international relations which may threat to disturb the international peace or good understanding between nations.

The annex of the Lausanne treaty provided for the compulsory exchange of Turks resident in Greece with Greeks living in Turkey, but it was expressly stipulated that these Greeks who settled in Constantinople before 1918 should not be disturbed. Recent advices from Constantinople told of the wholesale arrests of Greek residents and their imprisonment. The League of Nations is aiding in the work of carrying out the compulsory exchange of populations.

Routed From Beds.

A despatch from Constantinople says that at the point of the bayonet, routing their victims from bed, Turkish police have taken matters of exchange of populations with Greece into their own hands and marched some 3,000 Greeks to imprisonment in the historic Fortress of the Seven Towers.

The Greeks, who were hustled off without being permitted to bring along belongings, included many who were not to be exchanged.

A child suffering from smallpox was dragged off to the fortress, old men and women were prodded along the road by the armed convoys, and in one instance, a baker's boy, his hands and apron still white with flour, was hurried away.

The Greek population is terror-stricken.

The Turkish police claim the Greeks seized belong to a category slated for exchange, and that they have delayed too long after obtaining passports.

Strong protests have been made to the mixed inter-allied commission, but the commission has been unable to check the arrests. Kemal Pasha, Turkish dictator, is at Angora.

DROVE OVER WOLF.

Motorist at Fort William Claimed Bounty For Pelt.

FORT WILLIAM, Oct. 23. — While Fred Empringham and G. C. McCarthy were driving in their car along the road from Fort William south, two wolves sprang out of the woods and ran ahead of the car. The driver stepped on the gas and gave chase, and after a run of about half a mile, one of the apimals turned off into the bush, but the other stayed on the roadway zig-zagging from side to side, with the car on it's heels, until the front wheels hit it and the car passed over the body. Stopping the car, the drivers went back to pick up the wolf, which was apparently dead, but found that he had stil enough life to snap at them and they had to finish him with a wrench from their tool box. They have brought the pelt to the city to claim bounty.

LADY ASTOR SILENCED BY SOCIALIST CROWD

Retired to the Chorus of "The Red Flag" in Plymouth.

PLYMOUTH, Eng., Oct. 23. — Lady Astor, who is seeking re-election to parliament, had a lively open air meeting yesterday, when she fought for an hour in the Socialist centre of her consituency. Continuous interruptions, however, prevented her from delivering her speech.

While she parried gibes with good humor and witty retorts, a gang of children stripped her automobile of Astorite literature, substituting that of her Socialist opponent. They sang lustily "The Red Flag" when Lady Astor left the scene.

AMERICAN GIRL REAL PRINCESS

Prince Viggo and Bride Received By Danish Royal Family.

WAS ELEANOR GREEN.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Prince Viggo, cousin of King Christian, and his bride, who was Miss Eleanor Green, of New York, arrived in Copenhagen yesterday. They were welcomed at the station by King Christian and Queen Alexandrina, and Prince Waldemar, father of Viggo, Prince Knud, Prince Axel, Prince Gustav and Prince Harold and Princesses Thyra, Helen and Margaretha.

Prince Waldemar kissed the Princess as she alighted from the train. Prince Viggo then introduced his wife to the King and Queen, and the Queen affectionately kissed the bride.

Officers and friends of Prince Viggo presented his princess with a bouquet of flowers. Thousands of persons who had awaited the home-coming of the Prince and his wife cheered them lustily as they drove through Copenhagen for luncheon at the Palace with the King and Queen and members of the royal family.

Prince and Princess Viggo spent the afternoon paying official visits, and had tea with Marie Feodorovna, former Dowager-Empress of Russia. It had been planned to hold a gala dinner last night in honor of the bride and bridegroom, but owing to the serious illness of Dowager Queen Louise, only an ordinary family dinner, restricted to the immediate members of the royal household, was held.

Prince and Princess Viggo will take up their temporary home in Bernstorff House, which was previously occupied by Prince and Princess Axel. According to the Ekstrabladet, the couple will share the house with Prince Waldemar.

LONG NECKLACES

Bead neckaces of all lengths are noticed from the choker bands to the strings that reach to the knees. There are also combinations of chokers and longer strings of smaller beads.

DAWES PLAN IS MAKING PEACE

More Charity and Goodwill In Europe Than For Ten Years.

HOWARD SPEAKS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press). — Although the Dawes reparation plan has been in operation but a short time, there is "more hope, more goodwill, aye, and more charity abroad in Europe than there has been for ten years at least, if not almost from time immemorial," Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador to the United States, declared in an address yesterday at a luncheon of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation.

Speaking upon the general subject of economics in international politics and international trade as a factor for peace, the Ambassador also referred to past activities of certain concession hunters and company promoters in world fields, which sometimes have threatened the peace of the world. He declared that there is "only one way to eliminate this possible danger to peace and goodwill, and that is by the strict application of the doctrine of the 'open door'."

"If there is one thing we have learned during the last few strenuous and terrible years," he said, "it is the necessity of recognizing the value of economics in international politics. Nothing has, I believe, ever brought this so home to the world as the struggle over the Dawes reparation scheme which brought the whole question out of the murky atmosphere of sentiment and politics down onto the bedrock of hard economic fact and proved to those interested that it is, when you come to dealing in sums required for reparations, almost as difficult to receive them without upsetting the economic apple-cart as to pay them.

"Peace—lasting, enduring, is the greatest objective of any statesman to-day," he said. "War—modern war—can only be destructive and ruinous in an ever-increasing degree. It is your business, you who are interested in world commerce and affairs — to see to it that your business is not such as to endanger peace and goodwill among nations."

BRINGS HEALTH

Every family would be healthier for a green salad served daily with a dressing of oil and lemon juice rather than a mayonnaise sauce.

LUNCHEON DISH

Escalloned squash served with bacon makes a very good luncheon dish.

FRENCH TO TAX DIVORCE MILL

So Many Americans Seeking Decrees in Paris That $1,000 Levy is Planned.

300 Women Ask Freedom.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—The scandal of the American divorce mill in Paris has attained such proportions that it is learned the French government proposes to use the situation for its own profit by nistituting a tax of $1,000 on foreign divorces.

Sixty wealthy American couples have been divorced here since June while since 1921 only one divorce has been contested or refused. So profitable has the business become that some of the most reputable lawyers here, as well as several from New York, now handle practically no other cases.

Malone Heads Field

Dudley Field Malone, who maintains offices in New York, Paris and Nice, probably does the largest divorce business with an average of two prominent cases every month. It is even reported that Attorney Malone guarantees not only to divorce, but to provide a temporary home in Paris while papers are being prepared.

The luxurious mansion at No. 23, Rue de Varenne, which is fitted up with apartments especially adapted for women seeking their freedom, is cited as an example of these temporary homes. Malone also maintains a flat there when in Paris.

Altogether there are nineteen lawyers here who specialize in divorce, all of whom have magnificent offices. These lawyers do everything but advertise to divorce you while you wait.

Cost is $10,000

All any American couple yearning for freedom from each other needs to do is to put themselves into the hands of one of the lawyers and write a large check. The complainant must appear one time before a judge in a private hearing, and a few months later the divorce is automatically granted.

At the present moment it is conservatively estimated that 300 American women are living in Paris awaiting decrees. The average divorce costs $10,000.

RED FLAGGERS IN SCOTLAND MADE STORMY SCENES

Several Speakers Of Old Parties Forced To Abandon Their Addresses.

FREE FIGHTS.

Asquith and Horne Both Harried By Disorderly and Hostile Crowds.

LONDON, Oct. 23. — (Canadian Press).—Wild and stormy receptions were given prominent Liberals and Conservatives in several meetings held in Scotland last evening, and in one or two instances the scheduled addresses had to be abandoned. H. H. Asquith, Liberal leader, was the recipient of cat calls and fierce yells at a meeting which he addressed in Paisley. On rising to speak he was greeted with the singing of "The Red Flag," and the disorder prevented him from speaking for several minutes. Mr. Asquith, however, stool calmly on the platform and appeared determined to proceed with his speech. Order prevailed for a time, but the disorder broke out again, and his remarks were punctured by interruptions which, at one stage, brought the proceedings to a standstill. Several prominent Unionists of the city occupied seats on the platform.

Worse in Glasgow.

At Glasgow Sir Robert Horne fared much worse than Mr. Asquith. The meeting at which Sir Robert was billed to speak was very noisy before proceedings commenced, but when the former Chancellor of the Exchequer made an effort to speak pandemonium broke loose and wild scenes resulted. Free fights occurred, and several of the wild demonstrators were ejected, while the women attending the meeting rushed screaming to the platform for safety.

Sir Robert was forced to abandon attempts to speak, and left the hall in confusion.

Uses Loud Speaker.

Sir Laming Worthington Evans, Postmaster-General in the Baldwin Government, who is again the Conservative candidate in Colchester, Essex, scoffs at attempts to howl him down at his meetings in Colchester.

Sir Laming keeps a microphone round his neck, and this is connected with loud speakers in different parts of the hall in which he is holding a meeting. He told a reporter yesterday that it was useless for any gang to try to shout him down or even to beat gongs to drown his voice, as by the use of the loud speakers the interrupters got tired first.

Premier's Tour.

Premier MacDonald, who returned to his constituency, Aberavon, yesterday, from his latest 500-mile motor trip, told the electors that he had travelled over 1,700 miles and addressed over 90 meetings in the past ten days.

The Premier said that in the tour just ended he had found such enthusiasm for the Labor cause as he had never before seen.

THE WEATHER

Already the most of our summer birds have taken their departure to a southerly and warmer clime, and occasionally a flock of wild geese may be seen, high in the air, with their peculiar V-shape formation, swiftly winging their way in the same direction. What is it that urges the birds at this season to seek a new habitation? What gives them the sense of direction, in that they fly unerringly to their winter home, and as unerringly return to their summer residence? That the same birds and the members of their family, return to the same neighborhood, and frequently to the same nests, is generally believed. It is called instinct, but this is a poor explanation of what is a mystery in Nature. Some of our land birds migrate to South Carolina ,others go to the West Indies, a few seek South America, while the water fowl obtain food and shelter in marshes along the coast of the Gulf of Mexico. The greatest traveller of them all is said to be the plover, which at one season lives in the Argentine and Patagonia, and at another season obtains a living and raises a family in Northern sections of Canada.—W.P.

USE GLASS JARS.

Never keep vinegar in stone crocks, as the acid is apt to attack the glazing and make the liquid unfit for use. Glass jars are best.

MICHAEL HANEY AMONG FORMER HOME BANK MEN

He Will Appear in Court on Charges of Conspiracy and the Issuing of False Prospectuses.

TWO CONVICTED.

Charges Against Smith and Jones Omitted From New Indictment.

TORONTO, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Michael John Haney, president of the Home Bank of Canada from 1917 to 1919, is among the former directors of that institution who will be proceeded against in High Court on charges of conspiracy and the issuing of false prospectuses, it became known last night.

Since Monday last the nature of the new indictment preferred by the Attorney-General of Ontario had been kept a close secret, but yesterday the indictment was handed to the Grand Jury in Assizes by Chief Justice Meredith at a request of Attorney-General W. F. Nickle. Late yesterday afternoon a true bill was returned by the Grand Jury, but was not dealt with by His Lordship, who was engaged in the Peter Smith-Jarvises-Pepall trial. Chief Justice Will received the Grand Jury's finding this morning.

Late last night Mr. Nickle intimated that it was not improbable that a bench warrant for Mr. Haney's arrest would be issued from the High Court this morning, and that he will be called upon to provide bail pending the trial in order to place him on the same footing as the other accused.

Those mentioned in the old indictment, stay of which, amounting almost to Nolle Prosequi, was granted on Monday last by Chief Justice Meredith, are included with Mr. Haney in the new indictment: R. P. Gough, vice-president: F. T. B. Russill, J. F. M. Stewart, C. A. Barnard, K.C.; S. Casey Wood, K.C., and Clarence F. Smith, who is now on trial before Judge Coatsworth.

Charges on the old indictment against Ocean G. Smith, former chief accountant of the bank, and Sydney H. Jones, former auditor of the bank, are omitted from the new indictment, as is also the name of the late H. J. Daley, president of the Home Bank at the time of its collapse. Smith and Jones have both been convicted in the County Court Judges' Criminal Court on counts of negligence in connection with the monthly and annual returns to the Minister of Finance.

In the new indictment there are four counts, it is stated, among which are charges of conspiracy to defraud between January 1, 1915, and August 17, 1923, the date of the bank's suspension.

One of the largest of "slow" assets of the defunct Home Bank of Canada is going to bring a large sum almost immediately into the coffers of the liquidators, and ultimately will add to the credit of the depositors and shareholders. This asset is known as the New Orleans Railway deal, in which the bank is interested in to the amount of $1,100,000.

A special despatch last night from New Orleans said the local financiers there were now in direct communication with Toronto and had made an offer for the purchase of the railway through the Home Bank liquidators. A New Orleans despatch said that the amount to be offered for properties totals more than three-quarters of a million dollars.

FINNS PASS QUADRUPLE TARIFF BILL.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Oct. 23 —Parliament passed the final reading of the Government's new tariff bill Tuesday by a vote of 104 to 82. Under the bill the Government is authorized to increase up to four times the present maximum duties on imports from countries which have no treaty with Finland or which treat Finnish imports less favorably than those from other countries.

VIOLENCE SHOWN IN THE ELECTION CAMPAIGN TO-DAY

Young Man Cut From Mouth To Ear By a Razor. STONES USED.

Several Injured By Wrenches in the Hands of Hecklers.

(By Lloyd Allen, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, October 23. — Razors, bottles, wrenches, and stones figured in the British election campaign today.

Violence reminiscent of the days of the Suffragettes and the Irish disturbers marred the meetings in many constituencies.

A 22-year-old Dulwich man was sent to the hospital in a critical condition with a razor gash from mouth to ear, received in a melee designed to break up a Conservative meeting.

In South London a man was knocked unconscious with a bottle, and several others were severely injured by wrenches in the hands of hecklers.

At a Derbyshire Conservative meeting, Candidate Sherwood called Kelly a liar. Kelly left the platform and knocked the man down.

Sir Robert Horne was obliged to abandon a speech at Glasgow because of the wild disorders.

Lady Nancy Astor faced a hostile crowd at Plymouth during an open-air meeting. Children stripped her automobile of posters of herself and substituted those of her Labour opponent.

The Liberal candidate who is opposing the Communist, Parsee Saklatvalla, in North Battersea, was hit in the eye by a stone hurled at him while touring the constituency in a motor car.

Premier MacDonald continued a most active campaign in Aberavon.

Stanley Baldwin who, many believe, will come back to the Premiership, speaks to-day at Gravesend, completing his campaign of the South of England and starts tomorrow for the North of England and Scotland on the most strenuous tour of his career.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1924.

JOSEPH PICARD.

A link with the past has been snapped in the death of Mr. Joseph Picard, one of Peterborough's oldest residents and well-known business men.

Mr. Picard came, a boy of thirteen years of age, from the Province of Quebec to Peterborough, then a straggling village, 60 years ago, and ever since had been a citizen of this community.

For over forty years he was engaged in business here, having been associated with the firm of H. LeBrun & Company, until he retired two years ago.

A man of rugged honesty, gentle courtesy, and generally interested in his fellow-man, Joseph Picard's life story could be summed up in one phrase, "Here was a good citizen."

Although he took a keen but quiet interest in municipal and political affairs, he never sought public honours, devoting himself to his business and his family, and satisfied to leave to others the spotlight.

One by one the pioneer residents of Peterborough have passed out, leaving the city the poorer for their departure and the death of Mr. Picard causes another gap in the ranks that will be indeed difficult to fill.

STEADY IMPROVEMENTS AHEAD.

The address given before the local Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday night by Mr. I. R. Hanna of Babson's statistical organization is the kind of tonic that Canada needs just now.

Mr. Hanna talks with the conviction of a man who knows what he is talking about.

He has studied Canada, systematically delved into trade and market conditions, weighed his evidence with the icy impartiality of an expert, and his verdict must be accepted as accurate.

When such an investigator declares emphatically that seventy per cent. of the period of depression has been accomplished, that Canada has gone down to rock bottom and is now building upward on a very firm foundation, Canadians generally should view the future with fresh hope and courage.

Mr. Hanna's statement that his organization did not expect a boon, but there was no reason why there should not be a steady improvement in business during the next year, is most encouraging.

Conditions are on the mend, the worst is over, and from now on there will be a brighter story—that is what the statistician declares, and his prophesy is not based upon hearsay evidence, but upon solid facts gleaned after an expert and exhaustive survey of the conditions throughout the country.

A NEW MUNICIPAL LAW.

Municipalities will welcome the announcement that the Ontario Government hopes to achieve a clarified municipal law at the next session of the Legislature.

The preliminary steps have already been taken in the issuing of instructions to the committee which is to revise the Province's statutes to concentrate immediately upon the Assessment and Municipal Acts.

These two measures, which, of course, are of supreme importance in connection with the government of the cities, towns and villages of the Province, have gradually become entangled in such a network of amendments and changes that their original principles have been hopelessly obscured.

They need to be simplified, have the ambiguities that have arisen removed and the provisions so clearly set forth that there will be little doubt of their meaning.

Such a reform will have most beneficial results, particularly in view of Premier Ferguson's announcement that once this clarification and consolidation have been effected it is his intention to discourage as far as possible any amendments to the legislation until a fair test has been made in actual practice of the new Acts.

Every session sees a flock of amendments, and if the Premier succeeds in securing an adequate revision of the municipal law and in protecting it from the tinkers who always want to try their hand upon it, he will have done a splendid thing for the Province, and at the same time relieved the Legislature of a lot of unnecessary work.

ONTARIO STILL ONTARIO.

When this article appears the result of today's voting will be on the knees of the gods; it will not be known whether Ontario has remained faithful to the Ontario Temperance Act or has decided to try out a system of Government control.

Whatever the answer proves to be the Examiner is sure that the people will receive the verdict philosophically and continue to carry on as good Canadians.

Our old friend, Hon. E. C. Drury, said during the campaign that if Ontario adopted Government control this Province would be the Mexico of North America.

This is not the first time in which the Examiner finds itself unable to agree with the Crown Hill statesman.

We have faith enough in the people of this Province to believe that no matter what method of dealing with the liquor problem may be in operation, the vast majority of them will be decent, honest folks, as they have always been under prohibition and before that, in the days of the open bar.

Whatever good things may be said about prohibition there is no logic in claiming that countries that are dry have a monopoly of all the virtues of good citizenship, decency and respect for law and order.

The manner in which justice is administered in the British Isles as compared with conditions across the border furnishes proof enough that the character of a nation is not to be judged by the number of restrictive laws it sees fit to adopt, but by the personality of the people that make up its population.

Ontario folks have always been law-abiding and orderly, and no matter what answer is given today there is no reason to expect that the moral fibre of the population is to be changed overnight.

Ontario will continue to be Ontario and its people good Canadians whether the verdict favours the Ontario Temperance Act or swings to the side of Government control.

SITTING ON A SAFETY VALVE.

It is far better for a Red to speak from a soapbox on the street corner than to denounce the Government secretly in some cellar where he does not have the safety valve of the open air and evolves destructive schemes.

This is the belief of Dr. J. J. McConnell, Methodist bishop of Pittsburg.

When Tom Johnson, of far and sane vision, was mayor of Cleveland, he had the same idea. In his local public square he erected a large "free speech" stone from which anybody at any hour could rise and say anything he wanted to, within bounds of decency, without interference from police.

Tom considered that stone a safety valve. It worked to perfection. Came the war. Police dragged down a speaker agitating against the draft. This shut off the safety valve. A riot followed.

The quickest way for entrenched power and special privilege to breed its own destruction is to tie down the safety valve—attempt to strangle free speech.

Oratory is the natural outlet or safety valve of the average so-called "agitator." Confine that energy, without its natural outlet, and there's danger of an explosion.

No democratic country can have revolution as long as free speech and free press are not interfered with. Change may come, but peaceably.

That is the British theory and it has always worked.

The channels of discontent must be kept open, urges Bishop McConnell. It may startle the conservative and rich, but super-Reds are theoretically against free speech. In this sense:

Cunning revolutionists know that free speech is a safety valve. They know that discontent becomes explosive when deprived of expression.

They further know, all that the average "radical" wants to do is talk. Sometimes this desire to assault oratorically is a mania.

They have their say . . . talk themselves hoarse. Then, exhausted or at least with the bulk of their agitating resistance vented, they go quietly home to rest up for another spouting.

Let these boys talk and they won't start fires. Meantime, sane orators and sane newspapers—impartial, far-seeing—will gradually bring any needed changes peacefully.

Free speech and free press are the safety valves of democracy.

GERMANY'S ELECTION.

In Great Britain the second general election campaign to be waged within the space of a year is nearing its close. In Germany, the Reichstag elected at the beginning of last May has been dissolved and a new one is to be constituted by the votes of the people in about six weeks. In Great Britain, a Government, which lacked a majority of members of its own party in the House of Commons, held office when it could command support from one of two other parties and suffered defeat when those two parties united against it.

In Germany, multiplication of political parties has been carried to far greater lengths than in Britain and government has been possible only by coalitions, alliances between groups based on mutual concessions. Governments of the Republic have been able to rule only so long as they have been able to hold the support of several parties in the Reichstag, and some of them have been short-lived. Prior to the general election of May last, the Reichstag of 459 members included 173 Socialists, 68 members of the Centre or Roman Catholic party, 67 of the Nationalist party, 66 of the People's party, 39 Democrats, 20 of the Bavarian People's party, 15 Communists and 11 members of other minor groups. In the last general election it was said, not less than twenty-six distinct party groups were represented by candidates for election. In that contest, in which the reports of the international committees on the reparations question was the outstanding issue, the Socialists lost ground. They secured only some 103 seats. On the other hand, the parties of the extreme right and left both made gains. The Nationalists carried 96 seats and the Communists carried sixty seats. Prior to that election, the Government of Chancellor Marx ruled through a combination of the Centre party, to which he belonged, the People's party, of which Foreign Minister Stresemann is head, and the Democratic party, and was aided by the Socialists. After the May election, Chancellor Marx was confronted by new problems. He had to take cognizance of the facts that some of the legislation necessary to give effect to the Dawes plan required a two-thirds vote of the Reichstag, that one wing of the Nationalists favored rejection of that plan and another criticized it, but did not advocate its unconditional rejection. He set himself to gain the support of the moderate Nationalists for the plan and succeeded. Since then he has been endeavoring to re-organize the coalition government in order to strengthen its hold upon office during the early period of operation of the expert committees' scheme.

Chancellor Marx has been unable to accomplish his object. He has found that he cannot satisfy the demands of the Nationalists without sacrificing the support of the Democrats, who are unwilling to accord a large share in the government of the Republic to the party of the monarchists and the junkers. The Chancellor, therefore, has obtained a dissolution of the Reichstag and paved the way for a general election. Germany, however, has gone too far forward in the application of the expert committees' plan to retrace its steps now. Moreover, the people's vote at the last election was interpreted as a declaration in favor of acceptance of that plan.—Mail and Empire.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Even tonight it won't be easy to tell how the bootleggers voted.

The Examiner will bulletin the returns tonight, so please don't ask too many questions over the telephone.

Whatever the result Ontario should accept the verdict cheerfully and settle down to work.

Now the plebiscite campaign is over will come the question of early Christmas shopping and the municipal elections.

The people who did not vote today—and there were many of them—were the only folks who really lost their votes.

The St. Catharines Standard, pointing out that all the newspapers are knocking the bathing girl on the windshield, asks: "How in the world can she stay there?" Because she is a sticker, of course.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, October 23. — Butchers' cows yesterday were again wanted by the packers, and fair to good cows sold at $4.00 to $4.50.

Loads of poor, medium butchers went to the scales at $5.00, and some common mixed butchers at $4.00 a cwt. The stocker and feeder trade, and also the springer trade, has shown more vitality this week. One firm has shipped out 300 head of stockers and feeders since Monday, and Eddie Parsons is sending out 130. The average price of good feeders, 900 to 1,000 pounds each, is $5.00, and stockers are going from $3.25 to $4.50 a cwt.

About 50 steers were bought for export from $5.50 to $6.00 a cwt., but most of these will go to feeders. The Canadian Packing Company bought a bunch of good 250-pound butchers at $6.35 a cwt., and one bullock brought $6.75. All the butchers' cows on sale were competed for at firm prices. A few choice butchers' bulls sold from $4.75 to $5.00 and one sold at $5.50 a cwt.

The market was quite snappy all morning, and yesterday's offerings were brought up before the close.

The Buffalo market has flattened out on calves, but the local demand is good enough to take care of supplies at steady prices. Harold Waugh paid 11 1-2 cents for twelve nice calves yesterday morning, and other good ones were 10 and 10 1-2 cents. Medium calves are 8 to 9 cents, and heavies 6 to 7 cents. This market was decidedly strong.

Lambs have recovered Monday's 25 cent decline, and all good lambs were bringing 12 cents a pound yesterday. Full decks were taken at the regulation price of 12 cents, and select packages would sell a little higher. Choice handyweight sheep sold in bunches at 7 cents a pound.

The run of hogs is creeping up and although the packers are not getting many hogs at their bid price they appear to be satisfied that the $9.50 a cwt. f.o.b. will have to be accepted later.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, October 22. — The export business for grain here today was quiet, there being little demand from the English importers at prices that would be accepted. But there was some demand from local exporters for No. 1 Northern wheat, and sales were made at 13 3-4c per bushel over the Winnipeg option, C. I.F., Montreal.

Prices for oats in the cash coarse grain situatio were raised 1 to 2c per bushel, with Ontario No. 2 white at 64 to 65c and No. 3 grade at 61c per bushel ex-track. Ontario malting barley was steady with prices quoted at $1.08 for No. 3 extra grade, and No. 3 grade at $1.07 per bushel ex-track.

The feature of the baled hay market was the easier feeling that prevailed and prices were reduced $1.00 per ton, which was attributed to the larger supplies coming forward from the interior and the limited demand.

At 9 O'Clock Tomorrow Morning

More people will be in this store because of better light.

THE manager of a prominent departmental store says: "Two years ago, we were using 100 watt B lamps to light our show windows. A test showed that our windows were stopping 35% of the people who passed. Then our store was destroyed by fire, and in our new store (built on the same premises), we installed modern lighting equipment, and used 200 watt Edison Mazda C lamps.

Since then, repeated tests have shown that more than 65% of the passers-by stopped at our windows. And the right lighting, properly arranged in the interior of our store, has been largely responsible for the greatly increased volume of actual sales."

Make This Test.

BEGINNING to-night, count how many people pass your store, and what percentage of them stop to look at your displays. Then install Edison Mazda Lamps of larger size, and see how many more stop. Ask your lighting company or an Edison Mazda Lamp Agent to help you conduct the test, and show you the standard window and store lighting equipment for your type and size of store.

In the Presbyterian church Mr. H. B. Cowan of the Farm and Dairy and Mrs. R. G. Weir, Peterboro gave very strong temperance addresses. They spoke very earnestly and from a religious point of view. They emphasized the danger of indifference.

In the evening Dr. Atkinson and Dr. Munro spoke along temperance lines.

At the regular meeting of the U.F.W.O. held last Thursday afternoon at Mrs. E. R. Hamblin's home, the O.T.A. was discussed and the members decided to help get all the votes they can. The U.F.W.O. is out and out for O.T.A. Mrs. E. R. Hamblin gave a temperance reading and Mrs. John Cooper a comic one.

Old "B" Batteries Cause Noise.

An old "B" battery makes a receiving set noisy. As the battery becomes run down its resistence increases and gives rise to noises that are annoying, to say the least. When the voltage of the plate battery has dropped 20 per cent., it is advisable to replace it; thus a 22 1-2 volt battery becomes useless when it has dropped to 17 volts. Larger batteries can be figured in the same proportion.

DRUGS EXCITE THE KIDNEYS, DRINK WATER

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

INSECT PLAGUE MENACES U.S.A.

Greatest Grasshopper Army Since Biblical Days Devastating Mexico.

From Tropical Jungle.

MEXICO CITY, October 23. — One of the greatest and most devastating hordes of insect pests since Biblical days is now moving on the United States border.

It is made up of the grasshopper, or "longosta," as it is called in Mexico.

Until a few days ago it was believed by the Mexican entomologists that grasshoppers had been suppressed. Now they have reappeared at San Luis Potosi in greater numbers than ever. In their wake is an area of destruction that is amazing. Vast fields of sugar cane and corn that only a few days previously had been a mass of green, full plumage, have been stripped and resemble fields of pithy aigrettes.

All Green Stuff Gone.

Pastures where grass was knee-deep have been totally destroyed. Banana plants—in fact, everything green in the pests' way—have been preyed upon to feed the hungry billions.

Some idea of the proportions of the insect invasion may be had by these facts. When they are in flight they literally obscure the sun. On railroad tracks they are so thick that it is necessary to clear them away with shovels before the trains may move.

In many instances trains were unable to negotiate grades, because as fast as the pests were cleared away others came in and it was impossible for the engine drivers to secure traction.

This mighty horde originated on the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, probably one of the most luxuriant tropical jungles in the world. With abundant food, the grasshoppers multiplied amazingly. As they devoured the food there they started on their pilgrimage north and came as far as Vera Cruz, where they branched off and headed for Mexico City. When within a few miles of the capital they veered again. Here begins a vast plateau. There is scant population and little vegetation, except at this time of the year, the end of the rainy season. It was believed they would die out here because of insufficient food to maintain them.

Their appearance at San Luis Potosi, well on the way to the border, and at the beginning of a new and fertile area, Mexican Department of Agriculture officials declare, would make it seem certain that they will continue to the United States border and cross.

West Is Threatened.

It is believed that they will go into the United States along the Gulf Coast, where there is ample vegetation even in the winter, and that unless some means of destroying them is found they will begin their pilgrimage to the grain regions of the West with the advent of spring.

The estimate of the damage wrought by them here is placed at $20,000,000, but this is only an estimate because of the difficulty of communication and the compilation of statistics.

In addition to this, the natives in the lowlands are attributing to them the spread of a particularly virulent tropical fever, a superstition, the authorities say, which they are having great difficulty in dissipating.

QUEENSLAND LOSES $55,000,000 ON ROADS

Auditor General's Report Shows Heavy Deficit on State-Owned Lines For Ten Years.

SYDNEY, Oct. 22.—The Auditor General for the Socialist State of Queensland, in a report just issued, shows that the total deficit for the last ten years in the State-owned and operated railroads is $55,000,000.

Ten years ago, when the Socialists came into power under the name of the Labor Party, the State railways showed a surplus of almost $250,000.

The Auditor General's report shows that the State owns eighty-one lines of railroad, comprising a mileage of 6,174. Of these lines only six were operated at a profit during the last year. Twenty-seven lines earned enough to pay working expenses, but only part of the interest due on them, the aggregate deficit under the interest heading being $300,000. The other lines not only did not pay the interest, but did not meet working expenses. Their loss to the State was about $4,500,000.

Opposition critics in Queensland points to the report as evidence of the bad business in railroad construction, which has not ended, in view of another 500 miles of road now being under construction and further extensions contemplated.

The Railroad Minister for the State explains the condition by declaring that the Government opposition is unwilling to understand the Government's policy and the true relationship between the railroad and State economics.

MOSCOW'S POPULATION 1,772,000

MOSCOW, Oct. 22.—Moscow's population increased to 1,772,000 last year, or 11 per cent. over the previous year, according to the official census. This represents a gain of 200,000 over the pre-war figures. The birth-rate was 30 per 1,000, as compared with 26.5 before the revolution. The population of Leningrad increased by 8.4 per cent.

Macklin—Farrow.

The marriage took place at Edville, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Farrow, of their daughter, Miss Grace, and Mr. John Percival Macklin, Cobourg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Macklin, Plainville. The house was beautifully decorated with autumn flowers for the happy event. There were about forty guests present. The bride entered the room with her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a becoming gown of tan canton crepe, and carried brides' roses. The bridesmaid was Miss Jean McColl, Belleville, cousin of the bride, who wore blue canton crepe, and carried roses. The bride's niece, little Dorothy Walker, made a charming flower girl, wearing a pretty blue frock and carrying a basket of white flowers. Mr. Cecil Macklin attended his brother as groomsman, and Rev. H. W. Foley conducted the ceremony.

One of the girl friends of the bride played the wedding march. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome bar pin, and to the best man a scarf pin. The bridesmaid and pianist each received a ring, and the little flower girl a dainty ring also.

After the wedding ceremony a delectable luncheon was served, after which the bride and groom slipped away and motored to Cobourg, where they boarded the flyer for Western points. They will reside in Cobourg.

WITHDRAWAL OF TROOPS CONTINUES FROM RUHR

French and Belgian Armies of Occupation Evacuate Cities.

PARIS, Oct. 23. — (Canadian Press)—News of the Franco-Belgian evacuation of the Ruhr is being strictly limited to the barest announcements of a few facts. A semi-official despatch from Mayence last evening said that French troops Tuesday evacuated Mannhim, Carlsruhe and Rheinau while the Belgians left Emmerich and Wessel. Yesterday the French evacuated the zones of Dortmund, Remsheid, Wohwbaket and Limburg, the departure of the troops being effected without incident. Following these evacuations the French Fortieth Division is re-entering France, being replaced at Coblenz by the Thirty Eighth Division which has been withdrawn from the Ruhr.

Pillars of a Nation's Gateway

"ENDING NOWHERE!" The Western terminus of Canada's first great railway was a clearing in the forest. Victoria hardly more than a village. British Columbia a mining colony of a few thousand people.

Wise heads nodded grave concern over the "2,500 miles of rails ending nowhere."

Yet the man who built the Canadian Pacific, then the world's longest railroad, saw what all see now—not only a road to Vancouver, but a highway through Canada to the Orient.

On this highway, at the Western gateway, two great cities rear their heads. Great they are, and growing greater. They typify the wealth of a wealthy Province. But their position on the Pacific links them directly with the nation's commerce and brings them within the greater circle of world trade.

Ending nowhere! From this unknown port last year fifty-seven million bushels of wheat were loaded in ships for the world markets. Two hundred and ninety million feet of lumber were exported. A dozen cities and towns have sprung into being to turn British Columbia's resources into wealth, and to augment the traffic that passes in and out of the Great Western Ports.

Nowhere, indeed! Forty short years have placed Vancouver and Victoria in a commanding position on the international and national charts of trade.

EMPLOYEES TO BE GIVEN BANK

President of California's Largest Financial Institution Plans Benefit.

BOARD APPROVES.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 23.—Twenty years ago A. P. Giannini, commission merchant, gave his business, then one of the largest of its kind, to his employes. Today he was ready to resign as president of the Bank of Italy as the first move in a plan to permit the 20,000 employes of California's largest financial institution to take over control of the bank. The board of directors of the institution yesterday approved the plan proposed by Mr. Giannini.

As a preliminary move Mr. Giannini is to retire from the presidency of the $350,000,000 bank, and James A. Bacigalupi, the present senior vice-president, is to succeed him as head of the organization.

Bank Has 600,000 Depositors.

The Bank of Italy is among the seven largest banking corporations in the United States. It has approximately 600,000 depositors and eighty-six branches throughout California.

Giannini, who founded the bank twenty years ago, and who first proposed the plan of giving the bank to the employes, will continue to be chairman of the bank's executive committee and financial committee. L. Scatena will remain as chairman of the board of directors.

The plan calls for the obtaining of a controlling block of stock by active employes, a change in the list of officers and the directorate at least every five years to allow promotion to these officers from the banks' employes and the full protection of the rights and present and potential earnings of the 14,000 stockholders. The bank has $17,500,000 in stock outstanding and an actual capital strength of $50,000,000.

How the Plan Will Work.

Under the plan the bank will set aside 40 per cent. of its net earnings at the end of each half year, to be added to the sum contributed from the wages and salaries of the employes. The 40 per cent. contribution of the bank, including dividends, will be given to the employes gratis in accordance with the amount that each individual contributes to the control fund. The actual control will be expedited if the employes return the dividends to the fund, and it is presumed that most of them will do this.

No employe will be permitted to subscribe more than 10 per cent. of his salary to the fund and the minimum he may subscribe has been placed at 3 per cent. Thus those receiving the larger salaries will be prevented from gaining control of the stock of the bank through gift or otherwise.

FLYING.

Airplanes from all over the word will take part in the international air races at Dayton, Ohio, in October.

The main prize, of course, will be for speed, since flying so far is chiefly a sport. When the goals are safety and cheap construction, instead of speed and high altitudes, the flying industry will begin developing a dozen times as fast as now.

It was the cheap car, not speed, that "made" the auto industry. History will repeat with planes.

Hollanders Oppose Army.

Maintenance of Land and Sea Forces Agitates Public.

AMSTERDAM, Holland, Oct. 21—Whether it is worth while for Holland to keep up an army and navy in the light of recent war experiences is a question which is agitating the public.

At "no more war" demonstrations recently held in all the Dutch cities dissatisfaction was expressed at the fact that, instead of following the example of Denmark, whose Government has just proposed the abolition of the army and navy except for a protective police force, Holland has increased her current war budget by 1,500,000 florins, and because the Queen's speech at the opening of Parliament made no mention whatever of disarmament.

Anto-militaristic feelings are also finding expression elsewhere. During the army manoeuvres certain incidents occurred which the authorities are careful to explain did not mean open mutiny but which, judging from newspaper accounts, came perilously near it. Turbulent elements refused to obey orders it is said, and officers were treated with contempt.

According to the Handelsblad, a prominent newspaper, the position at one time became such that no vigorous measures to enforce discipline could be taken for fear of provoking a dangerous outburst. As a result, the Queen has refused to attend the review of her troops, and the customary distribution of awards will not take place.

EXPLOSION IN A MINE SHAFT

Nine Men Entombed, But All Escaped Serious Injury.

MADISONVILLE, Ky., Oct. 23. (Canadian Press.)—Explosion in mine of Hart Coal Corporation near here last night entombed nine men, four of whom escaped through an abandoned shaft and five reported that they were "all here," indicating they escaped injury according to officials of the company.

The explosion occurred in shaft number nine, 220 feet underground, shortly after the day force of 250 men had left workings. The cage was jammed in the shaft and the tipple blown partly over. Crowds began to gather and for several hours it was believed that the nine men known to be in the pits had perished. Four of them, who had been working in No. 11 shaft, ninety feet below No. 9 shaft, escaped through an abandoned shaft uninjured.

Shortly before 9 o'clock last night those gathered around the partly wrecked tipple heard a voice from below shouting, "Hey, there." Harvey Nesbit, a negro miner, was shouting. He told those on the surface in reply to questions, that "We are all here. None was injured."

Yes, we are too far from sources of production. That's the real "railroad problem." The solution? It will shape itself naturally, by economic evolution. The final result is difficult to foresee. But there's an increasing tendency for districts of the country to try to make themselves self-supporting.

For instance, many can recall when nearly all iron and steel came from the Pittsburg district. Pittsburg still is the king pin. But gigantic steel industries are growing up at far-off points, such as Gary and Birmingham.

Shoe-making used to be almost monopolized by the Boston district. To-day shoes are made everywhere.

The high cost of railroad hauls is destined to break up the industrial specialization by districts.

PLOWING MATCH ATTRACTED BIG COUNTY CROWD

Forty Contestants Matched Their Abilities in Sod and Stubble.

HELD IN DOURO.

William Cleghorn Best in Sod—J. J. Duffus on Tractor.

The Peterborough County plowing match and tractor demonstration—held under the auspices of the County of Peterborough branch of the Ontario Plowman's Association, on the farm of W. H. Allen, Douro Township, yesterday—proved to be one of the most successful matches ever held in this county.

Forty plowmen from all parts of the county took part in the annual affair, while hundreds of men and women watched with great interest all day the work of the skilled plowmen, who started at 9 in the morning and worked through till 4 in the afternoon, taking 15 minutes for lunch.

Some wonderful workmanship on the land was turned in by the farmers and their teams, but that done by the man and horse was not quite as even and straight as that done by the tractor.

The large crowd of farmers about the tractors appeared to be very much pleased with their work, some of the farmers standing for hours at a time watching them in operation.

Not only was the match greeted with a splendid crowd of contestants and spectators, but it was also met with ideal weather. Although the air was a little cool in the morning, it warmed up about noon, and stayed that way for the rest of the day.

The soil was of the finest quality, and although it would have been more suitable if it had been a little moister, it was passed by the contestants without any grumbling. The land was fairly well free of stones, except in one spot where one contestant said that he had cosiderable trouble.

The tractors, which were driven by J. J. Duffus and Howard Quinn, acted very satisfactorily, and were the source of much interest. Their demonstration was of high class, and they finished their plot of ground much before the teamsters.

In the ninth class for tractors for farmers only, there was only one entry, Mr. Quinn, who completed his three-quarters of an acre of stubble in good time, while J. J. Duffus with his Fordson tractor, finished the same amount of ground in the open class in a little less time than Mr. Quinn.

Some of the teamsters finished in good time, not being very long after the machines, while others just finished in the nick of time, which was set for 4 o'clock.

The work done by the boys was in the seventh class of 18 years and under, was very fine, and the contestants deserve much credit, while the older men in the 65 years and over class did splendidly.

Following the judging by Mr. Patterson of East York, the prize winners were announced by C. E. Moore, president of the Peterborough branch of the Ontario Plowmen's Association, while Mr. Patterson made a short speech in which he stated that he was pleased to see so many entrants and so many people present, and he hoped next year the match would be bigger and better than ever. He also spoke favourably of the work done by the tractors and the older contestants, while he said he was very pleased with the work of the younger boys, who, he said, would make the older men step in a few years. He also advised the Association to encourage the boys to take part in the annual matches.

POOL OF WAGES TO AID BABIES

Harvard Economist Has Plan to Add to Incomes of Married Workers.

Bachelors' Salaries Cut.

BOSTON, Oct. 22.—Cigars, plus theatres, plus automobiles, equal one child.

It's a new equation in an adjusted wage scale.

The cigars and theatres and automobile taken from the bachelor will pay for one baby for a married man.

It is the plan of Professor William McDougall of Harvard University, now in practice in many cities in France and under consideration by several American corporations.

Street car conductors, mechanics, policemen, firemen, musicians, college professors—everyone with a skilled trade is included.

A ten per cent. increase for every child is the gist of the scheme.

Poor Married Men.

A pool is formed by an employer or group of employers, in which a sum is set aside to care for the families of married men.

The money in the pool is furnished by slicings off the salaries of unmarried men. The bachelor or childless man with $4,000 yearly will be cut to $3,000 or a similar figure, and the money placed in the pool to give the married man a ten per cent. increase with the birth of each child. Dr. McDougall explained:

"The surplus money that the bachelor squanders on cigars, an automobile, theatres, gambling or liquor will simply go toward buying shoes and milk for the child of the married worker."

"'Paternalism and unfair' is the cry of people who are unintelligent, selfish or who do not understand the plan," declares Dr. McDougall.

"It is not handicapping the ambitious young man who is unmarried.

"It is not levelling the work of different types of workers. The brilliant man, whether married or unmarried, will naturally get a higher salary than the less able worker.

Cut Bachelor's Pay.

"It is simply cutting the salaries of unmarried workers doing the same work as married men.

"It is a plan to give the children of intelligent, skilled workers a chance. It would not apply to the bulk of unskilled labor which is at present furnishing the great birth rate of the country.

"We must either choose between doing something for the intelligent middle class or having the intelligent middle-class disappear in the wave of population pushed up by the lower element of society.

"The policeman must be intelligent, of good physique, reliable and given to soberness. So must the locomotive engineer, the fireman, or any one of the various skilled workmen.

"But the wages of these men mean poverty for them when they have more than three children. The average wage today for the skilled worker covers expenses for three children—and no more. When the fourth comes, the allowance must be stretched to care for him at the expense of all the children.

Should Aid Ambitious.

"The policeman given $1,300 a year would be given $180 more with the birth of each child. It would not make the policeman less ambitious, because any skilled worker is ambitious. It would make him more responsible, direct more of his attention to his children, and give the children a better chance in life.

"The man who fits himself for something in life should not have to feel that marriage means poverty for him and that the birth of a child should be a race between him and the poorhouse."

COD LIVER OIL LIKE SUN, DOCTORS FIND

Similarity of Effects as Remedy for Rickets Remarked at Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 22.—The missing link between the animal and vegetable kingdoms may have been discovered in Yale Medical School, is the statement issued in describing research work done by Dr I. Newton Kugelmass and Dr. Irvine McQuarrie, laboring in the Department of pediatrics there on a cure for rickets.

In the first place the doctors found that sunlight and cod liver oil had similar effects in curing rickets. They studied the proposition and then reached conclusions of interest. Says the report of the doctor's work:

"Those who recall their days of childhood dosings may think it far fetched, indeed, to term cod liver oil 'bottled sunshine,' but it is a similarity of curative powers between sunlight and cod liver oil which led directly to the research work of these doctors."

They found that the direct application of sunlight, a physical force containing ultra violet rays, absorbed through the skin, and cod liver oil, taken into the body through the alimentary canal, worked similarly. It was the relation between the two these men desired to find.

After their work, the doctors decided that "the vista of possible results from thies discovery leads to horizons beyond view." They decided, too, "here is, perhaps, the missing link between the plant and animal kingdoms." From this ward to other public results.

GLOUCESTER J.P. SENT FOR TRIAL

Dr. Had wen Before Court on Charge of Manslaughter

COURT SCENE

Friends Carry Accused Shoulder High—Bail Allowed

Dr. W. R. Hadwen, the anti-vaccinationist and anti-vivisectionist, was committed for trial at the police court at Gloucester on a charge of manslaughter of Nellie Christobelle Burnham, aged ten.

He reserved his defence and bail was allowed. Dr. Hadwen was cheered by a large crowd when he left the court. He was then seized by sympathizers and carried shoulder high to his home.

Dr. Hadwen had been committed for trial on a coroner's warrant following a verdict by the jury that the child died from diphtheria and pneumonia, and that Dr. Hadwen failed to show competent skill and sufficient attention.

Dr. Hadwen is a Justice of the Peace for the city, and hundreds of people formed early queues to gain admission to the court. When the doctor arrived cheers were raised. One woman sat with other magistrates on the bench.

Mr. St. John G. Micklethwait, prosecuting, stated that the charge was serious and important, and related to the relations of a doctor with his panel patients.

"The prosecution alleges," he said, "that the child died from diphtheria and pneumonia, and that her death was caused or contributed to by the gross negligence of Dr. Hawden. Evidence will be put forward that in the case of this girl patent symptoms were staring Dr. Hadwen in the face which, if he had taken the trouble to notice, he must have realized were symptoms of suspicion."

The first witness was the mother of the dead girl, and she spoke of the visits of Dr. Hadwen.

On one occasion she sent for the doctor because the child was so ill, and said that she thought it was bronchitis."

The doctor replied, "Probably sometimes these throats lead to paralysis." Dr. Hadwen put his finger down the child's throat and then said, "There is scarcely anything the matter with her; she is nearly all right."

Dr. E. S. Ellis stated that when he was called in on August 9 the child had diphtheria membrane in the throat, and was dying.

He said in cross-examination that he did not tell Dr. Hadwen that he had one of his patients.

"I am on such terms with Dr. Hadwen that such a procedure would have been impossible," said Dr. Ellis. He added that he had quarrelled with Dr. Hadwen, and there was an acrimonious correspondence in 1923.

Dr. Ellis explained that he had no animosity against Dr. Hadwen.

Sir William Wilcox, assistant physician to the London Fever Hospital, said that if proper treatment had been given on the first day when the child was seen by a medical man there was a reasonable probability that her life would have been saved.

LONDON CURATE'S VAGRANT HOLIDAY

Life in Slums on Fifty Cents a Day

Rev. F. L. Jennings, until recently curate of St. Paul's Church, Battersea, who spent a holiday in the slums of Newcastle-upon-Tyne two years ago, has just completed a month in the East End of London disguised as a vagrant, with the object of studying social problems. He has slept in common lodging-houses, shelters, and workhouses, besides spending two nights on the Thames Embankment. During his holiday Mr. Jennings became a street singer, newspaper seller, pedlar, and organ-grinder.

Mr. Jennings said, "I made 11d. one day by street singing. He is a good man who can make 8s. or 9s. a day. A day with a barrel-organ brought 2s., which just cleared my expenses."

Mr. Jennings visited a music-hall for 2½d., and says he saw many of the performers one might see in the West End. He lived the whole month on less than £4, spending 25s. 6d. for a bed and 1s. 1d. for food. He had two meals daily, middle-day dinner and a fish-and-chips supper.

His chief impressions is that there are many "really fine men, some of rank and education, who have come down in life," the chief reasons being drink, drugs, and misfortune.

Mr. Jennings intends to preach and lecture on social service.

Criccieth Charter Found in Museum, Is 600 Years Old

The discovery in the British Museum of a copy of the Charter of Criccieth, Carnarvonshire, dated 1285, is the result of many years' search by the council to trace the original document.

Its whereabouts, however, are still veiled in some obscurity.

It is now hoped to revive the Criccieth Corporation. Still a Parliamentary borough, Criccieth was also a corporation from 1285 up to the middle of the last century, when the then local authority abandoned the corporate powers.

A replica of the 13th century seal of Criccieth has also been obtained from the British Museum.

WORLD CHURCH IS NEED, SAYS CECIL

Uneasy Because Church of England Called "National"

VAST BLEMISH

Greater Strides When Disestablished, Says Bishop of Peterborough

Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., made a notable appeal for a world-wide church when he spoke at the Church Congress, which recently concluded at Oxford.

He said members of the Church of England had some feeling of uneasiness when they were called Protestant. He did not share that feeling himself because he liked to protest against error. His own uneasiness was that the Church of England was called a National Church.

"National" was the antithesis of Catholic, and made us insular, narrow, un-Catholic, and, untimately, un-Christian. Members of the Church did not think of themselves as being members of a world-wide organization.

Having adversely criticized unrestrained devotion to nationality—which he believed was the true cause of the war—Lord Hugh declared:

"We have paid a very great price for the loss of loyalty to Catholicism. If Christians generally had believed in a world-wide church there would be much greater counterbalance against the excess of Nationalism, and very much more vigor would have been given to the admirable efforts being made to secure peace.

"A VAST BLEMISH."

"If instead of the mere diplomacy of Geneva there had been a more ecclesiastical movement in support of what was being done there, what strength it would have given it. How it would have helped if the effort at Geneva had been religious and those efforts had been one of the commonplaces of the Church.

"There is a vast blemish lying on our Christian life owing to the divisions of Christendom. We should insist that because Christianity is world-wide we must treat the foreigner as we would treat Englishmen. We ought to feel how grave is the responsibility upon us if we destroy the usefulness of the Church of England as a means of promoting Christian re-union throughout the Catholic Church by our own disagreements and disputes.

EVERY-DAY FEELING.

"How can we talk and think of Christian re-union if we are not laboring in all sincerity to make union in our own community as real, loyal, and vital as it ought to be made? (Cheers.)

"We need a real loyalty to true Catholicism. The true idea of a world-wide Church we want is that of an everyday feeling, not only in respect to particular doctrines, but as a simple assent to world-wide Catholicism.

"We want it as a make-weight to keep our enthusiasm for nationalism within proper limits, and to make us zealous for Church union."

The Dean of Canterbury said he had heard it said that it was theologians who stood in the way of Christian union. It was rash to presume that in face of the apathy of ordinary church members of all denominations.

The Bishop of Peterborough said that at no time since the Church Congress had met had their prospects in the mission field been so hopeful as today.

In Japan and China and in India the Church, which was pressing forward for disestablishment, would make even greater strides when she had obtained her freedom.

In India outcasts had made the discovery that they were men and women with rights, and he remembered how after the Prince of Wales had received a deputation from them, their spokesman remarked, "Who ever heard of a rajah listening to a deputation from such as me? But the King's son has done so."

FIRST DRY PUB. OPEN IN LONDON

Prime Minister's Daughter Presides at Opening Ceremony

Miss Lahbel MacDonald, the Prime Minister's eldest daughter and official hostess of No. 10 Downing Street, presided at the recent opening ceremony of the first dry public house in London. It is being run under the auspices of the Rev. A. Gilbert Adams, pastor of a church in Poplar, and his wife.

Some months ago Mr. Adams became disheartened at the number of unemployed men who were standing idly about the streets in his section of the city. He resolved to secure for them a place to meet in.

"We've nowhere to go except the 'pubs,'" he was told. Then Mr. Adams spotted a man, who had previously said he was a teetotaler, sitting at a bar with a mug of beer before him.

"I though you'd signed the pledge," Mr. Adams said.

"So I did," answered the man. "I'm not drinking this beer. But I had to buy something here, otherwise I couldn't have come in and talked to my pals."

Meanwhile C. Alexander, a big shipowner, who has been supporting Mr. Adam's social welfare work, hearing of this need for a social centre, told him if he could find a suitable house he would help him finance the enterprise.

A few days later Mr. Adams learned the "Old Five Bells," one of the thirty pubs within five minutes' walk of his church, was vacant. With the help of Mr. Alexander and others he bought it and has reopened the place as a social centre under a soft drink regime.

Miss Ishbel was delighted with the idea, as she is an ardent Prohibitionist. Lemonade, rasberry and other soft drinks stand on the counter there now, and the place does a lively business. Sixty years ago the "Old Five Bells" was a country coaching inn, with roses round the door and barges floating down the river alongside.

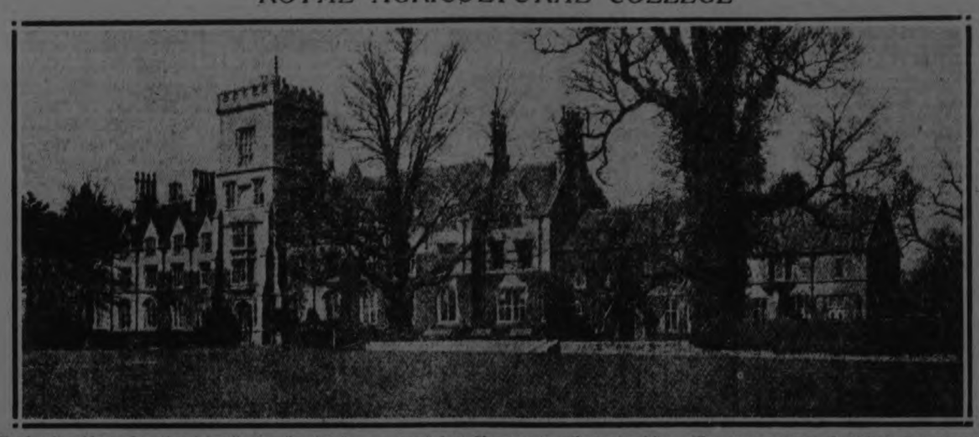
ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE



England's oldest educational institution for the farmer, located at Cirencester, Gloucestershire. The farm connected with it comprises 500 acres. This famous building has a long history of usefulness.

ELOPING COUPLE CAUGHT IN BATH

Aberdare Girl's Escapade With Married Man Has Abrupt Ending

STREET SCENE

Wife and Parents Confront Runawaways in Public

The elopement of a married man aged nearly forty, belonging to Aberdare, South Wales, with a girl of nineteen years, living in the same town, had a dramatic sequel in Bath when the runaway couple were confronted in the centre of the city by the girl's parents and the man's wife.

An angry scene followed in Milsom-street, the principal shopping street of the city. The stormy altercation was continued outside the General Post Office in the presence of a large crowd.

Eventually the police intervened, and the parties went to the police station. Here the girl's companion was shut out in the vestibule while her father had an interview with her. He implored her to return home, and later the girl left with her parents, having, it is believed, yielded to their persuasions.

The girl's father, whose name is Smith, is a well-known resident in Aberdare. He said that his daughter was a shorthand typist in a furniture shop there, and her companion was manager at the same place. They left together and he ascertained that they spent the night at Cardiff.

The next day he received a note from his daughter asking him not to worry, as she was well and seeking love and happiness. Having discovered that the couple had gone to Bath, he followed and came unexpectedly face to face with them.

GORGEOUS FISH IN ZOO AQUARIUM

New Importations from Madeira Flash Like Jewels

Some gorgeous fish have just reached England from Madeira, with the result that one tank in the London Zoo Aquarium now glows like a jeweller's shop window.

They were brought by Mr. Grabham geologist to the Sudan Government, who had to watch them closely throughout the voyage. Clever air-pumping devices kept the water in their travelling tanks thoroughly aerated, and they are in fine condition.

The most lovely of the newcomers are the swallow-tail Wrasse. Over a tender green background their bodies display most startling jazz markings of scarlet and blue, while the heads are patterned with strange designs in violet and light blue. There are also some Castanet fish, which seem soberly dressed until a swift swirl reveals a flash of deep amethyst or purple from a spot behind the gills.

Quaint flattened lobsters also travelled with the party, together with a pair of giant coral-pink hermit crabs. The latter are already outgrowing their shells, and it may be necessary to go to a museum to find new overcoats that will fit the monsters.

PROFESSOR'S FLIGHT DUE TO FRIGHT

A terror-stricken flight from an imaginery train was described by Dr. Gilchrist Slater (former head of Ruskin House, Oxford, and ex-Professor of Economics at Madras), when giving the first of 24 lectures on "Work and Wages," at St. Bride Institute. He was illustrating the effect of instinct on behavior.

He was once walking along a railway track, and made up his mind how he would act if a train came along. He decided that he would climb over the side of the viaduct and get on to the outside trestles.

Then he heard the noise of a train, but instead of climbing over the viaduct he raced along the track at a speed that should have won the Olympic Games sprint, for the instinct of fear had seized him.

The train did not come along, and the noise of the approaching train was only his imagination.

CHIMNEY'S CRASH CUTS WATER OFF

Eastbourne's 50-year-old landmark, the chimney stack to Bedfordwell Waterworks, which was 175 feet high, and weighed about 600 tons, was fel'ed on Saturday.

Mr. J. Larkin, the steeplejack, brought it down within a foot of the estimated spot, but the great weight of the bricks smashed two of Eastbourne's main trunk water mains.

Auxiliary mains are now supplying the town with water.

An ornamental cap to the chimney, weighing 50 tons, buried itself 20 feet deep.

Youth Of 23 Weds Woman 79

At the age of 79, a woman was wooed and won by Percy Claxton, aged 23.

The wife—now aged 88—appeared to give evidence against her husband at Lambeth Police Court on a charge of desertion. She said that when they married she had a little money, £70 or £80.

Claxton, who was described as a violinist, of Princess-road, Regent's Park, was remanded.

CROSSED IN LOVE; BECAME A DOCTOR

Dealing with the causes that led people to take up the medical profession, Sir Humphry Rolleston, in presenting the prizes to medical students at Charing Cross Hospital mentioned disappointment in love.

He instanced the case of a distinguished professor of anatomy at Trinity College, Dublin, James McCartney, who when his offer of marriage was refused by a lady "determined to adopt the profession of surgeon in order to harden his heart." (Laughter.)

The course of his love affairs ran smoother, continued Sir Humphry; he married the girl, and became demonstrator of anatomy to Abernethy. (Laughter.)

Sir Humphry said that at the present time there was reason to believe that the medical profession was overstocked by those recently qualified. Last year the number of new practitioners was 2,482, the highest on record, and the rate was now approaching one medical man for every 1,000 of the population.

SEVEN YEARS LIVING ON RATES

At the last meeting of the Dartford Board of Guardians attention was drawn to the fact that during seven years one man and his family had received £675 in relief.

Mr. Ladd (a guardian): Is the man able-bodied?

The Chairman (the Rev. S. Morgan) Yes.

Mr. Ladd: Then we are fools.

The present weekly cost of the family to the guardians is £9 9s 2d.

BOOTMAKERS'S BEQUEST TO COLLEGE

Mr. Harry Simpson Gee, of Leicester, chairman of Messrs. Stead and Simpson, Ltd., boot manufacturers, left £659,690.

Bequests include £20,000 to the endowment fund of the Leicester, Leicestershire and Rutland College. He also left annuities of £100 to his butler, Charles Needles, and £40 to his late wife's maid, Priscilla James.

AGGRESSIVE FLIES ARE TOUGH NUTS

Alfred E. Moore, Director of the College of Pestology, has been experimenting with flies with a view to lessening their number. He says the experiments proved conclusively that certain flies possess weak temperaments, others assertive, and some are decidedly aggressive. The more aggressive and assertive possess a resistance to disease in direct ratio to their truculence.

WENT 200 MILES TO DISPUTE 50c

John Pye, a builder, of Uplands, Swansea, travelled from Swansea to the City of London Court to dispute the payment of 50 cents in an action against him for $25, for building material supplied last December. Judge Shewell Cooper, who decided against him, expressed the hope that having come so far he would at least visit Wembley.

Bishop of Birmingham Expresses View on Duty of the Church

In an interview published in the Birmingham Gazette, Canon E. W. Barnes, now Bishop of Birmingham, says:

"With regard to conditions at home it appears to me that from the Christian point of view one must be in favor of what is called an advanced social policy. If for that reason one is accused of indulging in Labor propaganda—well, one must ignore the accusation and continue to press for such social reforms as seem necessary.

"It is the duty of the Christian Churches to work for a smaller and better population—that is to say, we want the healthier strain in the community to be preserved and the degenerate one to be eliminated. That ideal now must also be combined with the Christian principle that if human beings are brought into existence they must be given such opportunities of living wholesome lives as the community can possibly afford."

Canon Barnes pointed to the post-war danger of a decline of public-spiritedness and to the consequent danger that men of second-class ability and character will rise to power. He urges a closer co-operation of the Anglican Church with Free Churchmen, with whom he finds himself in a large measure of agreement.

LORD BLEDISLOE SELLS PORK CHEAP

The question whether Lord Bledisloe should pay toll as a street hawker of pork was raised at Chepstow District Council.

He has a model dairy farm at Lydney Park, his Gloucestershire seat. According to Mr. Jarvis, a councillor, his dairy-fed pork, sold from a van in the streets "cannot be beaten, and the price is right. He is doing good to the working class by selling best pork at a cheap rate."

C. J. Cole and others protested that the competition was unfair to local tradesmen, and Lord Bledisloe should be compelled to pay toll.

Colonel Fothergill Evans, the Clerk, pointed out that if they began with Lord Bledisloe they would have to treat all street hawkers alike. He agreed it was hard on local tradesmen. After further debate the matter was allowed to drop.

"SOB" TITLES ARE NOW DISCARDED

Mr. Pett Ridge, the novelist, speaking at a meeting of the Waifs and Strays Society at Oxford, said the society's title had a touch of patronage and a hint of condescension about it. The titles of 30 or 40 years ago, such as the Ragged School Union and the Guild of Brave Poor Things were now fortunately being modified.

He would describe such names as "sobbing" titles. He would not like, he added, to have borne the label "waif and stray" during the most sensitive years of life.

STRIKING INSTANCE OF DOG'S SAGACITY

An instance of a dog's intelligence and indifference to weather conditions has just come to light at New Cross. The animal, a fox terrier named "Peggy," has of its own accord gone each evening for four years to a local newsagent for the final edition of an evening paper. The dog belongs to Frederick Robinson, of Clifton Hill, New Cross, and will not take the paper from anyone except those behind the shop counter.

WOMAN DWELLER IN LONELY CAVE

The cave inhabited by the smartly-dressed girl who for two months has haunted Shipley Glen, a lonely spot near Bradford, was discovered, but the girl was not at home. The entrance to the cave was concealed by bushes, and her bed seems to have consisted of a piece of old carpet on which bracken was laid.

A pair of worn shoes, a packet of hairpins, and a comb were other tokens of the woman cave-dweller who keeps late hours and has been seen wandering by moonlight.

UNLAID EGG IS SOLD FOR $12.50

A homing pigeon's egg, which will not be laid until April next, was sold by auction at Leyton for $12.50.

Andrew Davidson, the homing pigeon auctioneer, stated that this was a record price for an embryo.

The purchaser was a Leyton pigeon fancier, and the egg will be laid by Stormpliot, the famous homing pigeon which won the Thurso race of 510 miles. Stormpliot is owned by Edgar Rickards, of Stratford.

BARONET'S OFFER OF "PRINCE'S" SHARES

A new offer is being broadcast through the post by Sir Brodrick Hartwell, Bart., whose "whisky-running" propositions have already been dealt with in the press.

This time he is offering shares in New Princes (1924) Limited, formed in March 1924 to acquire the well-known restaurant and hotel in Piccadilly.

Said to be the last of the post-women, Miss Annie Bull has been presented with a cheque for £25 by residents of Yateley (Surrey) after 41 years' service.

FATHER AND SON BACK FROM DEAD

Each Believed the Other Had Died Years Ago

STRANGE EPISODE

Younger Man About to Join Troopship at Southampton

Father and son, each believing the other to have died many years ago, have just met at Southampton, both alive and well.

The death of the father at Johannesburg was reported in the London Press on February 7, 1916, and the son, reported missing in France in 1917, was later assumed to be dead, and his wife was granted a widow's pension.

This week troops arrived at Southampton to join a Union Castle liner which had been chartered to take them to the Near East.

Among them was Frank Hannaway-Rowe, a drill instructor in the Royal Air Force, who had been stationed at Netheravon. He knew that his father had once lived in Southampton, but he had read in a newspaper an account of his death.

Having an hour or two to spare before sailing, he visited the street where his father used to be in business as a herbalist. Afterwards he called at a licensed house near by, and in the course of conversation revealed his name.

"Why, I have got a photo of your father," said the wife of the licensee, and showed it to him.

"I suppose you know he is dead," said Mr. Rowe.

"It must have been very sudden," replied the landlady.

"He died about eight years ago," said Mr. Rowe.

"That's curious," was the landlady's comment. "Why, I saw him last Monday, and he appeared to be quite all right."

FATHER'S SURPRISE.

Mr. Rowe was incredulous. He repeated that he had read an occount of his father's death, but he was persuaded to go to an address near at hand, and there he met his father, hale and hearty in spite of 85 years of a strenuous life.

"But I thought you were dead, too," said the astonished father.

W. Hannaway-Rowe, sr., had two sons in the war. The younger was killed, and Frank was wounded a third time in 1917. Later he returned to France, and news came that he was reported missing.

Eventually his wife was given a widow's pension, the War Office being unable to say more than that he was reported missing."

It is now known that, wounded a fourth time, he was taken to a hospital in France, and remained there about two years, his memory a complete blank.

Eventually he recovered, turned up at his wife's home, where he was shown cuttings from several London papers indicating that his father had died in February 1916 at Johannesburg. He accepted the reports without question, as other members of the family had done, and not until their dramatic meeting at Southampton did father and son realize that the other was alive.

Avonmouth Road Slides Into River; Damage is $500,000

Many thousands have visited Clifton Downs to get a good view from the high eminence of the sea walls of the large slice of the new low level road from Bristol to Avonmouth, and recently christened Portway, which has slipped into the River Avon, the subsidence wiping out the new reinforced concrete embankment, which occupied about 18 months in building.

The embankment affected was a solid mass of reinforced concrete, which was created for the dual purpose of providing a good obstacle against the incursion of river and also as a retainer for the immense amount of material necessary in the construction of the low level road for its whole completed length.

The men were warned just in time. All were clear when the major portion of the wall, a matter of 200 yards or thereabouts, slid almost bodily out into the river.

The actual site of the collapse is immediately below the lower end of the Clifton Down tunnel, on the Clifton extension railway, which takes most rail passengers from Temple Meads to Avonmouth.

Expert opinion gives it that it will take twelve months to remedy the damage, at an extra cost to the scheme of anything up to £100,000.

MILLION DOLLAR WILL ROMANCE

Bachelor, 87 Years Old, Lived in Poor District of Manchester

RENT $3 WEEKLY

Income Was $50,000—Substantial Bequests to Charities

People in Higher Openshaw, a working-class district of Manchester, were astounded to hear that James Parr, an eighty-seven-year-old bachelor, who had lived among them in a humble, six-roomed house for years, had left a fortune of $1,000,000. Local charities will benefit by $560,000 under his will. His income when he died was $50,000 a year.

No one knows why Mr. Parr chose to live in one of the dreariest quarters of Manchester, with noisy tramcars clattering past his door. His rent was $3.00 a week.

He lived alone, but had a housekeeper to attend to his few wants. He had no near relatives, but two distant connections are to receive substantial sums under the will.

Mr. Parr started as an office boy with a Manchester firm of calico printers, and worked his way up until he owned the business. Since his retirement twenty-five years ago he had spent his time pottering about in his little greenhouse, or walking about the streets of the neighborhood.

Every year for the last forty years he had been for a week to Blackpool, and this was his only holiday. He was a kind-hearted man, and helped many people who were down on their luck.

PEGGY RUSH IS SEEKING DIVORCE

Viscount Dunsford Defendant in Action by Actress

Viscountess Dunsford, known to the theatre-going public as Miss Peggy Rush, is bringing an action for divorce against her husband, who is the heir to the Earl of Midleton, formerly Mr. St. John Brodrick, Secretary of State for War.

The case, which is one of the 903 down for hearing at the forthcoming sittings of the court, is in the undefended list.

Lady Dunsford began her stage career in musical comedy under Mr. Robert Courtneidge, and later appeared under the aegis of Mr. Frederick Harrison in "Quinneys" and "The Mayor of Troy Town."

It was while acting at the Haymarket Theatre in 1916 that she met Viscount Dunsford. They were married in 1917.

The viscountess returned to the stage in 1922, when she played in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." She has since appeared in Sir James Barrie's "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire." She underwent an operation for appendicitis in March.

Lord Dunsford, who won the Military Cross during the war, has spent much of the last two years in British Guiana as representative of a firm of public works contractors.

Lady Heneage Dead; Was Bridesmaid to Queen Alexandra

Lady Heneage, widow of Lord Heneage and one of the three surviving bridesmaids to Queen Alexandra at her wedding in 1863, died at her flat in Adelaide Crescent, Hove, Sussex. She was 79.

The youngest daughter of the second Earl of Listowel, Lady Heneage married Mr. Edward Heneage in 1864. He was raised to the Peerage in 1896.

It was as Lady Eleanor Hare that she was one of the eight unmarried daughters of dukes, marquises, and earls who attended Queen Alexandra as bridesmaids.

The mother of a large family, Lady Heneage, herself the twin-sister of Lord Listowel, had twin daughters. She was a keen sportswoman in former years and was fond of driving and riding to hounds. Her husband, the first Lord Heneage, died in 1922.

UNPAID BILLS ARE CAUSE OF SUICIDE

Doctor in Birmingham Victim of Patients' Neglect to Pay

A doctor who died in the presence of the Sheriff's officer after taking prussic acid, was found by the Birmingham coroner to have committed suicide while of unsound mind.

The doctor, Frederick G. Haywood, was a general practitioner, well known in the Erdington district of Birmingham. Evidence pointed to his having been in financial straits for some time. He had complained about patients not paying their accounts, saying: "It is a shame I should have to work so hard and get nothing for it."

A sheriff's officer, who had received a warrant to seize the doctor's goods, went to the house one morning. Dr. Haywood went on his round in his car as usual, but on the way he procured a bottle of diluted prussic acid.

Encountering the sheriff's officer on his return, he said, "Give me five minutes' breathing time," and directly afterwards died.

The widow spoke of receiving a note written by her husband asking her pardon for what had hapened.

PANACEA SOCIETY HAS WATER CURE

New Organization Introduces Itself to London —Unique Body

QUOTES POETS

Everything from Bad Temper to Bald Head Remedied

Faith-healers have been a good deal in the public eye of late, but the "Panacea Society," which introduced itself to London at the Kensington Town Hall, is a body which seems to be in a category of its own.

It was a little difficult for the outsider to grasp much beyond the fact that by means of waters and instructions sent through the post the Panacea Society claims to have healed numbers of people. The waters are drunk and the instructions are obeyed. A group of obviously kindly and God-fearing women spoke from the platform, telling in most cases of their own cures. But it was not made clear where the water came from which achieved this. At times it seemed to be the water of the patient's locality and at times the water from the society's headquarters. "You only want the post office and the water. Anyone can be healed," said the chief speaker.

The name of the prophetess Joanna Southcote was mentioned in the preliminary speech, and six other prophets were touched upon, but in an introductory sort of way. Blake, the poet, was also spoken of as one of the Healers, and his poems were quoted. "We of the Panacea Society," said the chief speaker, "heartily re-echo the poet Blake."

DOCTORS APPROVED.

The society is commendably free from the more usual prejudices of such institutions and bodies as most approach it in character. One woman speaker did say that religion, as heretofore carried on, had failed, but then nowadays that is just a sort of practice ball bowled by all speakers, even upon vegetarianism or philately. But on the other hand she and others spoke generously of the clergy and of the medical profession, and the services of both may be retained by their patients with the society's cordial approbation.

Any desire to make money is disclaimed. Nothing more than a single postage-stamp to cover a reply to a letter is accepted, said the spokeswoman. Money sent is returned.

One thousand five hundred cases are being healed at the present moment, said the secretary, in Europe, Africa, and America. She read letters from a variety of those who, it was claimed had been cured. Their ex-complaints were an extraordinary catalogue ranging from asthma, angina, and acne to goitre and neurasthenia. "Our cures are not miracles," she said; "they are slow and sure." But the society does not stop at actual diseases. It has cured failing hair and baldness.

"Wherever the waters of the Sanctuary rise there is healing." The audience laughed with the lecturess when she told how one of two women who lived together had written to the headquarters in Ebury street to ask if her friend could not be cured of a violent temper. The latter drank the water and obeyed the instructions, however, and the temper-fits departed.

Even "a very dear, faithful dog had been cured of eczema after being sponged twice a day with the water, save for a spot on his leg which his mistress retains as a sort of safety-valve."

Tale of Girl and Octopus Latest Yarn Going Around London

Have you heard this story? It seems to have originated in a London factory, and it is spreading.

A factory girl on holiday went for a swim. She swallowed something, she did not know what, and was later seized with terrible pains. A doctor was called, but could not tell what was wrong. She was sent to a specialist, and he could not diagnose the case. Finally she was admitted to hospital, where an X-ray examination showed that what she had swallowed had been an octopus egg!

Once inside, this had hatched out, and it was a thriving young octopus of many arms that was causing all the trouble. The story adds that no way has been found of dealing with the intruder or of relieving the victim's pain.

All inquiries, both at the factory and at local hospitals, have proved fruitless, and the Daily News concludes that the octopus yarn must be scheduled with stories of the sea serpent.

The Affair at Flower Acres

By CARLYN WELLS

© 1924 by NEA Service Inc.

And at that door, in another moment, appeared Nan, white-faced and terrified.

Then, as Nan stepped into the room, Orville Kent also came in from the south side, through the outside door that opened on the lawns and flower beds that ran down to the brook.

"What is it?" he cried; then, catching sight of Raynor's fallen figure, and taking in Finely with the pistol, Kent sprang across the room to put his arm round the shaking form of his sister.

"Move, somebody! Do something!" came from Miss Turner in an hysterical shriek.

"Oh, Douglas!" Miss Mattie cried, and tottered to a chair.

"Who—who did it?" gasped Nan, her voice almost inaudible.

"Who did it?" mocked Miss Turner. "There he stands—with his weapon still in his hand!"

"I—I didn't do it," Malcolm Finley said, and quickly added, "I don't think I did."

"Oh, you don't!" and Miss Turner's scorn fell upon him. "Well, then, Mrs. Raynor did it! As I came to this door I heard a shot, and before I could get the light on I saw you both——"

"How could you see without the lights on?" asked Orville Kent, coldly.

Ezra Goddard came then, shocked and wondering; Hatfield, the butler, appeared, and several maid servants huddled in the background.

"Somebody must take charge here," Goddard said, going toward the stricken man; "perhaps he isn't dead."

"Oh," said Nan, her frightened eyes staring; "isn't he?"

"Hush, Nan," said her brother. "Will you let me take you to your room?"

"No, no, Orry, I must stay here—I must! You stay by me."

"Yes, Nan," and Kent placed her in a big chair, and then sat near her.

"Yes, he's dead," Goddard said, after a brief examination. "I think the women should go to their rooms—or, at least, away from here."

But none of the women would do this, and, as Miss Mattie showed signs of faintness, Eva Turner hastened away and returned with restoratives.

"Hatfield," Ezra Goddard said, giving his orders curtly, "call the family doctor—you know his number?"

"Oh, yes, sir," and the butler disappeared.

"Did you shoot Raynor, Malcolm?" was the next question.

"No," said Finley, but his face was so drawn with shock and sorrow that his word carried no clear conviction.

"Then what are you doing with that pistol?"

"I—I picked it up—as I came in—Look here, Goddard, it's none of your business!"

"Oh, yes, it is—I'm making it my business. Have you no more to say?"

"No more," said Malcolm Finley.

"I have," said the nurse. "It was either Mr. Finley or Mrs. Raynor who fired that shot!"

CHAPTER IV.

Detective Dobbins.

If Ezra Goddard had followed the sea, he would have been the sort of sailor who is dubbed able seaman. If he had chosen the ministry as a career, he would have been known as an eminent divine. Had he pitched on the legal rofession, he would have been spoken of as a noted lawyer. Or had he been an author, he would most certainly have attained the rank of celebrated novelist.

Moreover, if he had bent his talents and energies to the science of sleuthing, he would have risen rapidly to the heights of Transcendent Detective, and would have become famous.

But detective he was not, for though possessed of the necessary perspicacity and perspicuity, he had had no training or experience, and knew little or nothing of finger-print work or of third-degree practice.

So it was really owing more to his inherent generalship than to his deductive ability that he stepped forward and assumed control of the entire situation.

His efficiency in emergency was well nigh 100 per cent, and within fifteen minutes of the discovery of Douglas Raynor's death, Goddard had sent word to the family physician, the county medical examiner and the local police. And within an hour they had all arrived.

Doctor Saxton came first. Though he was the family physician, he had rarely been called to Flower Acres, for there had been little illness in the household. When Douglas Raynor began to get faddy about his diet, he sought advice from various well advertised books, and, later, had decided on the employment of a resident dietitian. Miss Turner was by no means the first of these, indeed, she was merely the present incumbent, and was already slated for dismissal by her patient.

But, being present, and being a graduate nurse, Doctor Saxton immediately spoke to her professionally, and seemed to rely on her assistance.

She came to him tremblingly, and with an obvious aversion to touching or even looking at the dead body of her late patient.

"Shot through the heart," the doctor said, after a brief investigation. "Who did it?"

To this direct question there was no answer, Miss Turner compressed her lips into a straight, unspeaking line, while the others present, who were huddled round the sides of the sun room, gave only aghast, wondering looks at the doctor.

Held by some fascination of horror, they had all remained in the presence of the dead. Goddard had advised it, and the rest had inertly obeyed.

Nancy, her hand clasped in her brother's, was half reclining in a long chair, while Miss Mattie sat bolt upright, eagerly watching everything that transpired.

Malcolm Finley sat, with folded arms and a calm, inscrutable face, his gray eyes moving slowly from the dead victim of the tragedy to the living wife and back again.

From his scrutiny of the livid face and contorted muscles of Raynor, Doctor Saxton at last lifted a puzzled countenance to the group of anxious spectators.

"There are strange conditions here," he said, "most peculiar, inexplicable conditions. Had Douglas Raynor any enemies?"

He glanced around the room, and, as no one spoke, Ezra Goddard said:

"In view of the fact that someone shot and killed him, I think we may logically assume that he had."

The tinge of irony was slight, but quite enough to annoy the doctor.

"Not at all, sir. It is perfectly possible that the shooting might have been an accident, or—a suicide."

"Oh, was it? Do you think that?" Nan spoke rapidly, in jerky accents, as if surprised but not displeased at this suggestion.

"I can't say yet, Mrs. Raynor. On the face of it, it looks as if he had been shot down by the hand of another, but until after a more detailed examination, I prefer not to give a definite opinion. And for that, I want to await the arrival of the medical examiner. When he comes, I must ask that we be left by ourselves, except that I wish Miss Turner to remain with us in her professional capacity."

"I'd like to say a word——" began Malcolm Finley, but Goddard stopped him peremptorily.

"Not a word, Mal. Surely you know better. This is not the time or place for any revelation, theory or suspicion. In fact, I ask all of you to say nothing definite or vital until the examiner and the detectives get here."

"I shall say what I choose," announced Nan, "and I say——"

"My dear Mrs. Raynor," Goddard spoke quietly, but looked at her with a steady gaze, "just reflect a moment on the fact, that quite aside from yourself, what you would say might affect others in a way for which you would be sorry."

"What do you mean?" she said.

"It doesn't matter what I mean, but it might matter a great deal what you say, so I ask you, I beg of you, to say nothing."

His insistence won the day, and Nan said no more, except now and then in a whisper to Orry.

And so, when Doctor Fraser, the examiner, came, everybody was turned out of the room except Nurse Turner.

The others filed into the large living room and seated themselves. Malcolm Finley almost gave way to his strong desire to sit by the side of Nancy, but compelled himself to conquer it, and crossed the room to sit beside Miss Mattie.

She, however, was so pointedly cold and distant of manner that Finley turned aside and began talking to Goddard.

"I hope a fairly decent detective will be sent," he said; "for this is not a case to be bungled."

"It is not, indeed," Goddard assented; "I only hope the doctors can prove it a suicide."

"Why?" cried Nan. "Suicide is the deed of a coward—and Douglas was never that!"

"No, he was not," Goddard said; "yet I wish it might have been—for a murder mystery is a long, hard road to travel."

"It's murder—but it's no mystery."

These words were spoken by Miss Mattie. She looked straight at Nan, and though she said no more definite word, it was easily seen that already she accused Nancy Raynor of the death of her husband.

"But Nancy didn't shoot him," the spinster added, and Nan looked up quickly, to see the stern old face as accusing as ever, and the sharp old eyes glaring at her.

"I don't know what you mean," she said, wearily, and leaning back in her chair she closed her eyes, and her brother watched her affectionately.

"I wish Nan would go to her room," Orville Kent said; "she can be of no use to-night, and when the policemen come it will drive her frantic."

"She ought to be driven frantic," Miss Mattie's cold voice declared. "Of course, she can't go to her room, Orville; she must be questioned with the rest of us."

Nothwithstanding the awfulness of the occasion, it was quite clear that Miss Mattie looked forward to the questioning not without relish.

At last, to her satisfaction, the police arrived. The others, too, felt a certain sense of relief.

The chief, whose name was Pell, remained in the sun parlor with the physicians, but after a few moments there, Detective Dobbins, who had been assigned to the case, came into the living room and looked inquiringly about him.

"I am Ezra Goddard," said the self-appointed spokesman, "a friend of the late Mr. Raynor. This is Mrs. Raynor, and Miss Mattie Raynor—a sister."

The others were introduced, both Finley and Kent acknowledging their names by the slightest of nods and some servants were designated.

Detective Dobbins sat down, and as he rolled his beady black eyes from one to another he rubbed his hands as if in active enjoyment of the situation.

"Who was the last to see Mr. Raynor alive?" he began, in a most workmanlike way.

"That is the regulation question, Mr. Dobbins," said Goddard. "But, as usual, it is almost impossible to answer. If Mr. Raynor was shot by the hand of another, that individual was, of course, the last one to see him alive. Now, of that we have no knowledge. If, on the other hand, Mr. Raynor committed suicide——"

"Suicide!" cried the astounded Dobbins. "I have not been told that there is any suggestion of that!"

He looked like a man suddenly defrauded of his rights.

"It's not a question of suggestion, Mr. Dobbins," Goddard went on, suavely, "but of investigation. And a rational investigation must consider all possibilities."

"Quite so—quite so." Detective Dobbins began to wish that Mr. Goddard had never been born.

"Well," he resumed, after a moment's thought, "let us put it this way, then. Which one of you were among the last to see Mr. Raynor alive?"

"Ah, that's better," and Goddard smiled approval. "I can answer that for all of us. We were all together on the terrace having tea. After tea we still sat there until dusk began to fall. Then several neighbors who were with us started for their homes. And we, the members of the family and household, dispersed to our rooms to dress for dinner."

"All of you here present were at tea with Mr. Raynor?"

"Yes," said Goddard, and others nodded.

"Who left the group first?"

"The guests from the neighboring houses," Goddard replied.

"And next?"

"I did," Orville Kent said; "I went with one of the guests, a young lady from the Fay place, next to this."

"And after Mr. Kent?" Dobbins queried, his black eyes taking in the expression on each face.

"I think I went off next," Finley said, "unless Miss Turner, the nurse, preceded me. Of that I'm not quite sure."

"I'm sure," Nan said; "Miss Turner did go before Mr. Finley—she went to the pantry to see about some malted milk for my husband. And then my husband rose and went himself into the house."

"And from the house into that room—that sun parlor, I believe you call it."

"Yes," Nancy agreed, "that is, he must have done so. But when he left me he went into the house."

"You were then alone at the tea table, Mrs. Raynor?"

"The tea table had been removed, Mr. Dobbins, some time since. But, yes, I was then alone on the west terrace, where we had had tea."

"What did you do?"

"Do? Why, nothing. I sat a moment, thinking I must go and dress for dinner, but delayed a few moments to enjoy the soft evening air and the fragrance of my flowers."

"And you sat there until——"

"Until——" Nan repeated, a far-away, reminiscent look in her eyes.

Just then Goddard gave a loud and emphatic "Ahem!" and Nan looked quickly at him.

No one could mistake the look on his face for anything but a sharp glance of warning.

Whereupon Nancy Raynor drew herself together with a visible effort, and began to speak glibly.

"Why, yes—what was I saying? Oh, yes! I sat there until I heard that shot—yes, until I heard that shot, Mr. Dobbins."

"You are sure of this, Mrs. Raynor?"

"Yes, yes, perfectly sure—until I heard the shot——"

"Yet, until Mr. Goddard attracted your attention just now, you were going to give a different reply."

"No, I wasn't—oh, no, I wasn't! Why should I?"

"I don't know, I'm sure. Now what time was it when you heard the shot?"

"I can't say, exactly. I didn't look at my watch. But it must have been a little before seven."

"Quarter before?"

"I don't know. Maybe."

"Well, then, you heard the shot—did you know at once where it came from?"

"I knew from which direction it came, and, of course, I ran that way."

"Into the sun parlor?"

"Yes—that is, no—not into it—but to the door, and looked in."

"Yes; and after you went into the room, what did you see——"

"My husband—but I told you I didn't go into the room!"

"You must have, to have seen your husband, for as he lay on the floor, there was a large table between him and the west door—you couldn't have seen him from the doorway."

"Oh, yes, I did—I'm positive I did."

"I think, Mr. Dobbins, you will gain little by questioning Mrs. Raynor further to-night. She is greatly unstrung——"

"Excuse me, I think I shall gain a great deal by questioning Mrs. Raynor to-night. I must ask you not to interfere."

"Then, will you not let her rest a few moments, and return to her later?" Goddard's manner showed only concern for Nan's comfort.

"Yes, I will do that. I will talk to Miss Raynor, and Mrs. Raynor can pull herself together. Tell me anything you can of the matter, Miss Raynor."

"I went upstairs to my room, and I sat a while looking out of the window. I saw Mr. Kent and Miss Dolly Fay cross the lawns toward her home, and I saw Mrs. Lewis, who lives in another direction, also start to walk home. could see no others, but I heard Mr. Goddard go to his room,, across the hall from my own, and I heard Miss Turner moving in and out of the pantry. I heard my brother's footsteps as he went into the house and out again to the sun room, and I heard Mr. Finley go out on the east veranda."

"You have acute hearing, Miss Raynor."

"It has always been good, and I am not yet old enough for it to become impaired. Then, as I thought it getting late, I turned on my lights and looked at my clock. It was nearly seven."

"How near?"

"I don't know—ten or fifteen minutes of seven, I think. Then I heard the shot, and I didn't at first think anything was wrong. I thought of somebody cleaning a gun, or shooting a bird—not definitely, you know, but these thoughts went through my mind. I went out in the hall, but it was so nearly dark I couldn't see anything. As I reached the stairs, a light appeared downstairs, and I hurried down."

"What did you see?"

"Miss Turner just going into the sun parlor——"

"Or coming out?"

"Oh, I never thought of that! Yes, she might have been coming out——"

"Think carefully now; I want to find out who was in the sun room about that time."

"Well, if she was coming out, she was backing out. I—I think she was, now I recollect the scene."

"Oh, Nan was peering in at the west door; Mr. Finley was just inside the east door, and Mr. Raynor, my brother, lay on the floor in a dreadful heap——"

"Who came next?"

"In a few moments Orville Kent came in at the back door, the south one, and he looked after Nan—Mrs. Raynor. But I must tell you that Mr. Finley had the pistol in his hand, and I can't see what further evidence you want than that!"

With the expression of a Nemesis on her sharp, shrewd old face, Miss Raynor sat back in her chair and glared at Malcolm Finley.

"What have you to say, Mr. Finley?" asked Dobbins.

MENUS FOR A FAMILY.

Breakfast—Stewed prunes, rolled oats, thin cream, broiled salt mackerel, whole wheat toast, orange marmalade, milk, coffee.

Luncheon — Creamed kohlrabi, brown bread and butter, rice peach dumplings, cocoa, tea.

Dinner—Leg of lamb, mint jelly, twice baked potatoes, pear salad, floating island, nut cookies, milk, coffee.

The youngest member of the family should not be given the fish for his breakfast.

Many four-year-old children need a midmorning lunch. A glass of orange juice and one or two pieces of crisp toast is ideal for this meal. If you are not able to get oranges, four tablespoons strained, slightly sweetened tomato juice is quite as beneficial.

Creamed Kohlrabi.

Two cups diced kohlrabi, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 1-2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, 1 egg yolk, 1-2 teaspoon salt, few grains pepper.

Pare kohlrabi and cut in half-inch dice. Cook in boiling salted water until tender. Drain and add 1 tablespoon butter. Shake over the fire until well coated with butter. Melt remaining butter, stir in flour and cook and stir until smooth. Add milk slowly, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper and bring to the boiling point. Add yolk of egg slightly beaten and remove from fire. Pouro ver kohlrabi and serve.

Rice Peach Dumplings.

One-half cup rice, 2 cups boiling water, 1 cup milk, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 4 large peaches, 4 tablespoons sugar, butter, 4 preserved cherries.

Wash rice and drop in boiling water to which salt has been added. Cook until water is absorbed. Add milk and cook over hot water until kernels are soft. Pare peaches and remove stones. Put a cherry in the cavity left from the stone. Cut four squares of cheesecloth and dip in boiling water. Spread with rice, making the layer about three-fourths of an inch thick.

Put a peach in the centre of each square, sprinkle with sugar and dot with butter. Pull corners of cloth together and tie. Steam from 30 to 40 minutes. Remove from cloths and serve with sugar and cream.

This is simple nourishing dessert that is as pleasing to grownups as children.

Miss Eva Roddick Tells How Cuticura Healed Eczema

"My trouble began with an itching and burning of the skin and then eczema broke out on my hands in a rash. It got so trying on my nerves that I scratched it, which caused watery, sore eruptions. It was very painful to put my hands in water, and hard for me to do my work. I also lost my rest at night because of the irritation.

Good, substantial food served—and yet the children just nibble at it.

And it isn't the children alone. Elders are in the same frame of appetite.

Inquiry results in discovery that a feast of candy preceded the dinner hour by but a short time.

In how many families does this situation arise!

Probably no food is more abused than sweets.

Sweets have a definite value, but when they are allowed to dull the edge of appetite, or are eaten out of all proper relation to other foods, there is a definite danger.

Children are particularly apt to satisfy thunger wih sweets, though their adolescent sisters are just as likely to be incautious. The body cannot grow properly unless foods are eaten that supply all the bodily needs. Sweets contain no minerals, no vitamines, no protein—none of these elements so necessary for growing children.

The best place for sweets is in dessert foods served at the end of a meal—in custards, fruit dishes and in similar dishes.

Parents should do everything possible to cultivate in children the same desire for fruits that they have for sweets.

FIRES.

Smokers' matches start more fires than anything else, insurance company finds by check-up. Spontaneous combustion ranks second—be careful not to leave oily rags where they can ignite and cause fires.

Third on the list of fire causes—defective flues and chimneys. Fifth is electricity. Lightning is sixth, with sparks falling on roofs a close seventh. Another common fire origin—hot ashes. These are the things to watch. Tell the children.

LAKEFIELD CHURCH HELD ANNIVERSARY

Rev. J. W. Gordon, of Peterborough, Was Special Speaker For Occasion.

LAKEFIELD, October 22.— Rev. J. W Gordon, of St. Andrew's Church, Peterborough ,was the special preacher at the Presbyterian Church at the sixty-first anniversary of its founding.

The church was decorated for the occasion, and at both services special music was rendered by the choir, under the direction of Miss Alice Hunter, organist and choir leader.

There was a large attendance at both services, in the evening the congregations of the Methodist and the Baptist Churches joining with the Presbyterians for a united service, according to the usual custom.

At the evening service Miss Cullen sang a solo and Mrs. Jull Miss Ethel Millar, Dr. G. E. Renwick, and Mr. A. Carveth sang a quartette, in addition to an anthem by the choir. All these numbers were well rendered and were much appreciated.

Mr. Gordon took his text from the Acts of the Apostles, chapter 26, verse 29: "And Paul said, I would to God that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day were both almost and altogether such as I am, except these bonds."

These words were spoken by St. Paul in a Roman law court where after two years of imprisonment he was being examined before Herod, Felix, and Agrippa, who in all their pomp and state were assembled with their court. St. Paul, though old and worn, preserved a dignified appearance, and when granted permission to tell his story did so modestly but with enthusiasm. Because of his enthusiasm he was thought mad from over study, and King Agrippa jested and said, "Paul, almost thou persuadest me." In the words of the text St. Paul rebuked the king for his irreverence.

It was an irreverent age, with the Greek influence strong in fashionable circles, it was considered clever to introduce Greek phrases into conversation, and the Greek fashion of scorning any religious enthusiasm was practised. Palestine at that time was like China to-day. In the latter country education and the press have destroyed the old religious and the China of to-day is frankly agnostic with neither the old or the new faith. This is an age of transition, and therefore dangerous. We have a tendency to fix our faith on the succeeding age, and would like our children to believe exactly as we do, this has never been done and never can be. The Scripture says: "First the blade and then the ear and then the full corn doth appear"; and we cannot blame the ear for being only an ear, it illustrates the progress in man's perception and application of the truths.

In the Elizabethan and Renaissance periods geography, science, literature and religion took a great leap which in the latter case culminated in the Reformation. Luther and Knox thought the Roman Catholic Church in sad need of cleansing, and the people condemned the faith in its entirety, destroying beautiful churches and many things it would have been wise to keep. Neither Knox nor Luther had any faith in the common people. In Scotland, where there were many beautiful churches, the people destroyed them and built plain, ugly churches, abolishing the organ because it was in use in the Roman Church. This was the traditional prejudice of the Scottish Presbyterian against the organ. The Roman Catholic knelt to pray and the Presbyterian stood.

Education has taught us to bridge the gap between John and his master, and whereas Burns was thought to be very clever and very courageous to write his famous poem, "A Man's a Man for a' that," nowadays he would be considered stupid because we know the fact and the knowledge is general. To-day there is a great deal of criticism of the minister, and he should be devoutly thankful for it. The minister has to-day just as much power as his moral manhood will command and no more. It will be a sad day for the minister to be in a glass case; he must answer to God, of course, but he needs human criticism. The church needs it, too, for the hearts of our cities are pagan, cesspools of sin, because the church is not on her job. In the West there are many boys of twenty-one years who have never seen a minister. The church is too complacent and self-satisfied, and it is good for it to receive severe criticism. Of course, there is much criticism which is unintelligent and non-constructive, but in the main it will do good. The old fathers of the church dipped their pens in blood, and the Confession of Faith and the Shorter Catechism did more for Scotland than anything else for any other nation. We are at present, allowing hundreds of men and women to grow up pagan. It is not unreasonable that we should add to our creeds as the old creeds may not be quite adequate for this age of transition. Of course, some things must stand, and one of these is the Sabbath. If we let the Sabbath go, the church of God goes with it, and we revert to the brute; take away the Sabbath, and you open the mouth of hell. People come to the Lord's Supper as jauntily as they would go to a picture show, and it is a wonder they do not choke when taking the symbols. That most strictly Presbyterian of all services, the preparatory service before Communion, is disregarded by most so-called Presbyterians, because they apparently feel that a man does not need preparation to go to the Lord's Table. There is no need to squirm or twist, because it is true that people act as if the Lord's Table was no better than their own. There is too much levity in the marriage service among young people, many of whom think it clever to smirk and grin instead of trembling with awe at the great responsibility of beginning a home. The home, established by God, is man's greatest opportunity.

St. Paul, in spite of his chains, knew that he was the freest man in the court room, and in spite of privation was a noble figure; he gave up wealth, home, and health, all for his Lord and Master, and remained undaunted even under persecution. Whether our faith is large or small, we want others to have it, for the only thing man has which he would be safe in giving to others is his faith in Jesus Christ our Lord and Master.

Father Phelan's Three Day Event Tastefully Carried Out.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 23.—Phelan's "three day bazaar" opened on Monday night formally at eight o'clock. The different booths all over the Regent Theatre, where the bazaar was held, were beautifully decorated.

The whole stage of the theatre was taken up with fancy work of all kinds and colors and sizes, for young and old. This booth was very prettily arranged with its own work and in the centre at the front was a large tinsel rope shade over the light making a pretty effect. Shaughnessy, Mrs. (Dr) Bussey, Mrs. Daley, Miss Loreta Gibson and Miss Cleta Sarginson.

In conjunction with the fish pond was the novelty booth, decorated the same as the fish pond, filled with lots of gay and dainty things for sale and also to be used for fishing. This was looked after by Miss Lynch and Miss Callaghan.

VALLI AT RIVOLI IN HUMAN STORY

Putting railroad tradition into a railroad play is a matter of intensive study. The laws of the men of the road, immutable as those of the Medes and Persians, are so burled under the cloak of tradition that they are inbred in the railroad man, but seldom spoken of. The result caused many complicatio during the filming of "The Segtal Tower," Universal-super-Jewel production, starring Virginia Valli, playing at the Capitol Theatre Friday and Saturday.

Clarence L. Brown, who directed the picture, and who is noted for his production of "The Acquittal," one of the sensational successes of the past season, is himself an electrical engineer, hence was supposed to know something of railroad life.

"But I didn't know how little I knew until we went to Noyo, to take the railroad scenes with real crews and real trains," he asserts. "For instance, we wanted a drawbar doctored so that it would break. No railway man would touch the task. 'It is an ingrained tradition never to do anything to cause a wreck. It's a sort of superstition—like an actor whistling in a dressing room, only it's founded on the underlying maxim of 'safety first.' We ran against dozens of these incidents. Well—we let them have their way; that's how to make a railroad picture natural. And we all learned a lot."

The picture, a sensational story of railroad life, is marked by two spectacular railroad wrecks, but these are incidental to a gripping dramatic story laid about two men and a woman living in a lonely division point on a mountain railroad.

Rockliffe Fellowes plays the husband. "The other man" is enacted by Wallace Beery.

George Street Congregation Celebrates Fiftieth Year In Present Building

CHURCH REMEMBERS ROMANTIC ERA WHEN FOUNDED BY THE PIONEERS OF PETERBOROUGH 87 YEARS AGO

Men Who Raised First $65,000 To Build Edifice, Have Passed Away.

COMPLETED IN 1875.

Project Was Conceived With Faith in the Future of the District.

George Street Methodist Church is this week opening its big celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the building of the present edifice, of which a history is given on this page.

Events in the life of a community, or its institutions, especially such as mark progress and serve as perpetual milestones along the road, indicating growth, importance, and especially community usefulness, are worthy of note. For without our institutions, we should indeed be bereft. And since the founding of the city, the men and women living here have either shared in for themselves, where personally interested, or stood by and encouraged others to make and form substantial tokens of progress. Especially is his evident in the building of places of worship, as each denomination gathered to itself larger congregations, and so found that the right thing to do was to expand he borders, taking a pride in the effort and a deep and abiding satisfaction when the work and venture reached definite accomplishment. Such has been the case in connection with George Street Methodist Church.

The church, as an entity, which includes both building and people who attend, will, this week, celebrate the semi-centennial of the building being completed and occupied just fifty years ago. Finished for occupancy in October, 1875, it has been in service ever since. At the time it was an ambitious conception to provide a building for worship that afforded what seemed, at the time, not only ample accommodation, but even beyond the warmest anticipations for any congregation of the future. How well the project was conceived and faithfully carried out! The difficulties were overcome with a reliance on the church membership to meet the financial burdens imposed and a people that never failed to respond, repeatedly drawing on personal resources to meet the cost of upkeep and administration, to pay off the incumbrances, and hand to the membership of to-day a church free from debt and good for another fifty years of service. Of all this, some relation is here made. It was a daring undertaking when, in 1873, the official boards came together and almost impetuously decided that the needs of Methodism and the demands of the future called for the expenditure of, at least, the sum of sixty-five thousand dollars. The money was found and gained. Those who carried through the great work have passed from the scene of their labors, but the church stands as a monument to the zeal, fidelity to purpose, loyalty to an ideal and broad optimism admirable and to be highly praised.

History of Foundation.

And so it may be appropriate that, at this time, some narrative be constructed concerning the history of the church, and in regard to those who laid the foundations of Methodism in Peterborough. For the church building and its congregation has not only been sustained in the appointed work, but has set off branches, which, taking root, have grown into important congregations, with worthily important buildings in different parts of the city, three of these notably so. Daughters of the Mother Church, they are creditable to their parentage, and strong each in its environment.

The beginnings of George Street Church reach back to the pioneer days of the fourth generation away. During the first ten years of the settlement which was to be known as Peterborough, worship and association for religious instruction was held in any of the homes conveniently situated. There those who had the faith gathered, often at much inconvenience. Then came a few years in which the first clergy made troublesome journeys along the forest trails to carry the message to the adjoining townships. Their goings and comings were directed as of the Peterborough station, in the district of Cobourg. In all its features it was practically a missionary effort.

This community accommodation existed until the year 1835, when the Upper Canada Legislature made a grant of land "for the use and benefit of the people called Methodists for a church and burying-ground" to the extent of two acres, and this plot of land was selected at the corner of George and McDonnel Streets, west side of George Street. A subscription was made by all interested—some giving money, others building materials, and still others work. The first modest wooden building was put up, and worship therein commenced in the early summer of 1837. It was the first church home, and was meeting house, Sunday school, gathering place for the modest social functions of the day and time. Recognizing that now indeed was provided a base from which to work, the Cobourg conference made Peterborough a chapel district, and presently the church had one or more clergymen living within the limits of the future town, and these still labored in the rural, or outlying territory.

A church is really only that a number of people, presumably of the same mind, have come together in the pursuit of a common object. It follows that the intimate affair of such a community are very interesting, in relation to the carrying on of the work in view, just as the affairs in our respective homes claim and get the most careful attention. Of the primitive methods of financing, the paucity of resources, the straightened allowances to the incumbents, the anxiety to keep out of debt, and the humble provision made for the subsistence and comfort of the ministers in charge, much may not be told in what is here written, for space could not be spared. But, as an instance, the total income of Rev. William McFadden, worthy and good man as he was, is specified as being for one year—salary, $175.00; family expense and table, $250.00; personal expenses, $15.00 and house rent, $40.00, assuming that the pound (sterling) be taken as at $5.00.

Prince's Ranch a Business Project

It was during the Prince of Wales' visit to Canada in 1919 that he determined to become a ranchman, and obtained possession of the Pekisko Ranch, in the south of Alberta, now the E. P. Ranch, or the Prince of Wales Ranch, twenty-five miles from high River Station, on the Macleod branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The Prince's ranch, oblong in form, extending to three miles by two miles, and including 4,000 acres, is in the centre of the finest ranching district of Alberta, beautiful in its verdant green covering, which stretches as far as the eye can reach. The low, rounded hills and valleys are ideal alike for the grazing of livestock—cattle, horses and sheep—and for sport. In the southern half of the area of this ranch is a duck-frequently lake of considerable extent, which is capable of being stocked, according to the ways of the country, from Government fish hatcheries.

The residential quarters, even with an addition which has been made to the west wing for the accommodation of the Prince's staff, are a modest frame house of the ordinary type, with creeper-hung veranda. The livestock barns for cattle, sheep and horses, lie to the east, and with the headquarters building form a crescent-shaped group facing the south, all situated about 3,400 feet above sea level, in a sunny hollow, with a background of sheltering poplars and willows, through which a tributary branch of the High River winds in a gravelly, tortuous and, in some places, beautiful course. The low wooded hills to the east, where the ranch boundary line and the watershed run together, form ideal short grass pasture for sheep, and are fringed at the bases with sheltering bluffs of poplar and willow.

At a considerable distance to the West, whence come the warm winds of spring, are to be seen the sharply jagged peaks of the Rocky Mountain range over rolling grass country. To the south, beyond some rising ground, are to be found splendidly sheltered and watered pastures for cattle. Open spaces, clothed with natural grass of very special quality, known as prairie wool or buffalo grass, are cut in alternate years for hay.

The climate is such, with the natural shelter available, that no livestock needs to be housed even in the coldest and most trying weather. The grass cures into hay as it stands in autumn, and retains its nourishing properties during winter, so that stacked hay is only needed for cattle when snow covers the ground, or when the pasture has been exhausted.

The thousands of acres of natural hay which the E. P. Ranch provides make it practically self-supporting and independent of the costly operation of ploughing, except for about 100 acres, which are cultivated to grow fodder crops to fill a silo, which has a capacity of 110 tons—the only one in the district. This is admirably done by growing green oats and mixing them with sunflowers, also cut well before the seeds are ripe. The sunflower grows large crops of silo-filling material on which animals thrive well after they have been trained to eat it, in areas too cold for the satisfactory cultivation of corn (maize) the crop most widely employed for this purpose on the American continent.

Not a Philanthropic Venture.

In operating this ranch the Prince's chief object is to benefit the stockbreeders of the West, and to this end he proposes to send out from time to time the surplus stock of his own farms in England, supplemented by purchases of high-class stock. To carry out his idea, all the animals on the ranch are on offer at reasonable prices.

The ranch is not a philanthropic institution, but a venture run on commercial lines and intended to pay its way. Benefit to the country will be possible along various lines of activity. Light horse breeding will be stimulated by the services of "Will Summers," a beautiful well-known thoroughbred, with an excellent four-year-old racing record on the English turf, lent by the King.

Then there is a stud of eighteen Dartmoor ponies of exceptional quality, headed by a very fine stallion used by the prince as his riding pony on the ranch.

A flock of Shropshire sheep has been doing remarkably well, led by a ram of outstanding quality—champion in good company on the other side of the boundary line. To this has recently been added by importation a flock of forty-one Hampshire ewes, picked from about a dozen of the best home flocks and presented by the Hampshire Down Sheep Breeders' Association. The sheep run in the open all the winter, nothing but oat-hay being given them, except a little grain before lambing.

Edward H. R. Greene, of South Dartmouth, Mass., son of the famous Hetty Green, is said to have spent hundred of thousands of dollars on the development of radio during the past few years. He is building the largest private wireless station in the United States.

Jubilee Year Inaugurated By Striking Program

Settling of Town Site Brought Expansion

CHURCH GROWS IN BUILDINGS

Members Borrowed From Themselves to Make Additions to Accomodation.

SUNDAY SCHOOL GREW

In the short space of six years after being built, the church had outgrown its accommodation. The town site was receiving more and more of population, and many of these found congenial association in the Methodist body. It followed that a larger place of worship was an absolute necessity and steps were taken to provide the same. After a year of preparatory work and consideration, means were gained to take on construction, resulting in the building of the church home that gave much more of utility, convenience and accommodation, and had to serve the congregation for the ten years following. This church was opened in 1843, the first building being moved to the north, and ultimately fitted up and equipped as the first really and truly parsonage.

The church building of 1843 was built of wood, as was the custom in those years. Wood was of a-plenty and of surprisingly low cost. The style, or form of building that was known as "the timber frame," practically the same as the skeleton of big barns that were beginning to dot the landscape all over the township farms. Contributions of logs, to be sawn into lumber and used as beams and bracings, were taken from those who could supply. It was a supreme community effort. In dimensions the building was sixty feet in length and forty feet in width, and of proper and seemly height. It was covered outside with the (at the time) popular rough-cast mortar. Inside were capacious galleries and the main floor fitted with pews, all boxed in and of severely plain design and appearance. Opened in the latter part of the year indicated, the congregation took possession and considered that things had been nicely settled for many years in the future.

It may be noted that the interests of the congregation progressed, seemingly in temporal things, at intervals of ten years or thereabouts. By 1853, accommodation inside the church had been exhausted. Ten years had brought the boys and girls of 1843 to early manhood and womanhood. The fledglings were not leaving the church parental nest, but many remained in the community. There was little of industrial manufacturing in Canada, and so not much inducement offered to leave the home locality and migrate, and this state of addition to church membership and attendance prevailed in other local churches as well.

Although the church of 1843 had not been entirely paid for, as there was upkeep and running expenses to be met, the congregation, through its governing board, decided that the borders should be enlarged, and an addition of forty feet in length and of width and height to correspond with the main building was decided on and plans made to finance the undertaking. The sum involved, for those days, was considerable, and extreme caution and skill seemed to be required to carry the project through. Eventually it was done, and with the addition accomplished the church attendance progressed until it was seen that the extension had been fully justified. It will be recognized that the town had not at the time began to strike its stride as an important centre for the export of lumber and timbers so that the congregation, while of very considerable number, did not have in its fold many men of more than moderate means. Such were to come afterwards.

Borrowed from Itself.

For the sixteen years that had elapsed since George Street Church had been placed on the map, it had managed to be self-contained, so far as monies and financing were concerned. And besides, there were not many sources from which to borrow money, even for so good a use. In the final winding-up of the expenditure, this resourceful congregation borrowed from itself, and accepting the funds from a committee of four of its number, serenely gave the quartette a lien on the pew rents, to be paid quarterly until the entire loan had been satisfied, others undertaking to find enough of money in other ways, to meet current expenses. The outcome of this arrangement brought into action the first Ladies' Aid, an arm of the church service that has been a tower of strength in times of financial need, and which has, with womanly thought and infinite alacrity of accomplishment, found ways and means to accomplish things of rare merit and value, where mere man was Doubting Thomas and hesitated to assume responsibility. The women of George Street Church have two spheres of action. In their homes and in their church, and are equally diligent and successful in both. Which is to be seriously and thoughtfully commended.

* * *

The story of the church life of George Street Church during the following twenty years is one of steady advancement. The strengthening of the Sunday School by the erection of a capacious and separate building, exclusively for the purpose, brought a large and increasing attendance from amongst the congregation, but from others as well. The classes grew in number, able and devoted teachers volunteered for the work, and in successive years the accommodation had to be enlarged by the building of additions to accommodate the Bible and older scholars and adult classes. Also the care of the small ones was recognized by a specially prepared addition, or wing, which afforded much needed room and enabled that department to make much and gratifying progress.

GEORGE STREET CHURCH

THE CHURCH AS IT APPEARED WITH TOWER COMPLETED IN 1890.

EXPANSION IS AGAIN PLANNED

New Sunday School and Renovated Church are Planned.

MAY COST $80,000

What are the plans for the future, for George Street Church never lacks in progress. Already a considerable sum over $10,000.00 has been earned by the Church societies and set aside for the erection of a Sunday school building, one that will adorn the Church plot, relieve the crowded attendance, round out the anticipations of the last fifteen years, and will cost at least so much as $80,000.00 to complete. Church renovation is spoken of and anticipated. New heating appliances, entire new and comfortable cushioning of the pews, decoration of the auditorium, and possibly some modification of means of entrance and exit. All this will cost much money, but the congregation will, it is anticipated, loyally assume the responsibility, just as their predecessors buckled to it and carried the load cheerfully and successfully in the long ago.

And it may be the case that on a Christmas Day of the future the Church as a membership will gather and celebrate the opening of the new Sunday school building, as it met and opened and held the formal dedication of George Street Church on Christmas Day, 1873.

Men Who Worked.

This short historical sketch might be incomplete, even so far as it extends, lacking some mention of the men who did great things for the Church. Great, measured by circumstances and individual means and resources. With reference to those who have served in the field of the pulpit from the years when in the furtherance of an ideal men sacrificed themselves in time and opportunity to do the work appointed to be done, the annals of the very early years are fragrant with recollections among those who survived of the ministrations of such men as Revs. Anson Greene, George Poole, Sylvester Hurlburt, Silomon Snider, Kennedy Creighton, William McFadden, Thomas Jeffers, Moses Black stock and John Sanderson, all ministering at intervals during the first, six years. Then in and with the Church of 1843, came Rev. William Coleman, Rev. Robert Demorest, Rev. I. B. Howard, Rev. S. P. Ladow, Rev. William McCullough and Rev. Thos. Cleghorn, with Charles Turver and John Gemley. This brings us up to 1853.

Fohowed a succession of permanent pastors, that is whose work and attention came exclusively to the Church, being relieved from rural ministration, Rev. Wm. H. Poole (afterwards known as 'Anglo-Israel Poole'), William Scott, John Carroll, James Brock and Joshua Johnston, and Geo. H. Davis. With the appointment of Rev. Chas. Fish to the pastorate, the real work of building greater George Street Church began. Rev. Mr. Fish was called to another charge before the completion of the Church buildings for and with which he had Mabored so long.

In the last fifty years eighteen clergymen, all of outstanding ability of the ministerial field have filled the pulpit of George Street Church, together with five others as assistant pastors, at different times. Many of these have been called to take charge of the finest and most important of the larger metropolitan churches of the Methodist body, and to the universities of the Province of Ontario, as well as being conspicuous in the conferences and deliberations of the governing bodies of the Church. A few may be mentioned, including: Rev. E. B Harper, Rev. F. H. Wallace, Rev. Thomas Manning, Rev. Isaac Tovell, Rev. J. H. Locke, Rev. S. J. Shorey, Rev. J. P. Wilson, Rev. Isaac Couch, Rev. R. G. Peever, Rev. A. J. Thomas, with Rev. W. J. Crothers, Rev. M. L. Pearson, Rev. John Shaw and Rev George Workman. Two others, Rev. M. L. Pearson and Rev. W. R. Young, not only filled the pulpit of George Street Church, but sent, in the line of succession, able and talented sons to stand where their fathers had stood, these in the persons of Rev. Edwin A. Pearson and Rev. W. Harold Young, the latter the pastor-in-charge for the last four years.

Then as to men of the Church, those who have wisely and willingly directed its affairs, planned, striven and accomplished, there is a long and illustrious roll of honor. Mention has been made in a previous paragraph of several, but those men drew others to associate and cheerfully help, including Robinson Rutherford, Richard Winch, Walter Sheridan, Jos. Favelle, Dr. Lavelle, Isaac Milburn, T. W. Robinson (still with us), Jos. Ford, William Coulter, William Claxton, Dr. Geo. Burnham (Sr., Benj. Shorty, John Hartley, James Kendry, B. F. Ackerman, and many others. The incumbents of the last fifteen years have, in succession, drawn on the men and women of the congregation for almost unlimited assistance in suggestion and carrying out of plans and projects for the advancement of the Church and its work, enlargement of sphere of action, and all in a spirit of large helpfulness.

It may be of interest to observe that of those who were of the Church congregation at the time of the dedication and opening fifty years ago, not more than twelve at the time of adult age are now living and connected with the Church. In the congregation are men and women, who, as boys and girls of young age, accompanied their parents to the opening celebration.

GROWING PAINS IN LATE SIXTIES

Younger Generation Demanded Better Things as Well as Bigger.

PROMINENT WORKERS

By the end of the sixties, the Church was again feeling growing pains, and a laudable spirit had come amongst the congregation, that not only was more room needed, but that the importance of the Church membership locally demanded that it should be housed in premises in keeping. A new generation had come forward and was asking for better things, even if what had been in use had satisfied their fathers in years that had passed. And the Church had gained in the personnel of its membership, both spiritually and temporarily. Men like George A. Cox (a man of rare insight and afterwards to be ranked as one of the financial magnates of Canada), George Hilliard, lumber manufacturer, James Stevenson, locally a man of affairs and at the time successful, William John Mason, ever thoughtful, sincere and optimistic in his Church, Thomas Bradburn, merchant and property owner, David W. Dumble (still with us), of infinite energy and a prophet of the future career of the Church, resourceful and untiring, with many others, deemed the time propitious that George Street Church should have a church home worthy of itself, Methodism and the growing town in which it existed. To the pulpit had been sent and attracted men of large ability in the ministry, a succession of heralds of the Gospel message who presided with acceptance and arousing large congregational interest. All these influenced and all influences pointed to a broadening of the borders to good and ample capacity. And the branches sent and set out from the Mother Church were prospering, after difficulties, in a most welcome and heartening way.

It was decided in 1873 that the effort should be made. Much of conference and planning was held. Ways and means canvassed. Responsibilities of the future considered and anticipated. Estimates made of the financial involvements, the accrued expense from year to year, and the responsibility for pulpit service of the very highest ability, considered. And with a full realization of what the undertaking involved, the resolve was reached to build Greater George Street Church. The fine edifice, as it stands to-day in the 50th year of its service, is a substantial and speaking testimonial to the wisdom, energy and devotion to a cause that was dear to them and to be a fitting monument to all who shared in the serious responsibility that was to be undertaken. George n Street Church decided to pull down its barns and build greater.

What was the proposition? To secure other grounds; to dispose of the premise and property in occupation: to use the avail as a stepping-stone to further accumulation of resources: to engage competent architectural skill and advice: to build such a church as would accommodate such a congregation as would in all human probability be so many in number as would occupy and call for the very highest standard of clerical ministration that could be secured. The past and the present testify that all these things have been done.

Briefly, the property on which the Church of today stands was secured from Charles Perry, at the time mayor of the town. The architect who had designed the fine and important Metropolitan Church, of Toronto, was engaged not to duplicate but to come so near as possible as an appropriation of $60,000.00 would permit. The church building will stand for at least another half century, as a very fine example of ecclesiastical architecture of the day in which erected and indeed of which few exceed it in proportion of design and gracefulness of execution. It was at first designed that he tower should be completed with a spire, such as would stand up among the buildings of the district as a local landmark. This intention was afterward set aside, and the tower finished as it appears today.

The work of erection proceeded in 1874, and by the end of the autumn the walls and roof had been completed. During the winter following the interior was fairly well completed, and the spring of 1875 saw the building so far advanced hat it was anticipated that it could be put to use in the early autumn months of the year. The church was made use of in October, the formal opening being deferred until the end of December. The foundation, of generous height above the ground, was built of limestone, quarried on the east side of Clear Lake, Township of Dummer, and brought to the Church site, partly by wagon from the quarry, and also by scows to Lakefield and by rail to a point in the North Ward. At one time in construction it was proposed to complete the building, using stone entirely, but the cost was found to be excessive, and had to be set aside, with a cream brick used instead. The basement interior, for use as the Sunday School, was finished afterwards, the old school being in the meantime occupied.

It may be of interest to note how the project was financed in those days. The sale of the old property, the George Street and McDonnel Street frontages offering particularly eligible building sites, brought in considerable money. The old Church was disposed of with the land on which it stood and a part of the McDonnel Street frontage, to Thomas Bradburn, who had the addition of 1853 moved to McDonnel Street, and it and the main part of the building fitted into four fine dwellings. These are in use today.

After making payments from the sales of property, the Trustee Board faced an incumbrance or a debt of over $40,000.00. There was not a Church building between Montreal and Toronto that would carry such a financial load, building between Montreal and Toronto From the Star Assurance Company, of London, England, was had a loan of $20,000.00, the loan carrying with it some insurance obligations, incurred by members on behal of the congregation. The Church and congregation then settled it and themselves down to a long, long endeavor to wipe out the further sum of $12,000.00. It has proved to be a long, long trail, viewed through the vista of the years that have passed. Unremitting effort, untiring endeavor, assiduous patience marked the years as they flew past. In 1882, feeling that the burden of payments and he accruing interest were more than onerous and positively hindrances, an effort was made and the congregation raised the sum of over $11,000.00. This was paid over to the Star Company, the insurances silenced, and borrowing from a Canadian source an additional $10,000.00, the debt was consolidated. In intervening years reductions have been made until today, on the 50th anniversary of the occupancy of the Church, the congregation will, by personal subscription and payment, have entirely cleared off the balance of incumbrance. Fiftyt years of financial effort finds its just reward.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING

DELAYED.

War is the greatest obstacle to progress.

France and England again are negotiating to build the much-needed tunnel under the English Channel to connect the two countries by rail. This project would have been completed years ago if it hadn't been for military reasons.

War occasionally seems to hasten progress. It doesn't, on the average, though it may occur at the right moment to get credit for achievements due to materialize anyway. World War gave us fast airplanes. What good are they? We need cheap, safe planes, not speed.

RADICAL.

One reason entrenched conservatives fear radicals is that radicalism nearly always involves thought. That doesn't please the "upper crust," whose strategic position is based on emotionalism.

For instance, a reader who is obviously a "radical," sends this: "Humane fighting rules and fine hospital service for the battlefield tend to perpetuate war by making it less painful and ghastly."

PROHIBITION.

Have you heard about Herman P. Paris? He's the national prohibition party's candidate for president. People in other countries will look puzzled and say: "I thought the Yankees already had prohibition. Why run a candidate on a dry platform?"

Another angle of "prohibition": Historic Plymouth Rock is being damaged by empty liquor bottles smashed against it by tourists. Some interpret this as fretful protest.

INVADERS.

Army worms by countless millions have been destroying crops lately in middle western states. In many places they looked like squirming carpets on the fields.

A battle for supremacy on this earth is on, between man and insects. We are rapidly conquering disease germs. Insects are conquering us. Boll weevil, for instance.

DESTROY ODOURS.

To eliminate disagreeable cooking odours from your kitchen, put a pan containing a little vinegar on the simmerer. This will destroy it.

FIRE DESTROYS ANOTHER BARN IN SEYMOUR TOWNSHIP LAST NIGHT

Barn Filled With Hay and Machinery Lost on Farm of Marshall West.

FIREMEN CALLED OUT.

Overheated Hay Said to Have Been Responsible —Partly Covered by Insurance.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 23. — About six o'clock on Wednesday night one of the barns on the Marshall West farm, about a mile west of Campbellford, was burned to the ground. An alarm came in and the fire truck went out. The firemen could not save the barn, but were able to save the fences and other outbuildings.

The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is supposed that it was caused from the hay heating. There were forty tons of hay in the barn. The farm machinery, consisting of a new tractor, a new corn-binding machine, a binder and mower, as well as smaller articles, were all destroyed. This machinery had just been stored in the barn for the winter on Tuesday and Wednesday. Everything seemed to blaze up so quickly. Late in the evening the hay was still burning. Mr. West also lost all his timothy seed. The loss was partly covered by insurance. This makes the third barn in this vicinity to be burned during the last three weeks. Just a week ago Wednesday Mr. Bert Hay's was burned, and the week before one belonging to Mr. Thos. McAvella, all in Seymour. The cause of all three fires is unknown.

A Pioneer Dead.

Miss Ellen Armour (Nell) of lot 23, in the 10th concession of Percy Township, died at her home on Monday afternoon at the age of almost 77 years. Her death was sudden as she took ill on Friday and on Monday morning had a stroke and only lived six hours. She was the daughter of the late George and Mrs. Armour, who lived on the old homestead on "Valley View Farm," where the deceased was born and lived all her life. She leaves to mourn her loss at the old home three sisters, Misses Mary, Jane and Carrie, and one brother William. Another brother, Dr. John, lives in St. Catharines, and James, in Peterboro.

There are two generations living on the homestead, as some of the late Robert Armour's family live in one part of the house. The funeral took place on Wednesday at half past two, and interment at Trent Valley cemetery. Rev. Mr. Thompson of Hastings had charge of the funeral.

PRINCE IS NOW IN THE STATES

Hundreds Stood in Freezing Temperature to Get a Glimpse of Royal Visitor.

MONTREAL, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press).—His Royal Highness Prince of Wales at midnight terminated his brief stay in Montreal and at 1.45 this morning special train on which he had embarked, crossed into International Border quarter of a mile south of St. Armand and he again entered United States. According to schedule for operation of the train, provided by the Canadian National Railways, His Royal Highness will reach Lowell, Mass., at ten o'clock. Departure from Montreal was carried out in even less formal manner than arrival of Sunday night Train was timed to start from Bonaventure Station at an hour when regular train movements ceased. Some hundreds of enthusiastic citizens stood in cold in temperature only a few degrees above the freezing point to say farewell to the Royal visitor.

CONSUL WAS STONED DEATH BY NATIVES

Victim Lay Unconscious on Operating Table When Final Assault Took Took Place.

NEW YORK, October 23 (Canadian Press). — How Robert Imbrie, the United States Consul at Teheran, was stoned to death by natives as he lay unconscious upon the operating table, was related yesterday by Joseph F. Kornfeld, United States Minister to Persia, just resigned, who returned on the Leviathan with the report of the tragedy, which he will submit to the State Department at Washington.

Imbrie was set upon when he attempted to take photographs of the drinking fountain where miracles were supposed to have occurred.

He managed to escape to Baroucheh, and drove away pursued by hundreds of natives shouting: "Stop him! The infidel has killed four of the faithful, and poisoned the waters of the fountain!"

Although he was not wholly informed of the events that immediately followed, said Mr. Kornfeld, the gist of the conflicting reports was that the natives believed Imbrie's camera to be a weapon which silently despatched death.

"They overhauled Seymour, who was Imbrie's aide, in an alleyway where he had taken refuge, and mauled him," he continued.

"They pursued Imbrie into a teashop; they clubbed and stoned him until the police rescued him and carried him to the hospital.

"Even then the outraged natives were not satisfied. They clamoured for Imbrie's life in atonement to their Mohammedan saint, Abbas. They stormed the hospital, battered down the doors, and finding Imbrie unconscious upon the operating table, tore tiles from the floor, and crushed out his life with them."

The State Department already was in possession of evidence supporting the story he related, said Mr. Kornfeld.

HASTINGS HELD A PLOWING MATCH

Five Hundred Persons In Attendance—Ideal Day for the Event.

(By a Staff Reporter).

FOXBORO, Oct. 23.—The second plowing match to be held in the neighborhood of Stirling passed into history yesterday with an attendance of about five hundred people, and fifteen entries in five classes. Held under the auspices of the Hastings County Plowmen's Association, on the farm of Mr. John McEwen, in Sidney Township, one mile west of Foxboro, the arrangements were in the capable hands of the secretary of the association, Mr. Ray Atkin, of Stirling, who is also the agricultural representative of the Provincial Department.

Yesterday was an ideal day for the event, with a warm sun and a crisp, frosty breeze. Mr. McEwen's flat, six-acre field of rich clay loam offered a splendid opportunity to the contestants. James Anderson, of Frankford, occasioned some comment by the Scotch method he used in finishing up his portion, throwing up a small ridge between the last two furrows. Although the majority of the men finished up with two horses, several resorted to the expedient of having an assistant lead one horse and hitch its mate up to the plow behind. Sam Wallace, of Stirling, the lone contestant in the first class, had some difficulty in persuading his horse, Jim, to finish up alone. The big brown horse made the last journey with its head over its shoulder, watching its mate taking a well-earned rest.

Special prizes in silver cups were given by Robert Cooke, M.P., of Stirling, and John Elliott, manager of the Standard Bank in Belleville. Thomas Thompson, M.P. of East Hastings, and E. Gus Porter, ex-M.P. of Belleville, each donated a special award of ten dollars in cash, to be divided between first and second winners in different sections.

The prize-list is as follows:

Class One (in sod, walking plow, single furrow) — Only one entry. 1st prize of $10 to Samuel Wallace of Stirling.

Class Two (in sod, walking plow, single furrow, plain plows to be used), six entries—1st prize of $10 to Clifford Ketcheson of Holloway, carrying with it the Robert Cooke silver cup. Second, third, fourth and fifth prizes of $9, $7, $5 and $3, went to Louis Wilson of Harold, Robert Bunnett of Holloway, James Anderson, R.R. No. 2, Frankford, and Robert Wallace of Harold respectively.

Class Three (in sod, walking plow, single furrow, open to young men, 20 to 25 years of age, inclusive), four entries—First prize of $10 to James A. Danford of Bonar Law, carrying with it the John Elliott silver cup. Second, third and fourth prizes of $8, $6 and $4 to Frank Hodgin of Latta, Ralph Sills of Holloway and Leslie Post of Tweed.

Class Four (in sod, walking plow, single furrow, open to boys under 20 years of age), two entries — First prize of $10 to Ross Caverly, Holloway, also $6 donated by Thos. Thompson, M.P. Second prize of $8 to Clifford Hodgin of Latta, also $4 donated by Thos. Thompson, M.P.

There were no entries in a sixth class, for stubble plowing.

Judges for the occasion were A. E. Wilson of Port Hope and John Shadlock, of Agincourt.

A banquet, catered for by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church of Foxboro, who also conducted a tent where dinner was served on the grounds, took place in the Sunday school room of the church at the conclusion of the plowing match. A late start at nearly two o'clock in the afternoon saw the last of the plowmen finishing final furrows some time after the orange ball of the sun had sunk in the west, and the banquet did not start until nearly eight o'clock. About sixty-five people were in attendance, and the catering was splendid, a real feast being provided for the hungry men and the few ladies who appeared.

The chairman was Charles W. Thompson of Stirling, a president of the Hastings County Plowmen's Association. Among the guests present were the Hon. Duncan Marshall of Toronto, ex-Minister of Agriculture for the province of Alberta, ex-Mayor Charles Hanna of Belleville, Mr. John Elliott, manager of the Standard Bank in Belleville, Col. Roscoe Vanderwater of Foxboro, and Mr. Clem Ketcheson, deputy reeve of Sidney township.

The first toast, to the King, was followed by a toast to the Hastings County Plowmens Association, with which the names of Col. Vanderwater and Mr. Ray Atkin were cupled. In reply, the former spoke of the state of the roads, which are being repaired extensively in the vicinity of Stirling, as having an effect on the attendance at the match and banquet, and regretted that the competition did not include more events for younger men exclusively. Mr. Atkin, whose brief address was greeted with hearty applause, spoke of the co-operation extended those in charge of the match and remarked that next year would see a home county plowing competition open to young men under the age of 21 years. He expressed appreciation also of the excelent catering by the ladies of the Foxboro Methodist church.

The chairman spoke of the marked improvement shown in the plowing done this year, as compared with that of last year, and proposed the toast to "Our Municipal Institutions' coupling with it the names of ex-Mayor Hanna of Belleville, Mr. Clem Ketcheson and Mr. J. G. Sills of Foxboro, who was absent. Mr. Hanna spoke a few words, saying that his attention to political matters at the present time prevented him from making anything but a political speech, which would be quite out of place, and Mr. Ketcheson also spoke briefly.

"Our Agricultural Interests", with Hon. Mr. Marshall included, brought the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow", accompanied by three cheers and a tiger.

Mr. Marshall, who said he had not come prepared to give a lengthy address, was listened to with earnest attention. His short speech was an earnest plea for an improvement in the condition of farming life, both for men and women workers, and a stirring call to more enthusiasm ion producing better farm produce of eevry sort.

"The great problem before the farming community of the present day, is that of making farm life more easy and satisfactory and pleasant, so as to create in en and women workers like a feeling of contentment and satisfaction with farm life."

Prefacing his address with an allusion to the interest taken by the King of England and the Prince of Wales in farming and the breeding of good live stock, Mr. Marshall passed to a reference to the effect in his own western country of the Scotch settlers' neat habits in plowing and setting drills, and to their influence on the haphazard work of their neighbors. He was of the opinion, however, that Scotch methods of plowing might not be just as suitable to the land of the Dominion, where a more severe climate made for different soil conditions, as the methods of our own Canadian farmers. He congratulated the first prize-winner in the sulky plow competition for his good work, and expressed himself emphatically in favor of putting a seat wherever it was at all possible on any farm implement, to so conserve the strength of the workman that he might pay better attention to his horses and machines at the close of a day's work.

Reverting again to the necessity for more education and mental training in working out farm problems, he spoke of the success of Canadian cheese, in taking three first prizes at the London, England, dairy show, this week. Two years ago, Canadian cheese took no prizes at this show and constituted a very bad advertisement for the Dominion at that time. Conditions were reversed this year. He thought that successful dairying carried with it a better cultivation of the land, and impressed on his hearers the fact that Canadian hard wheat was absolutely the best in the world, as were Canadian store cattle. In regard to the latter, he instanced the case of a consignment of Canadian steers to Aberdeen, which went on grass pasture immediately and put on 150 pounds each in six weeks' feeding. "Cattle raised in a cold climate will go into the feeding pens and begin to feed the very first day, gaining also from the very first day."

Mr. Marshall commended the spirit of Canadian sportsmanship and adherence to decisions which he had noted in attendance at various matches from one end of the Dominion to the other. "Kicking against judges' decisions is pretty nearly a lost art in Canada to-day," he said, concluding with another earnest exhortation to his hearers to go ahead and strive unceasingly for improvement in everything pertaining to farm life.

Presentation of prizes and special cups then followed, with suitable acknowledgments by the winners. Mr. Elliott, in presenting his award, expressed appreciation of the good work done by the chairman, the ladies and by Mr. Atkin, the efficient secretary, and went on make a plea for co-operation in the work of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and its farmers' section. He refererd to the prizes won by Belleville cheese on the Colonial Produce Exchange in London, England, and said that cheese made in the city of Belleville was the best in the world.

The chairman, in a few closing words, spoke of the friendly rivalry between the various contestants at the matches, and the way in which they helped each other, and the final response of the evening was made to the toast to "The Ladies of the Church," by their pastor, Rev. I. Snell.

BUTTERICK 5618

A redingote divided into four panels shows a satin skirt that is narrow enough to be also worn with tunic blouses.

The redingote is one of the most successful of the new Autumn styles. It is tailored without being too severe and looks very smart for the street, shopping, etc., without a coat. Black is still the first choice in color for frocks of this type, but dark blue is being worn again and looks very pretty. The brown shade of African and cinnamon are new, one occasionally sees green, the beige, fawn, tan and covert colors are good style and the reddish shades of rust, brick and copper are endorsed by Paris. Kasha, lightweight cashmere and rep are the first choice of the French dressmakers for woolens: and for silk, faille is new.

FOR EVENING WEAR.

Very beautiful sandals for evening wear are of white kid with brilliant flowers enameled on the vamp and heel.

"Back was Very Painful I am now Well Again"

Mrs. Wm. Walker, Webbwood, Ont., writes:

"I was sick for several months with my stomach, I had pains in the back, and how I used to dread wash day, for my back would pain so that I couldn't lie down when night came. I also had gas on my stomach, and my appetite was so poor that sometimes I did not care whether I ate or not. The doctor gave me medicine, of which I took a number of bottles without benefit. At last I started to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and although I have only used three boxes, I am quite well again."

DRURY GOVERNMENT MEMBERS EXAMINED

Smith, Jarvis and Pepall Trial Brought to its First Dramatic Climax.

TORONTO, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—Gruelling cross examination of two former members of the Drury government who were called as defense witnesses, and a furious attack by T. H. Lennox, K.C., on the present government for the manner in which it had taken proceedings against Hon. Peter Smith, provincial treasurer under United Farmer regime, brought Smith-Jarvis-Pepall trial to its first dramatic climax yesterday.

Questioning of Hon. E. C. Drury, former premier, and Hon. Manning Doherty, former minister of agriculture, as to details of succession duty free bond transaction which resulted in the indictment against their former colleague, provided the crowded court room with more than a few interesting moments, but Mr. Lennox's methods of appeal to the jury in the first summing up for the defense was little short of staggering to many of his hearers.

Guarding his statements by use of rhetorical questions which diminished but little their definiteness, Mr. Lennox charged in effect that Peter Smith had been haled into court as a felon in order that the farmers of Ontario might be forever driven out of public life.

In substance he declared that the attorney general had not acted as the attorney general of Ontario, but as a member of the government which, after ousting the United Farmers from office, had determined that the farmers would be put back where they were before the advent of the Drury administration—mere dormant factors in public affairs of the province.

All that now remains to bring the trial to an end are the addresses of the three other defense counsel.

QUEUES COMMON IN QUEEN CITY TO-DAY

Ten Thousand Votes Cast in London Before Eleven O'clock.

TORONTO, October 23. Canadian Press. — Reports from Ontario ridings, Toronto, and western Ontario, indicated at noon to-day that a heavy vote is being polled in the liquor plebiscite.

The biggest vote in the history of Toronto is probable.

In London, Ont., ten thousand votes had been cast before eleven o'clock; in Brantford, Kitchener and St. Catharines the vote was heavy; in Woodstock and Guelph the voting was slow during the morning but a bigger turn-out was expected after the lunch hour.

REPORTER EXPLORES TUNNEL UNDER WASHINGTON STREETS

THE ENTRANCE TO THE WASHINGTON TUNNELS (LEFT) AND AN EXTERIOR VIEW.

Boardman, NEA Service writer, made a personal exploration of the Washington, D.C., "mystery tunnels" which Harrison G. Dyar, Smithsonian Institue entomologist, says he dug 15 years ago. His digging extended over a period of seven years, Dyar said, and was undertaken for exercise and relaxation from his desk where he studies bugs and butterflies. Boardman's first-hand story reveals the amazing nature of the labyrinths.)

BY LARRY BOARDMAN

WASHINGTON, Oct., 17.—All sorts of fancies suggested themselves as I stood at the mouth of the tunnels which have been discovered under Washington's streets —spies, drug addicts, bootleggers, robbers.

Mystery fairly oozed out as I oozed in

A motor truck wheel had crashed through the earth and opened a gaping hole. I climbed down. The feeble flicker of a flashlight revealed walls of white enameled brick, perfectly laid.

The floor was of earth. On the ceiling were stuck newspapers of the war years 1917 and 1918. They were German papers and carried accounts of Germany's submarine activities. Cryptic marks and symbols marked the pages, suggesting a code.

Tunnel Wired

Walking ahead with the tiny light marking a direct golden line stumbled over a heap if glass—hundrers of bottles, smashed into bits of all sizes

From the top wall hung electric lights. I tried them. They were all dead.

The passageway along which I found myself walking was large enough for two persons to walk abreast. Then it suddenly narrowed and I had to get down upon all fours only to reach a widened space ahead. Here it split into four labyrinthine hallways. I followed each.

One ended within a few hundred feet of the home of Lars Anderson, former ambassador to Japan; another skirted the stables of E. B. McLean, millionaire publisher.

My feeble light barely penetrated the darkness here and I stumbled against the passage end. Here a door was cemented shut I followed a third hallway to find it ending at the basement of a house. Again the passageway had been cemented; then a second door, also cemented and yet another which led to the basement. The house owner said he had never explored it.

Running Water Near

One of the labyrinth outlets is beneath a flight of stairs leading to a sunken garden, well hidden. There was a rumor that still another wandered under the city an entire mile to Rock Creek Park.

I returned to what appeared the main passageway. There I stumbled upon a trap door. Lifting it up a ladder was disclosed. The hole under the door had been filled in and two hours of digging revealed merely a bit of cement arch.

Letting my flash flit about the sides of the wall I discovered an aperture too small to enter, but through which came the sound of running water, as though some subterranean stream flowed close by.

A damp earthy smell pervaded this section. The air of mystery seemed fairly to close in. I started back for the opening from whence I had started, only to find it wasn't where I had thought it. Instead I was in another passage and here was a pile of debris with more bottles and pieces of iron.

Mystery Partly Cleared

I rushed along alleys, leading now this way and now that. I tried to squeeze through openings too small for my body. It seemed that the labyrinth must cover miles of space.

At last, a welcome flicker of light from above! I followed it and found myself back at the tunnel's mouth.

Much of what mystified me has since been cleared by the story of Harrison G. Dyar, a twinkling-eyed stooped-shouldered scientist, with carefully trimmed beard and gray-tinged hair.

He played gopher, he said, as golf lures others The idea of the tunnel came to him while he was making a garden and finding it good exercise and amusing he kept it up at spare times year after year, getting the bricks for the walls from a pile left over when the McLean barn was built and dumping the dirt in a vacant lot.

This much of the mystery seems to be cleared, but it does not answer the question of who has tenanted the tunnels since.

Rotary Club Concert Monday and Tuesday Next

Appearance of London's Great 8 Looked Upon as One of Season's Best Events.

As a real treat for local theatre goers, "London's Great 8" have been engaged to play two performances in this city on Monday and Tuesday next at the Grand Opera House. An entire new repertoire of the finest musical works, and entertaining comedy skits have been promised by Tom Copeland, popular Scotch comedian and composer, who will be dearly remembered by many local theatregoers from his appearance here last spring with the same company.

Not for many seasons before, nor since, have a company of the merit of "London's Great 8" visited this city. Composed as it is, by an all British cast of English and Scotch performers all well known in the music halls of England and offering only the very best in the entertainment world in musical specialties, and comedy skits, a popular welcome is bound to extend itself to this aggregation of Britishers.

With a number of old favorites, including Dorothy Alwynne, famous Scotch Violiniste, and Joan Duff 16 year old pianist sensation, also with Walter Nunn, L.R.A.M., Richard Alexander and Wilfred Virgo, and two added artists recently brought out from England, the company is now stronger in musical and comedy talent than on its previous visit, for Mary Mackie, the popular Scotch comedienne, and Elsie Graves the delightful lyric soprano, who have joined the company only recently, are two exceptionally clever artists in the respective spheres, Miss Mackie, is one of the best known Scotch comediennes, who has toured extensively, in South Africa, and all over the British Isles, and the continent, and who has devoted a number of years to entertaining disabled and crippled soldiers in the camps and hospitals in England during the war period. For her war work, Miss Mackie will be remembered by a number of returned soldiers in Peterboro.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia to Overcome Trouble, Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid" indigestion.

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis, accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

HORSE FOR NICKEL.

Thoroughberd at the Empire City Track Went Lame.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press).—The story of a thoroughbred that was sold for a nickel at Empire City track during the present racing meet was told yesterday.

Reprisal came out of one of the races so lame that his owner, Frank Kelly, a veteran turfman, was in a quandary as to how to dispose of the animal.

"Why don't you sell him?" asked Tommy Mara, noticing the condition of the horse.

"I would if I could find somebody that would part with five cents," said Kelly.

"You've sold a horse," answered Mara. And he gave Kelly a shiny Buffalo nickel and led the animal away.

Reprisal will go into the records as the cheapest horse that has been sold since Billy Lakeland sold Maxico Comez to Bill Clancy for a clay pipe.

2,000,000 WILL VOTE IN ONTARIO

Ballots Were Cast Under the Auspices of the Provincial Governnment.

TORONTO, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Prohibition or moderation is the all-absorbing interest in Ontario to-day. A good number of two millions of men and women entitled to vote on the question are going to the polls to cast their verdict for one or the other. In nearly 7,500 polling stations in 107 Provincial ridings, ballots are being cast under Provincial Government auspices to decide whether the Ontario Temperance Act of 1916, restricting the legal sale of liquor to homeopathic quantities shall survive, or whether it shall give place to a comparatively open sale at government dispensaries.

The weather conditions are ideal in most districts. In and around Toronto the day is fine and sunny; roads through rural districts are in good shape, and the bulk of harvest work being over, the farmers are free to journey to the polls. The tremendous interest taken by the women in to-day's vote is bound to influence the result if it does not decide the result. Not only have women registered everywhere their determination to vote, but women scrutineers and even women returning officers have entered the field.

DOWN WITH DAWES PLAN NOW ADOPTED

Workers Object to Working 12 Hours a Day for a Few Marks a Week.

(By Carl D. Groat, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

BERLIN, October 23. — Fascisti and Communist politcal extremes of the Germaa Republc have adopted a common campaign slogan, 'Down wth the Dawes plan."

Opposition to the expert's plan and to the Government which accepted it will be the principal motion in the speeches of General Ludendorff and of the most extreme "Red" of the opposition wing.

A Fascisti proclamation fairly froths against the Government's "breach of constitution in passing the Dawes-McKenna scheme."

It demands that the voters in the general election on 7th Decmeber, which is a result of the recent dissolution of Parliament, "free Germany from the fearful slave chains of the expert's laws."

Simultaneously the Communists vowed war on the Dawes plan, cursing fulsomely against the "penttentiary election" of the Dawes-Deutschland idea which is intended to enslave the workers and make them work 12 hours a day for a few marks a week.

RARE.

Thirty-two thousand five hundred dollars is the price placed on the most valuable cancelled postage stamp in the world. It sold for 1 cent in British Gulana in 1856. Owned by Arthur Hind of Utica, N.Y., said to have the finest stamp collection in existence.

As a matter of common sense, this stamp is worth no more than any fragment of paper. Its value is in its scarcity. It appeals to "pecuniary honorific," the desire to display the ability to pay.

Similar strange cases of "value" will become increasingly common as our rapidly growing wealthy leisure class looks about to gratify its vanity by possessing the exclusive and only.

63RD ANNUAL MEETING OF HOME BOARD

Idea of Board Was to Found a Place That Would be a Real Home for the Aged.

MAYOR PRESENT.

Garden Has Been a Great Assistance in Keeping the Home Supplied With Products of the Fields.

The annual meeting of the Peterboro Protestant Home took place on Wednesday afternoon. Rev. Dr. C. W. Rose, opened the meeting with prayer and a brief devotional discourse. Mrs. R. Neill, presided. There were present: Rev. M. C. Mackinnon, Rev J. D. Paterson, Rev. Jas. Gordon, Mayor J. J. Turner, church representatives: Mesdames Mason, Seaton, Wolstenholm, the Misses Denne and Aldridge, board members: Mesdames Robinson, Walker, Somerville, the Misses Dickson, Archer., Robinson, Lancaster, Harrison and Halliday, Messrs. J. A. Aylmer and E. F. Mason.

The president, Mrs. R. Neill, spoke briefly, the secretary, Miss Amy Halliday, read the miuntes of the last annual meeting and a report of this year's work, and Miss Sara G. Robinson gave the treasurer's report.

Mayor Turner spoke appreciatively of the splendid work done by the Board and of the splendid fulfilment of the dream of those who met and inaugurated the Home in 1861. He hoped that the diet kitchen would soon be completed and promised his contribution to the undertaking.

The report of the superintendent, Miss A. Lancaster, was read, and commented on favorably by the president, and Mr. E. F. Mason read the report of Mr. J. C. Hamilton, the caretaker, speaking highly of his work.

It was moved by Miss Aldridge and seconded by Mrs. Wolstenholm that the retiring directors; Mrs. R. Neill, Mrs. D. Walker, Mrs. Robt. Hall and Mrs. T. Robinson, be re-elected for three years. The motion carried.

Rev. M. Gordon remarked on the pleasant atmosphere at the Home.

Officers elected

At a meeting following the annual meeting, the following officers were elected for 1924: 1st honorary president; Mrs. Rogers; 2nd honorary president, Mrs. Hazlett, honorary vice presidents: Mrs. R. E. Birdsall, Miss M. Nicholls, President; Mrs. R. Neill, 1st vice president, Mrs. D. Walker, 2nd vice president; Mrs. Robt. Hall, Treasurer, Miss Sara Robinson, Assistant treasurer; Mrs. D. Walker, secretary, Miss Amy Halliday, assistant secretary, Mrs. F. M. Somerville, Board of directors; Mrs. C. I. Suckling (charter member), Miss Dickson, Mrs. Robinson, Miss Archer, Mrs. Somerville, Mr. Mason and Mr. Aylmer. Ex-officio members; Mr. H. Rush and the Mayor. Retiring three-year directors, re-elected: Mrs. R. Neill, Mrs. D. Walker, Mrs. Robt. Hall, and Mrs. T. Robinson.

Reports of Officers

The report of the Treasurer. Miss S. G. Robinson, showed receipts as follows: Ontario Government grant, $1,159.90, City of Peterboro grant, $3,684.50, board received, $2,065.85, donations $266, interest on bonds, debentures, etc, $1,175.84, garden sales, $5.80. Expenditures for the year amounted to $8,528.00.

Miss A. M. Lancaster gave an interesting general report on the conduct of the Home and the routine observed by those housed in it. Early hours obtain here, with breakfast at seven o'clock every day in the year, for, "the old people are almost universal believers in the old adage, "Early to bed and early to rise". Four residents at the Home are over ninety years of age, several more are over eighty and the majority of the remainder over seventy years. Four of the women have not been downstairs for a long time. Miss Lancaster commended the work done for the helpless old ladies by the practical nurse, Mrs. Hurry. Visitors and the general public is welcome between the hours of three to five and seven to nine o'clock of any day, and Miss Lancaster suggested a greater degree of public interest in the "shut-ins" of the Home.

The manager of the Home grounds, Mr. J. C. Hamilton, presented a report showing a better crop garnered this season than during some other years, with the result that there were sufficient green vegetables for the entire summer and ample vegetables to supply the Home until next year's crop comes in. The list included 297 head of cabbage, a quantity of fruit, 64 bushels carrots, 86 bags potatoes, 6 bags seed potatoes, with a large crop of parsnips, turnips, onions and beans, not yet harvested. There were also grown 2 1-2 tons of hay, 3 acres sheaf oats, and 45 bushels mangels to feed the horse and cow. Most of the seed for field and garden was raised this year. The cow produced an average of 12 1-2 quarts of milk per day, a great part of the time giving 16 quarts per day. The poultry, 37 hens, produced 475 dozen and 4 eggs. Chickens to the number of 38, were raised and 27 fowl used at the Home table.

The report of the secretary, Miss Amy Halliday, follows:

This is the 63rd annual meeting of the Peterboro Protestant Home.

In 1861 a meeting was held in the Court-House, and a group of men and women, by private subscription, started the Peterboro Protestant Home. The idea was to found a place that would be a home for the old people of the town of Peterboro, not a refuge, but a place where they would be comfortable, would be taken care of and enjoy the privileges of a home. The board and staff have endeavored to keen this idea before them during all the years that have followed.

It is interesting to note that Mrs. Roger, then a very young girl, was present at that meeting, and Col. Haultain was chairman. The home has kept pace with the growth of the town and has been enlarged from time to time. It has been endowed and has received many gifts. It is now supported by, first, its endowment fund; secondly, the money paid by the city for persons sent in; thirdly, by the government grant, and, fourthly, by those who are regular boarders. Two-thirds being for the use of the public and one-third of the accommodation to be used as the board sees fit.

Last year's statements show that the actual cost to the Home per inmate each week is $4.98½.

The city pays $3.50 per inmate each week. It is possible to manage this difference because so much produce is raised on the place. And under Mr. Hamilton's excellent management the garden is a great success this year also.

The buildings are in good repair, the stables have been painted, and the yards and surroundings very much improved. The interior has been kept in first-class condition, and Miss Lancaster and the members of the staff have worked faithfully and well.

One improvement the board is very anxious to see carried out is the building of a diet kitchen. Every day at least six trays are taken up one and two flights of stairs, and as this is a home, not a hospital, supporting only one practical nurse, the work is sometimes very arduous. A diet kitchen on the second floor would save many steps.

From some gifts received during the last two years, the diet kitchen fund has been formed, which now amounts to $185.00; at least $300.00 will be needed for this purpose. If the church representatives or any other friends would feel like completing this fund they would be doing a splendid thing for the comfort of all in the house. There have been many donations during the year too numerous to mention; all have been most thankfully received. Among them two that are very much appreciated, one from the late Mrs. Mary Wood, who always showed great sympathy with the work of the board, and who helped in many ways, and one from the late Miss Kate English, always a friend of this home.

The annual linen and jam shower was held Oct. 20, 1923, and many people showed their interest by their presence and their gifts.

The Christmas festivities were a great success and especially enjoyable.

The board was very much indebted to the Rev. Mr. Young and to Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Park for the delightful afternoon they gave the old people. Nearly all were there, and one visitor remarked that it was a privilege to be present.

The various young people's societies and the different choirs have given much pleasure by their visits and their entertainments. One event that will be long remembered was the picnic held at Mr. Breyfogle's cottage. This party was given by the Royal Arthur Lodge. Their annual outing and a splendid supper was provided by the ladies of St. Andrew's church.

These excitements do much to break the monotony of the daily lives of the old people.

The members of the Board would like to express their deep sorrow at the death of Miss Flora Davidson. Miss Davidson was secretary of this board for several years and always did her work with great care and efficiency. Her memory will long be cherished by her fellow workers.

It was a great pleasure to have Mrs. Roger take the chair at the September meeting, and she showed that her interest in the Home was as keen as in past years.

The Board wishes to thank the doctors of the city who have given their services most willingly at all times; the clergy who are always ready to help the inmates and hold the regular services; the press, and all others who have in any way helped to brighten the lives of the residents in this building.

The Board has held 20 regular and two special meetings, with an average attendance of seven.

Forty-six inmates have been in the Home during the year, the largest number yet received: 26 Canadians, 15 English; 3 Irish; 1 Welsh; 1 United States.

There are in the Home, Oct. 1st, 1924: 36 inmates; 17 men; 19 women.

Nine have been discharged for various reasons; there was 1 death.

The total number of days spent in the Home was 12,080; with the average number of days per inmate.

The bed capacity is 45; beds made up, 42.

The year 1923-24, which closed on Sept. 30th, has been quiet and peaceful and everything has been done to make the old people comfortable and happy.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

AMY VERNON HALLIDAY,
Secretary.

WEDDING BELLS

McFADDEN—HUBBS.

A quiet wedding was solemnized in All Saints' Church, Peterboro, on October 22nd, when Frederick Arthur McFadden and Cora Belle Hubbs were married by Rev. J. D. Paterson. Only a few friends attended as witnesses, and afterwards the happy couple left on the afternoon train. It is hoped that they will eventually settle in Peterboro.

PACEY—GALLAGHER.

The marriage was quietly solemnized at St. Peter's Cathedral on Wednesday morning at 6 o'clock when May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gallagher, of this city, became the bride of Mr. George F. Pacey, of Toronto.

Rev. P. Costello officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and was attended by her sister, Miss Helen Gallagher, while Mr. James Collins, uncle of the bride, assisted the groom.

The groom's gift to the bride was a fur neckpiece, to the bridesmaid an ivory clock and to the groomsman a set of military brushes.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents to the immediate relatives and friends.

A particularly pleasing coincidence in connection with the ceremony was that Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher, the bride's parents, also celebrated the 35th anniversary of their wedding.

The happy couple left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for a short honeymoon in Hamilton, after which they will reside in Toronto.

And I'm sitting all alone
There always comes a longing

IN MEMORIAM.

BROWN.—In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Wilfrid, who died October 23, 1922:
Our family circle is broken
Within our happy home,
A brother dear, a son so true
From loving ones has gone.

Life's golden cord is severed
His soul from earth has fled
That faithful one so dear to all
Is numbered with the dead.

I cannot say, and I will not say
That he is dead. He is just away
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
He has wandered into an unknown land.

Mild and gentle as he was brave,
When the sweetest love of his life he gave
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be since he lingers there.

At home on the beautiful hills of God
By the village of rest so fair,
Some day, some time, when our task is done,
With joy we can meet him there.

IN MEMORIAM

JONES—In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. W. M. Jones, who departed this life Oct. 23, 1920.

The rolling stream of life goes on,
But still the vacant chair,
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile,
Of her, who once sat there.
When for a while we part,
The thought will soothe our pain,
That we shall still be joined in heart,
And one day meet again

SMITH'S COUNSEL FINISHED ADDRESS

Lennox Said Case Against Smith Was Persecution and Not Prosecution.

TORONTO, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—T. H. Lennox, K.C., counsel for Peter Smith, former provincial treasurer, charged with Aemilius Jarvis, Sr., Aemilius Jarvis, Jr., and Harry Pepall, with conspiracy to defraud the province, concluded his address to the jury this morning and R. H. Greer, K.C., counsel for Jarvis, Jr., commenced his. Mr. Lennox said the case against Peter Smith was persecution and not prosecution. He contended that Mr. Smith was charged for political reasons, and that the attorney general had been over zealous. If the attorney general had any suspicions he should have charged Smith with accepting secret commissions instead of conspiracy. Mr. Greer said that Jarvis, Jr., wasn't even known to former Premier Drury or Mr. Doherty, who were members of the cabinet who negotiated the deal with Jarvis, Sr. Jarvis, Jr., he said, was out of the country on his honeymoon when the agreement with the Government was made. He had just returned from war and was in poor health and was not taking any part in the business.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

CASHIERS CARRIED I.O.U.'S FOR MONTHS

Cecil Stewart Said He Cashed and Carried Cheque For $110 For 13 Months For Robert Griffith.

HAMILTON, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press).—How cheques and I.O.U.'s of officials of the city tax department were conveniently carried for lengthy periods by cashiers there made for rather startling testimony at the civic probe yesterday.

Cecil Stewart, one of the cashiers, said he had cashed and carried for 13 months a cheque for $110 for Robert Griffith, deputy tax collector. He had also later cashed an I.O.U. for $40 for Mr. Griffith and carried this for four months. Tax Collector Kerr had also had a cheque and I.O.U.'s carried.

Mr. Griffith, he continued, was asked to redeem the cheque one week after it was cashed, as a request had been made that it be not submitted to a bank for payment. Misunderstanding then arose in which Mr. Griffith held that $100 had been paid back, Mr. Stewart said.

Mr. Stewart said he never again approached his departmental head regarding the cheque, but was resigned to make good the loss himself. He carried Mr. Griffith's cheque and I.O.U. until the disclosures of dishonesty were made in the city tax department about one month ago. Then, oddly enough, the cheque, payment of which had been tactially disputed for 13 months and the I.O.U. for $40 for four months' standing, were promptly redeemed by Mr. Griffiths. Other startling testimony went to show that cashiers in the tax department arrived at their quarterly recapitulations and their annual cash balances by making these upon different days and borrowing from each other to cover any cash shortage which might exist.

Smith, chief accountant, are dropped on new indictment.

Charges are conspiracy.

Request for a bench warrant for the arrest of Mr. Haney was refused by Chief Justice R. M. Meredhit, who said that Mr. Haney would appear with other directors on Monday morning.

C. G. E. TOOL ROOM, ORANGEMEN AND PORECLAIN SOFTBALL VICTORS

Toolmakers Handed Brass Department a Beating By Score of 18-2.

L.O.L. TRIM K. OF C.

C.N.R. Lost Close Game to the Poreclain Dept. Team.

The Tool Room swamped the Brass Department in a hectic affair by an 18 to 2 score in the opener at the Brock Street Arena last night. Mahood pitched steady ball for the losers, and used his head, but he received rank support by his teammates.

The Tool Room, with a line-up of stars, took the lead early and had "the old pill" always bouncing.

L.O.L. BEAT K. OF C.

The fans expected something good when the L.O.L. and the K. of C. batted out on the boards to do their stuff in the final engagement and they weren't disappointed. In the most exciting and keenest games yet seen the Knights were beaten 10 to 10 by the Fife and Drum brigade. It was the hitting of the first half of the Orangemen's line-up that won them the victory. Hardill had six hits in six appearances and must go down as the Bunt King. Batten played a sterling fielding game, and the whole L.O.L. outfit showed snappy work in the field.

The Knights played steady ball and were in the game to the finish. Carson did some fine work out in left field.

EXPERTS OVERLOOK BASSLER

In picking All-America teams, the experts have overlooked Johnny Bassler of Detroit. He is a fine receiver and the hardest hitting catcher in the American League. His mark is close to .350.

EXAMINER LEAGUE.

Last night's rolling of the Examiner Intershop League, at Solomon's Alleys, was featured by some great rolling. Good scores were turned in by the boys and there were plenty of scores over 500.

Practically all of the winners took three straight games, with the Proofers showing the way in the rolling, that team rolling over 700 in every game, which is great rolling for a four man team. They rolled 2155 for the three games. The result of the games were: Linos 3, Pressman 0; Newsies 3, Inters 0; Proofers 3, Jobbers 0; Casters 2, Monos 1. Owing to the fact that the Inters lost 48 straight games last season, and have started off this season by dropping five straight it has been decided that the name must be a jinx and from now on they will be known as the Comps.

The high roller for three games last night was George Taylor, who rung up the high score of 644. Swanston was next with 599, Gray with 590, Lacheur with 583 and McCauley with 581. Max Swanston got the high single of the league when he toppled the wood for 264 for a single game.

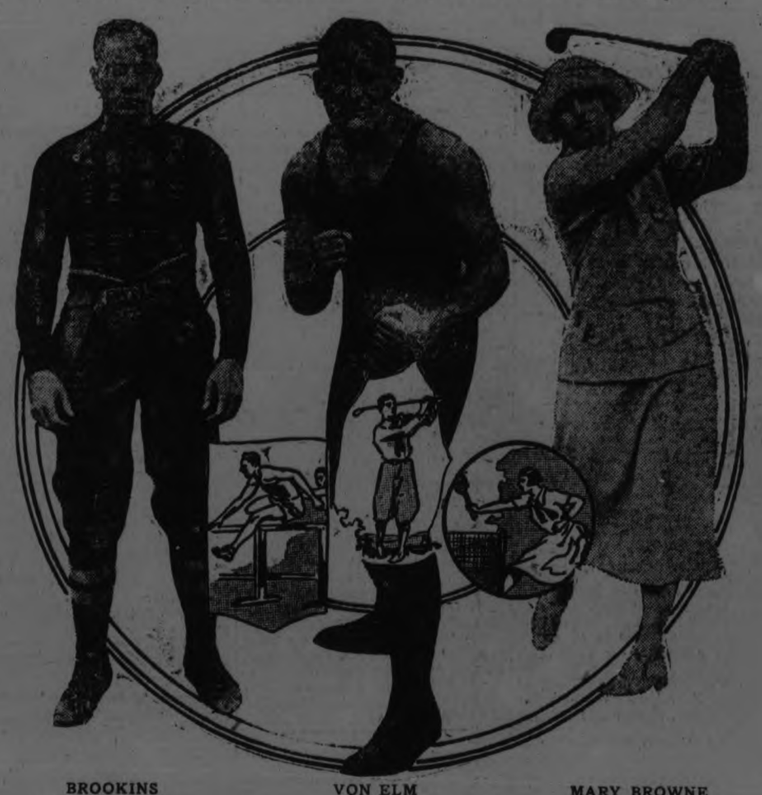
DAY OF SPORT SPECIALIST IS GONE

Mary Browne, Von Elm, Brookins and Harris Show Versatility Wins.



BROOKINS

BY JOE WILLIAMS

The specialist in sports seems to be passing into the discard along with the gold-toothed soubrette and the 20-cent business mans lunch.

Versatility in sports used to be looked upon as a badge of mediocrity, rather than a mark of all-round genius.

The specialist who could do one thing a shade better than any other bird was encouraged to stick to his knitting and leave the paperhanging for the less magnificent citizens.

It's different now.

Bucky Harris has just led the Washington team to its first championship. Harris is a master second baseman. Many of the experts will tell you he outplayed the great Frisch during the series. But Harris isn't a one-sport man. Basketball is his other racket. Few play it better.

VON ELM

Enter Mr. Brookins

Iowa and Ohio State, Western Conference elevens, played to a score less tie in their first game of the season. Toward the close of the game Iowa started a half-back named Brooklins, and in five successive plays he advanced the ball 31 yards, more than six yards a minute. He was still tearing through the Buckeyes' defense when the whistle blew.

Brookins' first name is Charley. Perhaps you've heard of him. Your record books show him to be the world's greatest hurdle.

Being double-gaited in sports didn't keep two notable athletes from reaching the finals in the amateur and the women's golf championships this year.

George Von Elm of Los Angeles was good enough to survive all competition except Bobby Jones at Merion, while Mary B. Browne, playing in her first national event, was not checked out until the gathering twilight had settled on the final day's scores.

Von Elm a Boxer

Von Elm is almost as skillful a boxer as he is a golfer. In the west they rate him as an amateur mittslinger capable of holding his own in any kind of company.

Mary Browne's story is well known. Ten years ago she was the Helen Willis of tennis. She is still tough picking for the girls who make graceful gestures on the court. On top of that she is now one of the first five in feminine golf.

Miss Browne took up golf after reaching the heights in tennis, and mastered the game without losing any of her ability with the racquet.

That ought to be proof enough that versatility is not a handicap.

MARY BROWNE

CITY CHAMPIONSHIPS OPEN ON SATURDAY

A large turn out of competitors is exected especially in junior events. The City Championships until recently have been allowed to lapse but now they have been revived and are regaining importance each year. It is hoped that this year new records will be made in many of the events.

Following are the events:

BOXER MAY DIE.

Young Travet Knocked Unconscious by Heavier Man.

PARIS, October 22. — Physicians attending Young Travet, a middleweight, who was taken to the hospital last night, after being knocked unconscious in the eleventh round of a bout with the French champion, Francis Charles, are holding out little hope for his recovery The injured fighter recovered consciousness for a few minutes to-day but again lapsed into a coma

The promoters of last night's bout are being criticized for permitting Charles to enter the ring without weighing in He has always been a large middleweight and appeared more like a light heavyweight when he entered the ring last night.

Travel had just graduated from the welterweight class. He was 19 years old and considered a promising boxer.

Experts say that there were at least 12 pounds difference between the weights of Charles and Travet.

The NUT CRACKER BY JOE WILLIAMS

In considering a future remember the Shenandoah is the only gas bag that ever got anywhere in this country.

The magnates have shut up the scandal but unfortunately there is no way to shut the magnates.

Mr. Ted Moore, a middleweight, is charged with knocking out his land lady. . . . Being an English fighter Mr. Moore should have little trouble proving his innocence.

Due to the fine pitching of Merritt, St. Paul copped the junior world series. . . . They won on their Merritt, as you might say.

Stanley Harris' parents wanted a girl and Messrs. Frisch, Kelly and others are sorry they didn't get what they wanted.

The game of billiard is exploiting a masked marvel. . . . We shall never be thoroughly happy until we see a masked marvel of barn-yard golf.

Any golfer can prove to you that when Columbus landed the first thing he said was, "This looks like a nice spot for an 18-hole course.

It is to the credit of Wales that while visiting Chicago he refrained from insisting on looping the loop.

Jack Dempsey and Walter Johnson may buy a ball club and thus combine the knockout and the strike out.

Henry Ford says he doesn't want Muscle Shoals now. . . . Maybe he's heard the dern thing developed a charley horse.

Who remembers the good old days when John J. McGraw was known as the master mind of baseball?

It is too early yet to say with accuracy how many teams in the country are good enough to beat the Big Three, which are, as you know, the best teams in the country.

HARD-HITTING PITCHERS

Until the 1924 series only one pitcher had made a home run in the annual classic. Jim Bagby turned the trick for Cleveland in 1920. In the series between the Giants and Nationals two of the Giants' pitchers, Ryan and Bentley, hit for the circuit.

HORNSBY SETS NEW RECORD

Rogers Hornsby, in batting well over .400 for 1924, again leads the National League and sets a new record of topping that organization for five successive years. He is the most consistent batsman in the majors.

MOORE HELPS PIRATES

Moore, who was used in the outfield during the fag end of the season because of his hitting, came to the Pittsburgh club as an infielder. Earlier in the campaign he did great work in place of Traynor at third.

MEUSEL HAS BEST ARM

Bob Meusel of the New York Americans has the strongest and most accurate throwing arm in the majors. He literally throws strikes on every ball from the outfield.

NEW LEADER FOR CHICAGO

The failure of Johnny Evers in directing the Chicago White Sox makes it seem certain that club will have a new manager next year. Eddie Collins is the logical choice but it is said he is not in good favor with Comiskey. Collins has annually made Comiskey come across with a fat contract.

BANQUET MARKS END OF SEASON IN MERCANTILE

President Harry Cressman Lauded For His Work at the Helm—Cup Presented.

C.G.E. WON TROPHY.

Jake Solomon Lionized By Fans Who Are Grateful For His Baseball Genius.

The banquet of the city Mercantile League, attended by about sixty members at Cressman's tea room last night, was one of the peppiest affairs of the year. Harry Cressman, president of the league kept order, and Blood's Orchestra provided the syncopation.

Dining having been disposed of in appreciative silence, Harry Cressman presented the cup to the C.G.E. team, with a happy little speech of commendation of the success of the players. Although a new entry in the league, he said, the C.G.E. team had come from behind to win with honor. The sportsmanship of the team was commented on.

William Bennett, manager of the winning aggregation, received the trophy and passed commendation to his players, every one of whom, he said, had played the game well.

Umpire Harry Cobb was the recipient of a walking cane in recognition of his services throughout the season, accompanied with a number of complimentary remarks on his fairness and willingness to give his services at all times free of charge. Mr. Cobb remarked, in thanking the donors, that during the next season he will have something to lean on while giving his decisions.

Guest Of Honor.

Jake Solomon, soon to be lost to balldom in Peterborough, was the guest of honor, and was eulogized by the president for his work in baseball circles in the city. "Jake" said he was sorry to leave the crowd and was glad to have been of service. A unanimous response in the strains of "He's a jolly good fellow", and three hearty cheers brought a broad smile to the lion of the evening.

The managers of the several teams in the league, O'Neil of the Bankers; Whaley of the Lockworks; Butcher of the Quaker Oats; and Prosser of the Westclox, joined in declaring the success of the league, and unanimously favored continuing it next year with even greater success.

The managers handed many bouquets to Harry Cressman for his unbiased attitude and genial goodwill in his difficult position as president of the league.

The gathering broke up amid general expresions of hope that a similar function will put an equally happy ending to next season's play, each team, of course, fancying itself in the position that the C.G.E. has won this year.

THE DERBY TIME

Looking at the times of the Derby for the past fifty years, you will find that 2 min. 40 secs. was never beaten till the year 1905, when Lord Rosebery's Cicero won in 2 mins. 39 3-5 secs., and since then the times have always been under 2 mins. 40 secs., with the exception of the year 1909, when it took the King's Minoru 2 mins. 42 2-5 secs., to cover the course of a mile and a half, and this year's winner, Lord Derby's Sansovino in 2 mins. 46 3-5 secs., the weather accounting for this poor time.

I do not include the substitute races run at Newmarket during the war. I leave them out. The two fastest horses that have ever won the Derby are Major G. Loder's Spion Kop in 1920 in 2 mins. 34 4-5 secs., and Lord Woolavington's Captain Cuttle in 1922 in 2 mins. 34 3-5 secs. This makes me think that the Derby winners since 1905 would have beaten many of the previous winners when most of the times were from 2 mins. 40 4-5 secs. to 2 mins. 56 4-5 secs., this being Sir F. Johnstone's Common's time when he won in 1891. It took the Duke of Westminster's great Ormonde in 1886 2 mins. 45 3-5 secs. to cover the course.

It is said that the time test is no guide in horse racing, but the time test in all racing with the exception of boat racing is a great factor.

Why are the times so much faster since 1905? Do the jockeys know how to ride them better, or are the horses faster?

Now, with men, amateurs never knew how to run the quarter of a mile race till the great American, the late L. E. Myers, of the Manhattan Athletic Club, came over here in 1881 and won the Amateur Athletic Association Championship quarter of a mile at Birmingham on July 16, 1881, in 48 3-5 secs., and made the late W. P. Phillips, of the London Athletic Club, run second in 49 1-5 secs., time he had never shown before.

Previous to Myer's visit it was usual to make a waiting race of the quarter, but Myers showed that there should be no waiting, but going all the way, and it is noticeable that since this day the times have been much faster. Is it the same with our horses?

SANDY HOOK PILOT VALUABLE SEAMAN

His Job Is To See That All Ships Get Safely Into Port At N. Y.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.— Anybody who has ever crossed the big pond or come into the port of New York from any port knows what a Sandy Hook pilot is and why he is, but very few know just who he is.

The Sandy Hook pilot is the guardian angel of the sea, the alow instead of aloof, looking after the interests of Jack to guide him into a safe haven and save him from the pitfalls and perils of a lee shore. Included in Jack's company are the millions of human birds of passage who skim the ocean's billows each season for the solace of London's fogs, the pavements of Paris, the mountains of Switzerland and the blue waters of the Mediterranean, and return to New York at the end of the season on one of the greyhounds of the Atlantic.

The last man to leave from a ship on its outward passage is the Sandy Hook pilot. He had brought the vessel across the upper and lower bay, through the narrows, out on to the heaving bosom of old ocean, and then made his adieu down a flying ladder flapping against the ship's side, dropping into his yawl waiting to carry him back to the pilot boat patrolling the Hook. And the pilot is the first man to step aboard ship soon after the light on Fire Island is sighted or the Scotland Lightship heaves in view. He stays on her bridge in full command until she is safely tied up at her dock.

For nearly a century the Sandy Hook pilots have been the conductors for steamers and ships coming into or going out of the port of New York. Amiable dogs of the sea, they guide to safety the argosies of old Neptune, as much at home on the bridge in sleet, snow, fog and hurricane as the landlubber ashore in the lee of his own hearthstone.

They are all able seamen, all able to reef and steer and take command of anything that plows through the spray from a smart little yacht to a 50,000-ton ocean liner. They have been through shipwreck and storm, with sail and steam; have saved hundreds of lives in rescue work and pulled many ships off the rocks.

In these days the pilot boats cruising outside to pick up incoming ships have steam power. In the old days they carried nothing but sail, and when a pilot boarded a homeward-bound craft he wore a high silk hat and a frock coat and got a reception befitting the ruler of the deep.

In the days of sail there was keen competition among the New York and New Jersey pilots, and many a great race was run over the broad Atlantic for an incoming prize. It was an unwritten law that the pilot who first spoke a ship got her, and the farther out to sea a steamer was picked up the greater the prize. One race that is still a record was that between the pilot boats William H. Bateman, Edmund Blunt and Mary Williams for the steamer Rhein, of the North German Lloyd, on a May morning in 1890. The Bateman was the first to see the smoke of the liner and was first away. She had moved hardly a yard when the other two schooners were after her in the stiff northwesterly breeze with everything set and the masts creaking under the weight of canvas. The sea was kicking up a muss, restless from the storm of the day before, and the three schooners, with starboard rails under, cut the waves like snowplows going through light drifts of snow.

Manned and steered by men who knew the ocean tracks like the villager knows the streets of the old home town, they seemed to fly across the sea in the direction of the smoke on the horizon. They dipped and rose like gulls, and it was a neck-and-neck race, with the possibility of victory in favor of the speediest craft—the Bateman. But when the navigator raised his hand in the direction of the bridge of the Rhein and the German captain responded by an upraise of his left arm, indicating that the pilot was selected, the Bateman was not more than a dozen yards in the lead. The other two wore off in a semi-circle and the two crews gave hearty cheers for the victor. That was the spirit of the sea.

It was Captain "Dick" Brown, one of the pilots, who took the yacht America across the sea and won the race at Cowes, bringing back with him the cup which has remained the America's Cup since August 22, 1851. The laudations of the country never caused Captain Dick to turn a hair, and he never criticized the English yachts, merely saying, "You see, we had a good boat."

The life of a Sandy Hook pilot is one of thrilling incidents and daring rescues, and many pilot boats have paid the toll of the storms of the sea. In wartime the pilots have been among the first to offer the services of themselves and their craft to Uncle Sam, and they have played important parts in the Civil War, Spanish War and the World War. Their knowledge of the habor and its constantly changing shoals stood the country in good stead in the last war, and particularly at the time when nearby waters were infested with German submarines.

Only the skill of the pilots could have brought through the harbor the dozens of dynamite ships leaving port nightly, when no lights could be shown, when the channel was crowded and when a collision or the slightest mishap might have resulted in an accident more deadly than war. But the Sandy Hook pilots were on the bridges, and even the submarines had no terrors for them, for they kept on their stations at sea with only running light at night, when only armed naval ships on the lookout for raiders were supposed to occupy such dangerous posts. During the war the pilots handled as many as sixty ships a day, doing their work mostly at night.

HEAVY BAT NO HELP.

Outfielder Ken Williams of the St. Louis Browns used a much heavier bat than usual the past season with a hope of increasing his home run total but failed to get results.

CURED HIS RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation. If you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 489L Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N.J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

California, with 44 stations, leads the States in number of broadcasting stations in operation. New York city, with 12 stations, is first among the cities.

Radio "spongers" are so numerous in Germany that the police threaten a general raid on houses suspected of having unlicensed sets. Owners must pay a license fee of 50 cents a month..

As the result of a long series of observations made in England, it was learned that radio reception is best during the full moon period. When the moon changes from full to new moon reception is poorest.

WHAT KIND OF A GUY IS BOB JONES?

Regular As They Make 'Em, and Fame Has Not Turned His Dixie Head a Bit.

By JOE WILLIAMS.

What kind of a guy is Bobby Jones? You already know what kind of a golfer he is. Those who call him the Varden of America pay both the British master and the young southern genuis a graceful compliment.

At the age of 20 Jones became the open champion of this country. Now at 22 he is the amateur champion.

Jones has been constantly in the spotlight since 1916 when as a mere kid he made a sensational debut in the amateur championship at the Merion Cricket Club — the same course, by fascinating coincidence, over which he won the title for the first time this year.

Next to Babe Ruth, Jones is the best known sporting figure before the American public. How is this 22-year-old champion accepting the extraordinary homage of a sport-stirred nation? Has it gone to his head? .....You don't know Bobby Jones.

It will take something infinitely more important than a golf championship to give him a swagger air and an arched eyebrow.

Jones is the same, charming unaffected youth today that he was eight or nine years ago when solemn-faced critics were deploring his "explosive temperament," and insisting that he would never be a champion until he quit throwing his clubs for record-breaking distances.

It probably is not straining the truth to say that Jones is the most popular golfer in the game today, not only with spectators but with opposing players. In this respect, his position is not unlike that of Walter Johnson in baseball.

Indeed, the two seem to have a great deal in common, despite the marked difference in their ages. Simplicity of manner, a high sense of sportsmanship and a quiet, unobtrusive efficiency. That's Johnson. It is also Jones.

In the public mind Jones is probably pictured as a gay young blade who flits blithely from one golf championship to another. Jones is not that type at all. A year ago he graduated from Harvard with an A.B. degree. At present he is mastering the fundamentals of real estate finances in his home city.

It took a lot of plugging to get that A.B. degree. It will take a lot of level-headed concentration to succeed in real estate finances. No, golf is hardly Bobby's life work, or topmost ambition.

Jones is a pleasant conversationalist and a humorous philosopher. Speaking of courage in golf, he once said of the fighting Hagen, "The only time you ever see him with his head down is when he's making a shot."

It is hardly necessary to say Jones is a gallant loser. At Brookline, after losing to Sweetser, someone asked him if he would stay for the finals. "Certainly," answered Jones. "They can beat me off but they can't chase me off!"

Jones' greatest friend in golf is Francis Ouimet. Bobby made the Boston sportsman his ideal as a kid and in recent years the two have become inseparable.

Fate plays many churlish pranks. It fell to the lot of Jones to give Ouimet the worst beating he ever suffered in the recent championship.

Don't scoff at form. Note the position of the arms, feet and body of Jones the boy.

And note in this picture the same characteristics unchanged in Jones the champion.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

"ACE HIGH" IS DUMBELLS NEXT.

Canada's foremost theatrical organization, The Dumbells, will be seen at their unequalled best when they offer their latest revue, "Ace High," at the Grand for three days, commencing to-night.

All the stars of all the soldier shows have been gathered under the Dumbells banner this season.

The company is still headed by Ross Hamilton and Al. Plunkett, and now includes "Red" Newman, Arthur Holland, Stan. Bennett, Pat Rafferty, Ben Allen, Morley Plunkett, and a host of other popular entertainers, together with the genial Captain Plunkett and the best orchestra ever assembled in Canada.

The new revue gets its title from the opening scene, which depicts a battle in the air and a crashing plane. The whole show is designed to have all the speed, action and sheer beauty of a Sopwith scout in full flight.

Captain Plunkett has just returned from England and France, where he secured a wealth of material, songs and sketches for his sixth annual Canadian revue.

AT THE REGENT.

"The Tenth Woman," which is the feature at the Regent Theatre this week, is a production that can be included in the class of the unexcelled. It is an adaptation from the novel of the same name by Harriet T. Comstock. James Flood is the director.

The entire photoplay has that finished touch throughout, that fineness of construction which gives it a certain distinction. The photoplay is excellent; the sets beautifully arranged; the direction flawless. In fact, "The Tenth Woman" is a bit of work of which both director and producer can be proud.

Even if the picture had nothing more to recommend it, it would be worth seeing because of the unusual combination of stars. June Marlowe who shares stellar honors with Beverly Bayne, although very young, is one of the most promising stars on the screen to-day. Beverly Bayne is as charming as ever even though she has not been in the limelight for a good many years. Others who give notable characterizations are John Roche, Raymond McKee, Charles "Buddy" Post, Gilbert Holmes, Alec Francis, and Edith Yorke.

There is still another feature, a very important one, which cannot be overlooked. The story is excellent. We shall not venture to say that it is entirely new, for every plot is old, but it is handled with such deft touches of originality, and it is so cleverly arranged in detail, that it appears to be something quite extraordianry to the spectator.

There could not be much more to say about any production. See this Warner picture. It is excellent entertainment.

"The Tenth Woman" at the Regent Theatre. It is the screen adaptation of the novel of the same name from the pen of Harriet T. Comstock. When published, this book was heralded far and wide by reason of its unique situations and treatment.

Reviewing the novel, the Philadelphia Ledger said: "Few of our modern writers of either sex have furnished more vivid and lifelike characterizations that depend for their value upon what may probably be called 'realness' than this gifted woman."

This Warner Bros. Classic of the Screen boasts an exceptional cast headed by Beverly Bayne and June Marlowe. Beverly Bayne is making her return to screendom in a number of Warner productions and Miss Marlowe is known as the girl with the soulful eyes and has genuine talent. The rest of the cast includes John Roche, Raymond McKee, Charles Holmes, Alec Francis and Edith Yorke.

James Flood directed and Julien Josephson did the adaptation. It is an exceptional picture.

AT THE ROYAL.

PARAMOUNT'S $5,000 PRIZE-TITLE STORY GRIPPING RADIO-ROMANCE.

Agnes Ayres and Antonio Moreno Featured in Arthur Stringer's "Story Without a Name"—Irvin Willat Production.

A hen-hawk, floating high in the summer air, tilted and veered as it passed over Power House Hill. Old Sam Carter, stolidly hoeing in his bean-field, called to his daughter quietly, and then by pantomime indicated that he wanted his gun to shoot down this hovering enemy of their hen-run.

"The girl understood his signals and waited, finger-tips against her ears, in dread of the coming explosion.

"But no explosion took place. Instead, a strange thing happened. Suddenly out of the blue where it floated, the huge bird fell like a plummet to the ground. No trigger had been pulled. No shot had been fired. But the hen-hawk lay, a mass of rumpled feathers, dead between the hen-rows.

"Old Sam stood scratching his head.

"'What killed it, dad?' asked the girl, a note of awe in her voice.

"'If it weren't a critter of the wild, I'd call it heart-failure. For nothing hit that bird, unless it was the final thought of its onery ways!'

"But up in the tower work-shop just beyond the crest of Power House Hill no such uncertainty marked the two brown-faced young men bent over their instruments. The younger of the two dropped the binoculars with which he had been watching the scene over the bean-field.

"'By God, Alan, you got him!' he cried with an odd tremor of triumph in his voice.

"Alan Holt turned a switch and jerked a plug from the small dial board in front of him. He laughed, almost foolishly, as he wiped his face with a shirt-sleeve sadly stained with oil and acid."

Here's the widely-heralded "Story Without a Name" on the screen at last!

Interesting? That doesn't half begin to describe it.

Agnes Ayres and Antonio Moreno are featured in the principal roles of the picture, as Irvin Willat production for Paramount, adapted to the screen from Arthur Stringer's magazine serial and novel by Victor Irvin.

"The Story Without a Name" is the radio tale for which Photoplay Magazine offered fans through a nation-wide contest $5,000 for a suitable title. The rules of the contest were broadcast from the sixty big radio stations of the nation, and today there is hardly a person who hasn't heard of and is not waiting for a chance to see this greatest advertised of all motion pictures at their favorite theatre.

That chance has arrived, for "The Story Without a Name" will be the feature at the Royal Theatre to-night to remain for three days.

Appearing in the big cast in support of the featured players are such well-known names as Louis Wolheim, Tyrone Power, Dagmar Godowsky, Maurice Costello, Jack Bohn, Ivan Linow and others.

If there ever was anything new in pictures, this is it!

ANDY GUMP BACK AT ROYAL.

Another of the popular Andy Gump comedies is one of the attractions at the Royal for the balance of this week. Andy can be relied upon for genuine laughs.

FALSEFACES FOR THE KIDDIES AT ROYAL SATURDAY MATINEE.

Every child attending the matinee Saturday will be presented with a falseface. Hallowe'en is not far away, and the Royal management have not forgotten the kiddies. The quality of these falsefaces is of the very best. They are now on display in the window at the Royal.

ELECTION RETURNS AT ROYAL TO-NIGHT.

The Royal will announce the election returns to-night as fast as they come over the wire.

AT THE CAPITOL.

A motion picture of unusual strength and beauty is on view at the Capitol Theatre this week. It is Maurice Tourneur's "The White Moth," which began an engagement last night.

Barbara La Marr as "The White Moth," a beautiful, gay dancer of the Paris stage, at whose feet all men worship, reaches her greatest histrionic heights and was never more appealing.

Conway Tearle, playing opposite her as Robert Vantine, a young American millionaire, who weds her solely to prevent her marriage to a younger brother, and who finds himself involved in a most singular romance, never gave the screen a finer characterization.

Ben Lyon as Douglas, the younger brother, more than lives up to the promise held out by his past picture performances.

The whole story is beautifully done and holds the interest from start to finish. Paris and its night life are depicted only as a true Frenchman could depict them, and the production from all standpoints is a signal triumph for Tourneur.

One of the most striking of scenes is that showing the Bal des Artistes, the annual brilliant function of the Paris Latin Quartier. Other scenes transport the audience to New York.

Charles de Roche, as 'El Volcano' the dancing partner of the White Moth, gives a strong characterization, and others whose work helps to make this one of the best photoplays of the season are Edna Murphy, Josie Sedgwick, Kathleen Kirkham and William Orlamond.

"The White Moth" is a First National picture presented by M. C. Levee. It was adapted for the screen by Albert Shelby LeVino from Izola Forrester's popular story of the same name. It makes a rare piece of screen entertainment.

O.T.A. MAJORITY INCREASES WITH PASSING HOURS UNTIL IT NEARS FORTY THOUSAND

Dramatic Moments Marked Change From Huge Wet Majority Last Night.

DRYS CLAIM 55,000.

Prohibition Leaders Expect That Majority Will Reach 75,000.

Probably never before has a vote of importance been accompanied by so dramatic changes as accompanied the receipt of results of the Ontario plebiscite in Peterboro last night. Early returns received by special telegraph at The Examiner and quickly bulletined, gave the city tiding of a huge majority for Government control. Toronto went wet by a majority of nearly 50,000. On its heels came Hamilton and Ottawa, the former by over 13,000, and the latter by over 10,000. They were quickly followed by Windsor, with a wet majority of 13,000, and most of the smaller cities with majorities that grew less as their population decreased. All along the border and up through the French-speaking settlements the tide of Government control swept in large proportions of the votes. At 9.30 the supporters of Government control were jubilant; the majority for Government control had neared the 80,000 figure; and even the temperance forces were prepared to admit defeat.

Then Ontario came back.

From the villages and concessions of Old Ontario came the vote of the farm folk, and little by little, return after return, the great wet wave receded. For nearly three hours the tense uncertainty continued, each succeeding summary showing a little smaller majority for Government control. Sometimes the drop was hundreds, sometimes thousands, but never did the tide again flow towards the goal of the moderationists. Gradually the zero mark was neared. Then it was passed.

At 11.15 The Examiner bulletin board flashed the news: "Drys are in the lead."

Cheers and groans greeted the fateful flash. The huge majority that had sent hundreds off to bed, either satisfied or sorrowful, but all convinced that the wets had carried the day, was lost. The strongholds of the cities had failed to pile up enough votes to withstand the steady nibbling of the rural polls.

The majority will be small, it is conceded, but it is steadily growing. A few thousands at a time, the total in favor of O.T.A. went from 30,000 at 11 o'clock to 36,000 at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and a majority of 55,000 on the returns already tabulated was claimed by the officials at the prohibition headquarters in Toronto at noon to-day. Dry leaders confidently expect that the majority will reach 75,000 when the returns are complete.

Summary of Results.

More than 1,000 polls, and possibly 100,000 votes, are to be heard from, and the present official indications are that the majority for prohibition will fall little short of 40,000.

Of the 111 ridings in the Province the probability is that about 70 will support the O.T.A. Premier Ferguson's own riding of Grenville gave a majority of two to one for the O.T.A., or a majority of 1,768. The riding of his Attorney-General, Mr. Nickle, that of Kingston, went dry by 1,414 votes. The majority for Government control rolled up by the cities of Ontario reached nearly 100,000 votes. The figures are nearly complete, and give the following results: Favoring Government control, 17 cities: favoring O.T.A., 8 cities. Totalling up the votes in this total of twenty-five cities, we get the following result: For Government control, 103,133: for O.T.A. 5,649, a net majority for Government control in the cities of 97,484. The towns did not follow the lead of the cities. Out of 71 that have reported 50 gave majorities for the O.T.A. and 21 favored Mr. Ferguson's policy. The town vote works out as follows: Favoring prohibition, 20,315: favoring Government control, 12,563. Town majority for the O.T.A., 7,752.

Some Delay.

There has been delay in some returns owing to misunderstandings over the method of reporting returns. Some returning officers have declined to reveal these and have sent their ballot boxes to the Government in Toronto without divulging the result. There are also some remote country polls unreported, but the majority are small, and the final result of the plebiscite will not be greatly affected by their quota of votes. The total vote apparently will be very little over a million. There are roughly 2,000,000 people on the Provincial voters' list.

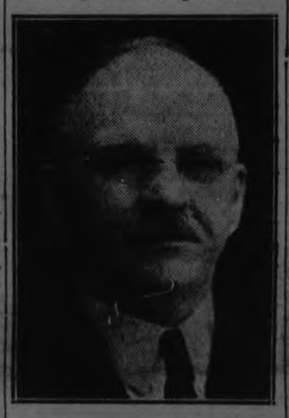
ENFORCE O. T. A. TO THE UTMOST OF HIS POWERS

Premier Ferguson Issues "No Quarter" Statement Following Conference.

LIQUOR MUST GO.

Returns Sufficiently Determine Drift of Public Sentment, He Claims.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Premier G. Howard Ferguson, in a statement issued this afternoon, declared in effect that the Ontario Temperance Act would be rigidly enforced in view of the returns from the plebiscite election yesterday to determine public sentiment on prohibition legislation.



Hon. G. H. Ferguson.

The Premier issued his statement after a protracted meeting of the Ontario Cabinet, which lasted from 11.45 a.m. until 2 p.m. He declared that, as he had intimated in his preplebiscite speeches, he would enforce the O.T.A. to the fullest extent. He added that there would be more difficulty in enforcing the Act in view of the increase in "wet" sentiment.

CITY OF TORONTO APPEAL DISMISSED

Toronto Railways Counter Appeal Was Allowed.

LONDON, Oct 24.—(Canadian Press).—The city of Toronto's appeal to the Privy Council against the award of arbitrators an amount the city should pay Toronto Railway company in connection with the city taking over the railway, was dismissed with costs by judicial committee of the Privy Council to-day.

Toronto railway's counter appeal was allowed with regard to certain claims made by the company on the city, but in other respects company's appeal was dismissed. Award of arbitration board when city took over street railway franchise was that corporation pay eleven millions or ten less than company wanted. City's appeal was against award in general, while counter claim was in consequence of reduction of arbitration award by half million being cost of certain properties not taken over by the city.

Call For Local Option Say Moderation League

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—(Special).—At Moderation League Headquarters, it was said that an official statement on the result would probably issue from the League as soon as the final figures on the vote were obtained. It was also stated that the Moderation League would call for local option in centres in which the vote showed the people were overwhelmingly for government control. It is however, significant that of the 75 provincial constituencies in Ontario definitely heard from, 50 voted "dry" and only 25 "wet", viewed from this standpoint, the "dry" victory would seem more pronounced than the total majority in dicates. The result by constituencies may have an important bearing on the membership line-up in the legislature.

ROWDYISM HAS GROWN WORSE

Hooligans Prevent Freedom Of Speech By Candidates Of Old Parties.

CANCEL MEETINGSS.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press Cable).—Both the conservative and liberal headquarters issued statements last night declaring that hooliganism at the election meetings is growing palpably worse as the day of polling draws near.

The labor organization from the beginning of the campaign has disavowed any association with the disturbances at meetings; in fact, the party explicity condemns the tactics of the rowdy element.

One of the most glaring instances of hooliganism so far in the campaign was at a meeting called by Sam Howard, the Conservative candidate in Wallsedn, who is opposing Sir Patrick Hastings, attorney-general. Before Howard was due to arrive at his meeting a mob took possession of the hall he had hired and at once began to make things hum. The mob's attitude was so threatening that Howard's friends sent him word not to attend the meeting. He took their advice and remained away.

Woman Trampled On.

Notwithstanding Howard's nonappearance at his meeting the mob showed its ugly mood and in a sort of general scrimmage a woman was trampled upon and a youth was kicked in the jaw. Several others in the hall received injuries.

E. J. Maggs, liberal candidate in East Bristol, who has been one of the worst sufferers by rowdyism at meetings, announces that he will not attempt to hold further meetings this election.

At Colonel Moore's conservative meeting in Coatbridge, Lanarkshire, there was such a disturbance that the police were called in. The chairman of the meeting however refused to countenance any arrests being made and there were none.

Complaints are general that in all parts of the country the disturbers come from other constituencies and consist very largely of an alien element.

Labor Is Blamed.

"What is happening is a sure indication that the labor party is fighting a losing battle" declares official conservatism on the subject of rowdyism at meetings which it connects with the labor party notwithstanding the latter's disavowal. "The situation is now such that the conservatives will have to adopt the slogan "free speech and clean politics," the party asserts.

Liberal headquarters follows the conservative organization in blaming the labor party for the disturbances, not being disposed either to accept labor's disclaimer. The liberals state that the labor party does not seem to take any administrative action through its own agents to carry out in the constituencies that desire for freedom of speech which is expressed at the labor party's headquarters.

Organized Mobs.

Many conservative and liberal

FOUR BANDITS HANGED TO-DAY AT MONTREAL

Last Efforts To Save Hochelaga Bank Robbers Prove Futile.

FEW MINUTES APART.

Black Flag Was Run Up While Stars Were Still Visible.

MONTREAL, Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—They ran up the black flag on Bordeaux jail at five o'clock this morning, under a three hundred watt nitrogen lamp while the stars and moon still lit the sky, Louis Morel, Frank Gambino, Tony Frank and Guiseppe Serafini had paid their debt to society. They had atoned for the death of Henri Cleroux, who was shot to death when gunmen held up the Bank of Hochelaga collection car and made off with $141,000.

Frank Gambino wilted on the scaffold just before the noose was tightened about his neck. He was supported by his confessor until the trap sprung. The other three men saw the threatening dawn through clear eyes. Louis Morel went to his doom as he went to the tape in many an athletic contest that brought renown to Montreal. Head up, chest out, but this time with his lips to the crucifix and the prayer on his tongue—"Jesus have pity," and just an hour before he had written a letter imploring the Holy Virgin to lessen the wrath of God and to protect Neri—the man who sent him to the scaffold, his accomplice in crime and Crown informer — from eternal maladiction, Frank Gambino walked out of the opposite cell to Morel at the same moment, having made his peace with his Maker and Gambino came to the western fire escape, which concealed the death trap, determined to take his punishment like a man.

Ellis, the hangman, stepped up to him while the padre chanted the act of contrition. Gambino threw his chest out as he stood above the eighty people who gazed up from below, but when Ellis lifted the black hood, as it shut out the world, as he knew it, and prepared to enter the great unknown, Frank Gambino's legs failed him, Father Mullin gave him his arm and while Father Pare repeated at Morel's request, "Jesus have pity", the rope was fastened around Gambino's neck, while Father Mullin steadied Gambino, Morel stood to attention every muscle rigid, the whole figure not one of challenge but one which seemed to say "I'll never squeal" and the trap sprung and there wasn't a man among the eighty below who didn't swallow heavily and who wasn't sorry that Louis Morel had gone out that way, a white had gone wrong. That was at 5.53 o'clock this morning, the Black Flag was run up. From the western wing those who watched the deadly process ran to the opposite side of the building. The first were just in time to see Guiseppe Serafini and Tony Frank walk out from their cells onto the fire escape which was to be their death trap, both came manfully each gazing out into the unborn day, while the brilliant light above their heads made plain the work of the executioner. Ellis, fresh from the other scaffold, took up both black hats and clamped them upon the head of Tony Frank. Tony's vital force of the underworld through many years planted himself squarely upon his end of the trap, he had talked with his priest, the last mass has been said and whatever Tony Frank was in life he was confident that he had made his peace with God. Ellis took off the surplus hat and adjusted the rope. Then he passed quickly to little Guiseppe Serafini. Serafini never flinched, the hat and the rope went on and within four minutes of the time the trap was sprung upon Louis Morel and Frank Gambino, Tony Frank and Serafini had been launched into the great unknown. After fifteen minutes, Morel and Gambino were pronounced dead and were cut down, while their bodies were being taken to the prison morgue, Frank and Serafini dangled in the morning breeze. It was almost half an hour after the latter two had paid the extreme penalty, that Ellis came out above them, whetted his knife and cut them down. It was still nearly half an hour before dawn, and out through the fading night the Bells of Bordeaux church rang across the northern sky, carrying with them the message of tragedy

'THEY WILL NOT PASS" CHORTLES BEN SPENCE

Prohibitionist Leader Appraises Result as a Substantial Victory.

TORONTO, October 24 (Canadian Press).—Rev. Benjamin Spence, head of the Prohibition Union of Ontario, made the following statement last night:

"Returns are sufficiently complete to enable us to confidently count that the Ontario Temperance Act has been sustained. If this should be the case after such a campaign of misrepresentation as has been carried on by the liquor interests, masquerading in the name of the Moderation League, it may be counted a substantial victory.

"Ontario Prohibitionists declared, 'They shall not pass.' They have not passed, and they will not pass. The tide of battle in Canada has turned. It is now on to Ottawa, and the Prohibition forces of the entire Dominion, encouraged by the victory in Ontario, must move on at once unitedly and energetically."

MISSING JULIA WORKED AS BOY

Even Mother Failed To Recognize Girl In Trousers and Sweater.

TELLS HER STORY.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—After having masqueraded as a boy since her disappearance from her home at 83 Division Avenue, Brooklyn, October 12, caddied innumerable rounds on the public golf links at Forest Park and slept in a Y.M.C.A. and a men's lodging house, Julia Hannigan, 15-year-old Brooklyn High School girl, was found at Broadway and Rodney Street by Detective George L. O'Connor of the Missing Persons' Bureau only a few blocks from her home.

Julia, her last 15 cents spent for coffee and rolls and a newspaper, was leaning against a pole reading the story of her adventure when Detective O'Connor accosted her. She was dressed in brown trousers, heavy brogans, a brown sweater and a felt hat, and, according to O'Connor, easily could have avoided detection.

In fact, her disguise was so good that when the detective took the girl to her home, her mother failed to recognize her.

Detective O'Connor took the girl to Manhattan Police Headquarters, where she told her story to Captain Ayres of the Missing Person Bureau.

"I always wanted to be a boy," she said. "I wanted the freedom that boys have."

"How do you feel about it now?" asked Captain Ayres.

"I'm glad you found me," she replied. "I'm glad to be a girl again. Being a boy isn't what it's cracked up to be."

Julia told the Captain she had read the stories of the disappearance of Franklin Roshek, who left his home on the upper west side of Manhattan a few weeks ago, and was stimulated to dreams about his exploits. She saved the money her mother gave her for the "movies" and didn't spend as much on candy as before. She bought the shoes, a boy's hat, trousers and underwear with this money. The sweater, shirt, collar and tie were obtained from her brother's wardrobe.

Fled From Home.

On the morning of October 12 Julia made ready for her venture. She put her clothes in the cellar of her home. That night she came back and, doffing her skirts, put on the boy's clothes and plastered her hair back. Her own clothing she hid in a bin.

That night she went to the Y. M. C. A. at South Ninth Street and Marcy Avenue. There was no difficulty in obtaining a room. The next morning she went to Forest Park. She needed to replenish her funds, and caddying looked easy. So she carried clubs for golfers for nearly eight days.

The other youngsters at the links suspected nothing, nor did the golfers. The second night after her

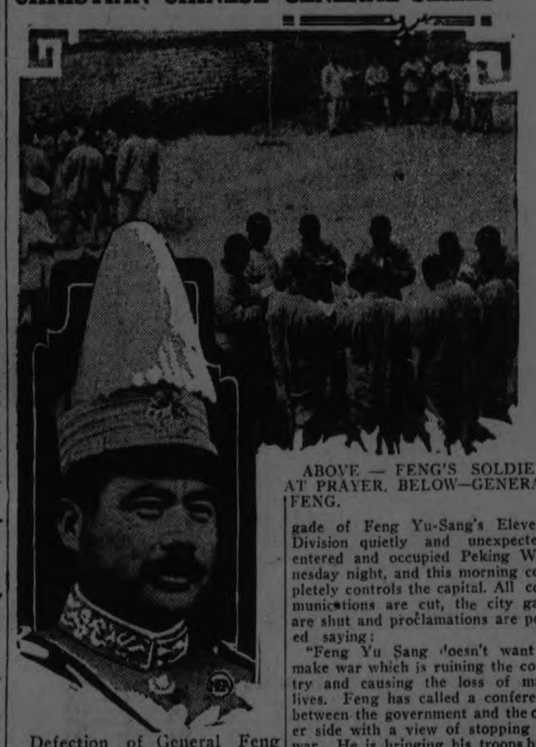
CHRISTIAN CHINESE GENERAL SEIZES



ABOVE — FENG'S SOLDIERS AT PRAYER. BELOW—GENERAL FENG.

Defection of General Feng Yu-Hsiang, trusted Lieutenant of Wu Pei Fu, changed the entire Chinese situation yesterday.

Authentic reports showed that General Feng, with part of the army under his command, had taken charge of Pekin, cut all telephone and telegraph wires and stopped the train service.

Chinese reports asserted that he had demanded the abdication of President Tsao Kun, who recently made Wu Pei Fu commander-in-chief of all of China's national rmies, and that he had insisted that the present warfare against Chang Tso-Lin, the military dictator of Manchuria, should cease.

Reports failed to show whether Feng was acting in league with Manchuria or independently.

Wu Pei-Fu last was reported directing the fighting from a point near Shanhaikwen, where a battle expected to prove decisive ,was being fought.

Feng Yu Hsiang is knwon as the "Christian General." His recent departure from Peking, when his army went forth to meet the Manchurians, was signalized with the wholesale baptism of all of his men and asking of a blessing on the new weapons which had just been distributed to them.

FENG WANTS PEACE.

PEKING, October 24. — A brigade of Feng Yu-Sang's Eleventh Division quietly and unexpectedly entered and occupied Peking Wednesday night, and this morning completely controls the capital. All communications are cut, the city gates are shut and proclamations are posted saying:

"Feng Yu Sang doesn't want to make war which is ruining the country and causing the loss of many lives. Feng has called a conference between the government and the other side with a view of stopping the war. He is bringing his troops back to Peking for garrison duty and asks the people that order be preserved. Foreigners will be protected.

"Feng Yu Sang, October 23."

The city is quiet and peaceful.

WAS CONVERTED.

General Feng was converted to Christianity several years ago. His wife is a Christian too.

And no missionary could be more zealous in his work than Feng is.

Among the lessons he has learned best are those of Charity and brotherly love. He carries them out continually.

His soldiers are not the brigands other Chinese soldiers are. They are well disciplined and peaceful men

When heaps of sand bags lay about the south gate of Peking, ready to be stacked behind the heavy portals, if worse came to worse, thousands of Feng's troops were toiling in the mud of Nan Yuan, 12 miles away, to erect temporary dikes of willow branches and sand bags against the rioting waters of the Yung Ting River.

Another time the general was asked to have his men repair part of an important highway. Two thousand men were put to work and the job was completed by nightfall.

The general refused to accept a cent in payment, on the ground it was a matter of public convenience.

"I do not understand them," exclaimed an old resident of Nan Puan, in speaking of the "Christian" troops.

"They ask nothing. They take nothing. They pay full prices for what they buy."

RURAL RETURNS TRICKLED INTO ROLLING FLOOD

Township Indicated the Provincial Result To Those Who Observed Them Closely.

LOCAL EXPERIENCE.

Country Majorities Comparatively Small Individually, But Gradually Merged Into Decisive Total.

While Toronto election news agencies were concentrating their attention last night upon the early wet majority the cities of the province were piling up, and by the their bulletins were creating the impression that the O.T.A. had been overwhelmed, district centres were slowly collecting the rural vote that proved the decisive factor in the day's results.

Peterboro was the focal and assembling point of the returns from virtually all the counties in the Trent section, and the Examiner was its separate news headquarters. A Canadian Press wire into this office received the first returns which had been rapidly gathered in the cities totalled in Toronto and then broadcasted by telegraph. At that stage the forces of Government control appeared to have swept the country, but the rural sub-divisions were casting up significant majorities for the O.T.A. which in the later hours of the evening steadily reduced the "wet" margin until at eleven o'clock the tide of victory was seen to be swiftly changing and by midnight was announced as a commanding reversal.

Meanwhile, in the Examiner's experience, the revelation of the strength behind the O.T.A. was behind the O.T.A. was being manifested through a long distance service to the Bell Telephone Company's office where representatives of the Examiner were provided with a special loop by the manager, Mr. J. M. McHardy. Messages from the towns and villages and township centres began to arrive shortly before seven o'clock, and during the next two hours the rural sub-divisions pointed the way the day's voting would finally move.

The Trent county districts disclosed the farmers' attitude toward the O.T.A. It was a correct barometer of the conviction and reaction of Old Man Ontario, who evidently had laid aside his fall plowing and threshing, and he and his wife, to show the Philistines of the city, where the force of provincial sentiment was actually located.

And while the street crowds declared their surprise at the bulletined totals of a seemingly irresistible wet wave, the day's climax was preparing for them in the mounting figures from the country. And watching the returns from Otonabee, Cavan, Belmont, Dummer, in fact nearly all the townships in Peterboro, Victoria Durham, Northumberland and Hastings counties, and assuming them to be an index of rural Ontario, doubts of the ultimate decision grew in spite of the huge vote the cities had thrown on the table.

'Twas a Dry Wind

Majorities ranging over the hundreds up to ten were telephoned from all parts of the district from the northern boundary of Peterboro county to Lake Ontario, and the impression left by their tabulation may be reflected from a glance at the following as indicating the direction the wind was blowing from the tall timbers and back forties:—

Emily Township

WASTERS.

Paris newspapers are campaigning because in France the dogs eat a ninth as much bread as the people. Shrewd editors over there believe it is ridiculous for a war impoverished country not to kill off its dogs. To an economist, this is sound logic. A dog lover, however, would claim that a food shortage is worth while in exchange for canine affection. Dogs, like all pets, are tolerated mainly because they gratify human vanity. All of us hanker to have a slafe, an animal being second-best bet.

MORE.

Nearly four times as much paper is used by Americans as in 1880. Materials for paper-making are becoming scarcer, especially pulpwood from forests. The situation will never be met by reforestation. Newspapers eventually will become smaller.

CARD OF THANKS

As chairman of the O.T.A. Plebiscite Committee, I wish to express our thanks to all the earnest workers in the wards, the districts, the central rooms in organizing to get names on the lists and in preparing for polling day. The very generous support, yesterday, at the polling booths, with cars and with personal help was the cause of turning a possible defeat into a pronounced success.

To the organizer, Mr. A. B. Cunningham, and his able assistants, both women and men, we are indeed indebted, as they worked without regard for personal comfort or time and carried the campaign through free from all personal animosities.

To the enthusiasm of the women voters can be attributed the largest measure of the success, for they knew and felt the menace to the home, and the children that was at stake, and acted accordingly. To the thoughtful women of the George street Methodist church, who supplied lunches to the workers at the polls, we are indeed grateful, as it made possible the continuous work so necessary.

It is a real victory for right, and Ontario has expressed in no uncertain way the spirit of her soul which stands for sobriety, efficiency and respect for law. The vote of the people shows disgust at the methods of law enforcement, for many of the temperance people voted as "moderationists," believing that Government control would eliminate the "bootlegger" and these votes if added to the O.T.A. vote gives an overwhelming majority in favor of more drastic legislation in this respect.

We trust that Premier Ferguson implements at once the wishes of the people and sees to it that legislation is passed to make it easier to regulate and enforce the O.T.A. in compliance with the now known wishes of his constituents. We regret the enormous majorities against in the larger cities, but this is explained by noting the sections from whence this opposition came—being those districts known as "bootlgger's" wards, and "new comers" residence—people alien to or unaware of the ideals of this land of ours.

Again we thank all who in any way helped to gain this decisive expression of opinion favorable to the better ideals in life.

THOS. BARRIE,
Chairman of O.T.A.
Plebiscite Committee.

PRINCE AT DANCE.

HAMILTON, Mass., Oct. 26 (Canadian Press).—The Prince of Wales recovered from his recent slight illness, rode to hounds of Myopia Hunt Club yesterday in a pell-mell drag hunt that took 60 riders over eight miles of broken country, finished first with steady seat and then, after tea and change of clothes, was a guest at a diuner and dance that marked the last social event of his stay on this continent. The Prince will leave New England today for New York, from which port he will embark for England, sailing on the Olympic just after midnight.

THE GUMPS—SALVING THE PRESS

WOMEN'S VOTE IS BIG FACTOR IN HOLDING PETERBORO FORT "FOR HONOR OF OLD ONTARIO"

Slogan of Drys Carried Them Through to Victory in the City.

BIG VOTE POLLED

Many Factors Combined to Bring Out Almost Record Vote—Drys Rejoice.

Peterborough city yesterday justified the hopes of the O.T.A. supporters who had labored for weeks on the strength of their slogan: "For the Honor of Old Ontario." The city went dry by a majority of 577, the vote being, for the O.T.A. 4713, and for Government Control 4136.

The dry vote topped the wet in 22 of the 38 polls in the city and tied in number 17, at the C.P.C. Co. store at Sherbrooke street.

Women Chased Them.

An amusing story is told of one booth where two women represented the O.T.A. and a lone man stood guard for the Moderation League. During the lulls between voters the women were so strong in their denunciation of the wets that the man ignominiously fled, leaving the field to the drys.

Many persons were befuddled by the absence of the red flags that marked the municipal election this year. In many cases even the official printed notice was placed in an obscure location where it could not be easily seen, and in the usual reshuffling of polling places hundreds of citizens went astray, sometimes visiting three booths before finding the right one. Usually the only indication of a polling place was the congregation of women and men outside with papers in their hands, but in some cases even this failed, the scrutineers remaining seated inside the booth

Headquarters Busy.

Both headquarters were busy throughout the day, answering queries as to place for polling and finding names on voters' lists. Long distance calls were common as voters in the outside constituency demanded infromation. At the city clerk's office, too, there was a busy day, citizens not realizing that the city clerk has not part in the Provincial plebiscite. Out of courtesy, all enquiries addressed to Mr. Armstrong and his willing assistants regarding the lists were answered, and enquirers after other information were directed to the proper source.

Automobiles formed steady streams throughout the city, as voters were taken to the booths. Arrangements had been made by proponents of the O.T.A. to care for the children of women voters during their absence, and many a woman who has hitherto on election day been kept at home attending a family were today enabled to vote in comfort.

From noon on it was obvious that the women's vote would be the deciding factor, and the results indicate that the women voted overwhelmingly "dry." Almost every poll reported that more women than men had voted up to early afternoon, and although many men rushed to vote in the last hour, it was the women who bore the plebiscite to its triumphantly dry conclusion in Peterborough.

The largest vote in memory was polled at some points, several factors combining to draw out the voters. In many instances, it was found women were more willing to go through what is to many an ordeal when they found that the booths were guarded by women scrutineers, most of them from the O. T. A. party. The whole-hearted organization work of the O. T. A. advocates also attracted many women voters, and the door-to-door canvas without doubt won many to the side of the "drys."

RETURNS CAME FAST.

The first poll heard from was No. 5, at Mrs. Benson's house, 57 George Street, which gave a vote of 163 for Government Control and 92 for the O.T.A., a wet majority of 71. The second to be received was Number 25, at Blade's office on Park Street, which went dry with 102 for the O.T.A. and 85 for Government Control, a dry majority of 17.

After a few minutes Poll 14 clicked in with the second dry majority, in this case 33, with a vote of 148 for O.T.A. and 115 for Government Control. Poll 22, at Routley's store, 392 Brock Street, had the biggest O.T.A. majority up to this time, with a vote of 126 against 91, a majority of 35.

These four polls gave the drys a majority of 14 votes.

Braund's store, at Smith and George, reported 162 for the O.T.A. and 99 against, and the second wet vote followed quickly from Poll No. 1, at Allen's Grocery, 113 Gladstone Avenue, with 77 for the O.T.A. and 123 for Government Control. The majority at this time for the O.T.A. was 31.

With 26 polls heard from in the city, the majority for the O. T. A. had piled up to 232, the figures being: O.T.A. 2,998, Government Control 2,766.

MISSING JULIA

departure, Julia took a room in a men's lodging house at 302 Bedford Avenue, only a short distance from her home. She got a small room, for which she paid $1.50 a week. All the other lodgers were men. That night she had her hair cut short.

At night, Julia sat around the table with the fellow roomets, longshoremen, teamsters and checkers on the docks, and read the newspaper stories about herself and talked with the men. Once she tried to smoke a cigarette.

"But it made me sick," she said, "so I stopped."

After a week the caddying proved too unremunerative for a livelihood. She was conscience-stricken over her parents' worry because of her. When she read that they feared she had been murdered she called her home on the telephone. That was Monday night. But after informing her mother that she was safe, she hung up the receiver.

Wednesday, however, when she found herself with only 25 cents, she decided that she had had enough of being a boy. She called Detective O'Connor at the Missing Persons Bureau.

"I'm tired and hungry," she told him and asked: "If I come back will you arrest me?"

O'Connor arranged to meet her at the Broadway Phonograph Shop, 252 South Fourth Street. When he went there the proprietor told him no girl had been in the store, but a boy had left a note. This directed O'Connor to Broadway and Rodney Street. There he found Julia.

Thus did Julia, still in her boy's clothes, tell her story to Captain Ayres. It had started as a laughing story, not defiant laughter, to be sure, but laughter which plainly indicated that she was rather pleased with her little escapade. But it ended not quite laughingly.

"Everything Is Forgiven."

For when Julia got to the point in her story where she told the Captain of the last breakfast of rolls and coffee, she pulled a handkerchief—a girl's handkerchief at that—out of her pocket, put it to her eyes and cried a little—not at all like a young man would do. And then she looked up at the Captain, all trace of make-believe gone from her face, and pleaded:

"I'm so tired. I don't want to be a boy any more, please."

So "Walter Emerson" was taken upstairs to the matron's room, where another wish was granted, and the young man in brown trousers and a white sweater and a brown fedora hat became a very diminutive and somewhat tearful little girl, dressed in a small black turban hat, a short Persian lamb coat, a tan accordeon-plaited skirt, flesh colored stockings and low patent leather shoes.

The clothes, her own, had been brought over by her elder sister, Cecelia, to whom the police had telephoned when Julia was found.

And still tearful and pressing a tiny blue lace-bordered handkerchief to her eyes, a very shamefaced young lady of fifteen was taken to the Children's Society in Brooklyn for arraignment on a charge of juvenile delinquency.

But it is doubtful if any one will press charges against her, for it is said at Julia's home that "everything is forgiven."

ROWDYISM HAS

candidates profess to have evidence that the communists are organized and coached by experts with more intelligence than they themselves possess for the purpose of preventing free speech from any candidates other than those of the labor stripe.

John Lazarus, the wealthy young conservative who is running in North Lambeth against Frank Briant, Liberal, says he is positive that the breaking up of his meeting last night, when one of his supporters was slashed in the face with a razor, was the work of about 300 young men, the majority of whom were not over 18 years of age. The attack on his supporters, he says, was conducted in the centre of the hall and was a concentrated affair.

Leaders in Disorder.

A remarkable occurrence attended the breaking up of a conservative meeting at Deptford. About 30 men followed the conservative to the hall. They declared that they had been sent by the police to keep order. Soon as the hall was gained, however, a disturbance was started and these so-called preservers of the peace were the most prominent in the row that took place.

BOBBED HAIR WAR EXTENDS.

Paris Autumn Season Carries On Attack Began at Deauville.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—The attack on bobbed hair opened at Deauville is being fully developed at the start of the Paris Autumn season.

The main fault of bobbed hair, its opponents declare, is the difficulty of presenting an attractive appearance during the intermediary period while the hair is growing again. To overcome this obstacle the hairdressers are making a special show of devices for camouflaging scanty locks.

LIE CAUSED FILIPINO RIOT

News "Story" of Chinese Killing of 80 Filipinos is Blamed

MANILA, Oct. 23.—Anti-Chinese riots, started by aggresive Filipinos at Cabanatuan, have been completely suppressed by constabulary soldiers, who are patrolling the streets. Chinese stores have been reopened, according to official advices. The rioting followed the killing of a Chinese merchant here by a Filipino.

The Governor General has notified all Provincial Governors to take action against rioters. He has received advices that the Filipinos were influenced by a canard printed in a Manila newspaper yesterday, to the effect that eighty Filipinos had been killed by Chinese at Shanghai in revenge for the anti-Chinese riots in Manila.

A charge of sedition has been filed against the editor of the newspaper.

AGAIN THE REVOLVER.

The Examiner's case against the revolver is strengthened by the remarks of Mr. Justice Kelly in sentencing a St. Catharines boy for shooting a man who had broken up his home.

Judge Kelly declared that cases of this kind were becoming altogether too common in Canada.

Magistrate Brunton of Toronto in his evidence in the same case stated that thousands of boys were carrying revolvers.

It is obvious that this condition of affairs is a menace to public safety.

The shadow of tragedy is always hovering round a concealed weapon.

A minor dispute develops into a fatality because one of the parties has a revolver at his hand and in the heat of his passion draws and fires.

The result is a murder, whereas with no revolver at hand the trouble would blow over without serious results.

The present regulations in regard to firearms is of no value as a protection.

Any crook can get a revolver; any man with murder in his heart can get a revolver; any boy untrained in the handling of firearms can get a revolver.

So long as firearms can be procured with the same facility as groceries the elements of tragedy are always at hand.

A revision of the regulations is long past due.

A CLEAN FIGHT.

The campaign is over, the jury of the people has given its verdict and the citizens who are worthy of that name will accept the decision without protest and endeavour to respect the law.

So far as Peterborough was concerned, the fight has been fought in a manner creditable to the intelligence of the community.

For this the executives of the Plebiscite Committee and of the Moderation League deserve credit for the clean campaign they conducted.

There has been little bitterness and no personalities in the battle put up by these organizations, and while in some centres considerable rancour and ill-feeling developed during the course of the campaign, Peterborough has been singularly free of such unpleasant features—a condition for which the common sense of the individual citizens and the wisdom and courtesy of the leaders on both sides must be thanked.

Apparently this city accepted the issue at its true value as an attempt to decide upon a policy of dealing with the liquor question to the best advantage, having in view the common good, and the citizens generally went about arriving at a conclusion like sensible people.

It is possible for a household to decide a question of domestic policy without breaking the furniture and throwing somebody out of doors—and the plebiscite campaign has shown that it is also possible for a community to decide a public issue in the same spirit.

That attitude, to the Examiner at least, has been one of this outstanding features of the campaign.

YESTERDAY'S VERDICT.

Although the majority of the larger centres voted heavily in favour of Government control, to such an extent that the early returns seemed to presage the complete defeat of the Ontario Temperance Act, the villages and townships saved the day for the dry cause by piling up a vote that gradually cut down the Moderation League total.

The result will in a sense be a disappointment to both sides, to the advocates of Government control because their policy was rejected and to the prohibition workers because a dry majority of over 400,000 five years ago was very materially reduced.

As this article is written, early Friday morning to be exact, the Ontario Temperance Act is known to have been sustained by a majority of 25,000 out of a total vote so far reported of 925,318.

Although this margin will undoubtedly be increased when fuller returns from rural polling subdivisions are received, the fact remains that yesterday's vote indicates that half a million people in this Province are not satisfied with the Ontario Temperance Act.

In their rejoicing over their victory the O. T. A. supporters should not lose sight of the significance of that vote.

Premier Ferguson gave his pledge that in the event of the Ontario Temperance Act being sustained he would correct any weaknesses if any that developed and would give the Act vigorous and effective enforcement.

The majority of the electors who voted yesterday have given the Premier a mandate to carry out his promise; yet the situation is complicated by the very large Government control vote polled.

That the present Act is far from perfect there is not much doubt.

Thousands of people must have supported it yesterday not because they felt that it was perfect but because they felt that it was better than increasing the facilities for obtaining drink, and because they relied on the pledge of Premier Ferguson to remedy the weaknesses and to vigorously enforce the law.

The Premier has said that his own opinion was that the bootlegger should be jailed.

The present system of fines is not a deterrent, merely representing part of the overhead of the business, and taken care of in the turnover without even momentarily checking the illegal sale.

It may stop a few amateur bootleggers, but the big rings go on with their profitable trade, the higher-ups paying the fines of the agents who happen to get into trouble.

Yesterday's verdict put it up to Mr. Ferguson to smash the operation of the big men of the illicit trade, and once it becomes known that the man who is caught will go to jail it will become progressively more difficult for the master bootleggers to secure agents.

In this respect, and at every other point where the Ontario Temperance Act is weak, the majority of the people have given the Government a mandate to act.

TO BOOM ONTARIO.

The Peterborough Chamber of Commerce has sent forward a resolution to be dealt with at the annual meeting of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, urging that steps be taken by the executive to organize an Ontario tourists' association.

The plan is one that should receive general approval inasmuch as the objects of such an association to advertise Ontario as a paradise for tourists will undoubtedly commend itself to the intelligence of the people of this Province.

The Trent Waterway Development Association through what it has accomplished in attracting tourists to this district furnishes irrefutable proof that much can be done by publicity if wisely utilized.

The Trent organization has succeeded in selling the waterway to thousands of people to whom even the name was unknown a year or two ago, and the increase in the volume of tourist traffic can to a great extent be credited to the efforts of the association.

What it has done for the Trent district, a Provincial-wide organization can do for Ontario as a whole.

This Province has unique attractions to offer the tourist, but these are not as widely known as they should be, and a Provincial tourist association would be in a position to put Ontario before the world in its true light.

The idea is sound and practicable, and the Associated Boards could do much worse than to endorse the Peterborough plan and endeavour to implement it by taking the initial steps toward the launching of the project.

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS.

Apart from the villification and abuse that is so fiercely hurled from the platforms in various ridings, the present election campaign in Britain seems peculiarly dull and lifeless. The electors positively refuse to be stirred by either the Campbell case or the Russian treaty, and, save that mention of these subjects give irresponsible groups of young Communists an opportunity for booing and for organized disturbance the introduction of these issues, which ten days ago were to be the battle cries of the campaign, does not stir a tremor through the audiences.

It is beginning to be realized more and more that it is not the Russian treaty nor the Campbell case, nor even the Dawes plan that is being threshed out, but a far greater issue—the efficiency or the reverse of the British parliamentary system. To the average taxpayer who is not deeply concerned with politics and thinks of his party only at election times, it seems absurd and intolerable that the politicians are not able to carry on for more than twelve months at a time without an appeal to the electorate. The voters are tired of being called upon every few months to settle the unappeased feuds of the politicians and the men who direct the firing.

Three general elections within three years is a record that the British voter is not accustomed to and he is growing fidgety with the prospect, especially as there is no assurance that there will not be another general election within the next six or at most twelve months. The chief concern of the electors, therefore, in spite of the posters and placards, is not the Campbell case nor the treaty with Soviet Russia, not even the hazy fight of Capitalism against Socialism, but how the handicap of these too frequent appeals to the country can be avoided. Thousands of voters on polling day will cast their votes for the party that they believe has the best prospect of staying longest in power, without question of label and without regard to advertised issues.

Some of the blame for this appeal may be laid at the door of Mr. Baldwin, who has yet to explain why with a very comfortable majority which might have kept him in power for at least another three years he deliberately chose to appeal to the electorate. This still remains the enigma of modern British politics. Those three years of tranquillity seemed to be just what the country most needed in order that the impending clash between Liberals and Labor might be fought out upon grounds that were comprehensible to the voters. Labor had a chance and seems to have done pretty much the same as Mr. Baldwin did, for it is perfectly obvious that MacDonald had an opportunity of staving off the election right up until the time when the division bell rang had he felt disposed to make a compromise with his Liberal allies.

The decision of Ramsay MacDonald to force an election offers the second puzzle for the politicians. FoFr the first six months of his holding office the Premier was successful in exploiting the common ground on which Liberals and Labor met. He was shrewd enough to understand that this was the only thing he could do under the circumstances. Yet some of his party champed at the snaffle of restraint and regarded the MacDonald Government as merely a stepping-stone for the halcyon days when they were to come into their own.

It was this small but extreme group that won the day, for they caught Mr. MacDonald in hesitating mood on his return from Geneva and promptly proceeded to push him over the precipice. Had the Attorney-General been a little more frank in his explanations, had the Premier been a little more candid, the Liberals even at the last minute would probably have tabled a resolution that would have paved the way to concessions and continuance of Labor in office. —Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Both sides must at least admit that they had a fine day for it.

One of the best things about the plebiscite being over is that the public will be able to hear some other kind of propaganda.

The weather did its part in giving slacker voters no excuse for not exercising their franchise.

When it comes to picturesque language some of the British campaigners can beat Andy Gump at his own game.

The Ontario Temperance Act remains—although it is evident a lot of people do not like it.

Both sides tasted the joy of victory and the pangs of defeat last evening.

The farmers may not be able to govern Ontario, but apparently they can dictate its liquor policy.

The British election campaign is being fought with a vigor that proves there is plenty of kick left in the Old Country.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Oct. 23.—Sales for the first three days of the weeks at the Union Stock Yards totalled 8,123 cattle, while receipts for the same period were only 7,625. A number of re-weighs accounted for the difference, but in any event practically all the cattle offered were sold this week. For this morning the receipts were 25 cars, 408 cattle, 65 calves, 321 hogs and 324 sheep and lambs. Of today's receipts all except about 25 were western cattle and only 100 of these were for sale here, the rest being billed through.

This morning's transaction showed no change from Wednesday's steadiness. Small bunch of medium butchers sold at $4.85 to $5.10 and common butchers at $3.50 to $4 a cwt. A few bolgona bulls brought $2.25 to $3 a cwt. Butchers' cows are still wanted. The few in this morning sold from $4 to $4.50 for the good ones; $3.50 to $3.75 for mediums and $3 for common cows. The stocker specialists had several loads on hand, but these are expected to go out before the week-end. There were no good feeders on sale.

Calves closed the week quite firm with most on offer not above good which sold at 10 cents a pound. Heavy calves were the only slow sellers and the best of these sold at 6 cents.

Lambs are firm at 12 cents for good ewes and bucks 10 cents. A small number of extra heavy lambs brought 10 cents a pound. Several loads of breeding ewes are being shipped out today. These are selling high, the best costing $11.40 and $11.50 a cwt.

Few hogs have sold below $9.75 a cwt. this week, but the bid of $9.50 is the best the packers are making, and they say this may be reduced to $9.25 a cwt. f.o.b. for the week end loading.

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, October 24 (Canadian Press). — The market remains very firm. A sale is reported of one car of Western seconds at 39 cents delivered Toronto. Fresh receipts are now practically nil, consequently the prices are advancing steadily to encourage producers to market what stock they have on hand.

Toronto firm, unchanged. Retailing specials 63 to 65, extras 60, firsts 45, seconds 40.

Montreal market strong. Retailing extras 48 to 55, firsts 40 to 48, seconds 38 to 40.

Ottawa market firm, storage eggs constitute the bulk of the trading retailing specials 60 to 70, fresh extras 55 to 60, firsts 45 to 50, seconds 35 to 40.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, October 24 (Canadian Press). — Little improvement was noted in the demand for grain here yesterday for export account, owing to the fact that prices bid by foreign buyers for No. 1 Northern wheat for December and January shipment were 3 cents per bushel below actual cost laid down here, and other cables stated that re-sellers were very weak. On spot demand was also dull, with No. 1 Northern offerings at 133-4 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg option, No. 3 barley at 12 1-4 cents per bushel over, and No. 4 barley at 8 1-4 cents per bushel over c.i.f. Montreal.

The trade in Ontario barley was slow and prices were quoted at $1.03 for No. 3 extra grade, No. 3 grade at $1.07, and No. 2 white oats at 63 to 64 cents, and No. 3 white at 60 cents per bushel, ex-track.

There were heavy demands from English importing houses for bran and shorts owing to the fact that the fodder crops in the United Kingdom were damaged to a great extent by heavy rains ,but as stocks here and in the West have been reduced considerably, millers in some cases turned the orders down owing to the steady demand for supplies from local country buyers. Prices did not show any change.

An easier feeling developed for rolled oats and millers reduced prices 15 cents per bag. Ther was no further change in the baled hay situation.

A stronger feelinng developed in storage eggs and prices were advanced 1 cent per dozen on all grades. Fresh eggs were unchanged.

The foreign demand for butter showed a further improvement, and as the prices bid were in line with sellers' views a moderate amount of business was transacted. The tone was steady owing to the increased demand from foreign buyers for cheese, and prices scored a further advance of 1-8 cent per pound.

Old crop beans were still quoted at $2.45 to $2.65 per bushel for three-pound pickers.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, October 24 (Canadian Press). — Lively selling that accompanied reports of rain in Argentina gave a decided setback to the price of wheat yesterday.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 1 3-8 to 2 5-8 cents net lower December $1.44 1-8 to $1.44 3-4 and May $1.49 to $1.49 1-8, with corn 1 1-4 to 2 1-4 cents down, oats 1-4 cent to 1 cent off, and provisions varying from 35 cents decline to 25 cents gain.

CARE OF HOUSE-HOLD PETS

PARROTS II.

As concerns their methods of feeding, parrots may be considered as of two groups. The lories, lorikeets or brush-tongued parrots have radically different food habits from those of the other group.

Lories are active and restless and can hardly be kept except in an aviary. Their food should be milk-sop—that is, bread, buns or cake scalded with boiled milk; figs or dates softened by hot water; fresh fruit such as strawberries, grapes, apples and bananas, boiled rice and small seeds softened by hot water.

All other parrots may be fed chiefly on dry seeds. Plenty of clean water should always be available. The staple food of all parrots other than lories should be clean, well-filled seeds such as oats, wheat, buckwheat, sunflower, canary, millet and hemp, the last named used sparingly. The larger seeds in this list are preferable for such birds as cockatoos ,macaws and amazons and the smaller ones for lovebirds and parrakeets.

All these birds may have an occasional treat of boiled potato, boiled rice, dry bread and crackers. Green food in season should be freely provided, and it may include such things as chickweed, dandelion, almost any flowers, tufts of grass and chopped carrots, turnips and the like. Occasionally dried red peppers may be given and it is well to keep cuttle-bone constantly available.

Plenty of grit is a necessity to parrots as to other seed-eating birds. Coarse, sharp sand is a good form. Keep this and a mixture of coarse salt, charcoal and broken oyster shells constantly before the birds.

Banish drafts and sudden changes of temperature if you would prevent colds and pneumonia. If your bird does contract one of these usually fatal diseases, treatment should include constant warmth. If the bird will eat readily, give it milksop or hard-boiled egg, with a dash of red pepper. A stimulant in the drinking water also is advisable. If the bird does not take soft food, pour down its throat tepid milk or chicken broth.

For indigestion and constipation stop the ordinary diet and give much green stuff, and stale bread soaked in water and squeezed dry. Administer carbonate of soda or of magnesia in drinking water and give plenty of fresh sharp grit.

GUINEA PIGS I.

Guinea pigs are raised chiefly as pets or fancy stock and for scientific uses. While they are seldom eaten in the United States, their near relationship to rabbits and the fact that they are wholly vegetarian in habit should reassure anyone who may entertain doubts about their fitness for the table. Probably their small size is the chief cause of their neglect as a food animal, yet we have other highly esteemed game animals that furnish less meat than a guinea pig.

Few animals are as easily raised as guinea pigs. They are much less subject to disease than rabbits and require about the same accommodations. The same hutches would answer, but they may be smaller for guinea pigs. Those used by the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry are about 20 inches wide at the front, three and one-half feet deep and 18 inches high. They accommodate a male, three or four breeding females and their progeny, until weaned.

Except for show purposes, the only kinds of guinea pigs that should be grown are the smooth-haired varieties. These are of several colors. Those with pink eyes are albinos, usually pure white. Occasionally a guinea pig is of a single color other than white, but it seems to be difficult to maintain a pure strain of "selfs" other than white. The majority of the domestic animals are spotted, the common colors being fawn, light gray, red brown, dark brown and cream, interspersed with white or black or both white and black.

Guinea pigs require about the same diet as rabbits. They do best when the temperature is not allowed to fall below 65 degrees Fahrenheit. They eat frequently during the day and need a constant supply of staple dry feed. Three articles should be constantly in each hutch or run—a pan of water supplied fresh at least once a day, a piece of rock salt and a pan for dry grain, which may contain oats, bran or chopped grain.

The animals should have also a continual supply of hay, of which they eat large quantities, and a daily feed of green stuff. They eat almost every kind of green food that is relished by rabbits. In winter it is best to have a good supply of cabbage on hand. These may be stored in the field, covered with leaves or straw, with a layer of soil an top, and may be brought in as wanted, so that they need not be fed in a wilted condition.

GUINEA PIGS II.

Guinea pigs breed at a very early age. They become mature when about a month old, but should not be allowed to breed so early.

The fecundity of guinea pigs has been greatly exaggerated. The erroneous idea that they breed every six weeks and commonly have litters of 12 each has become quite prevalent. As a matter of fact, many other rodents are far more prolific. The period of gestation varies from 63 to 70 days, and ordinarily five litters may be expected in a year, averaging three young each.

Young guinea pigs are well developed when born, have the eyes open and are fully furred. They are soon able to run about freely and within a day or two begin to take food other than the mother's milk. When five or six months old, the young females should be distributed to breeding pens. The males should be chosen from among animals older than the young females. Inbreeding is not considered harmful unless continued for eight or ten generations.

As already stated, guinea pigs are not subject to many diseases. Their susceptibility to ailments is closely related to the quality, quantity and kind of food eaten. Improper, irregular and deficient feeding are common causes of inflammation of the stomach, from which losses among the animals may be very great. Sudden changes of temperature, particularly downward to the freezing point, and insufficient and improper ventilation are common causes of pneumonia, which is extremely fatal among guinea pigs.

Bountiful and judicious feeding, cleanliness of surroundings, pure water, abundant room, reasonably constant temperature and proper ventilation, are almost certain preventives of disease. The coats of guinea pigs should not be allowed to become wet, and the hutches should be carefully guarded against dampness, which is a common cause of fatalities among animals

The chief enemy of the guinea pig is the common rat. The pest is popularly supposed to avoid premises where guinea pigs are kept. On the contrary, it is attracted by the grain feed, and will not only steal the food of babies but has been known to known to knaw through the hutch walls and devour the young.

FABLES ON HEALTH

"A lot of you birds figure that if you take 10 deep breaths with your daily dozen each morning you've given your lungs all they've got coming to 'em," a physical director once reminded Mr. Mann, of Anytown.

Taking a half dozen deep breaths during an exercise and then forgetting all about doing it for the rest of the day is a relatively ridiculous plan .

Not only should deep breathing exercises be taken some time during the day, but whenever the out-of-doors is reached by shut-ins it should be the signal for a series of long breaths.

And for the office bound here's a tip: go to the open window every once in a while and get a good lung full.

First, get the habit from a series of exercises; then keep at it during the day.

One physician has said that a hundred deep breaths a day would keep away tuberculosis.

Also it's good in nervous conditions.

But it's a mighty fine habit for everyone to get into.

PICTURESQUE SLEEVES

The picturesque sleeves are the most noticeable feature of this brown moire frock. They are of pleated chiffon a few shades lighter than the dress. The chiffon is also introduced in the under panel and the scarf that is a part of the outfit. Two very large buttons of brown composition serve as a trimming and also a fastening. This is a very charming outfit for afternoon

BURN OLD CLOTH

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, N.Y., Oct. 22.—(United Press).—Just now every woman is asking, "What shall it be—a cloth coat of a fur coat "

Last year the question didn't require much thought, as fur coats which were generally made in lines which no furrier can turn out in bulky fur. The cloth coat with figure molding lines has a smartness which the average fur coat lacks.

Paris has gone wild over these new cloth models which show the Directoire influence with their suggestion of the normal waistline, their long tight sleeves and choker collars. Returning buyers all state that the figure molding cloth is one of the most important styles of this year.

Nearly all of these new models have a suggestion of the normal waistline. They may terminate in narrow hemlines or in circular flaring hems bordered in fur. Sleeves have narrow cuffs of self material in most cases and the entire sleeve fits rather snugly to the arm. Cuffs are seldom trimmed in fur. Collars are varied. They may be of choker type, in which case they are of fur. They may be upstanding affairs with a narrow border of fur used as an outline, shawl types or the three-tiered capelet effects.

There are coats which are fitted in front, but which have the straight line in the back—coats which use the narrow string belt about the normal waistline to assure the 'figure' effect.

There are numerous materials used for the cloth coat including heavy wool poplins, suede-finished cloth, broadcloth, etc. Black is the most popular shade with browns, greens and dark hennas following.

Among the furs which trim this season's cloth coat are fitch, dyed in Kolnisky brown and baum marten baby lamb, black fox and blue fox. Weasel is being introduced by many furries and this a remarkably soft and becoming fur of white and tan shadings. Some furriers insist that weasel and ermine are one of the same animal and that the brownish stripe which extends down the back of the otnerwise white weasel is merely the Spring coat of the animal before it has taken on its winter whiteness. At any rate, weasel is a decidedly dressy fur when used on a black background of cloth. On many of the brown suede cloth wraps we find brown or bronze-dyed broadtail used as a trimming with wonderful results.

Fashion Notes.

Florentine leather handbags are among the smartest of Winter accessories. These lovely leathers are of softest blended shades, and can be carried with almost any garment. Flat envelope purse types are very popular at present although many women prefer the large handbag which has ample room for carrying purposes.

Velvet printed in gold or silver designs can be purchased by the yard in many of the department stores. This material affords a wonderful solution for the semi-dressy gown for winter. Tunic frocks may have the upper portion entirely of this printed velvet with a plain colored velvet underslip.

Small hats made of embroidered satin or of metal cloth will be worn with the fur coat this season. Felts that are unbound about the brim and trimmed with fur or tinsel ribbon will also be popular.

The Spanish shawl has been the inspiration for the design of many new evening wraps of formal type. Women have shown a great preference for shawls for evening wear and this season provides a variety of effects. Squares of printed velvet bordered in fox and lined in vivid and contrasting colored velvet are even lovelier in effect than the embroidered Spanish shawl from which they have their inspiration. These wraps will offer many suggestions to the home dressmaker who fashions the evening wrap for this season. If one wishes to economize on the cost of such a wrap, one could use a wide border of plain velvet instead of the border of fur about the square and use fur only in collar effect about the neck.

Protect Your Children from Goitre

Everywhere—particularly in fresh water areas you see large, hideous cases of goitre, not only unsightly, but often disastrous to mental and physical health.

Now, through scientific research a practical preventive has been found. A preventive that permits you to safeguard your children easily, without medicine.

The Canadian Salt Company solved the situation for Canadians by introducing a minute particle of iodine into the purest of salt—Windsor Table Salt. It has received the official sanction of hundreds of physicians and scientists as a practical goitre preventive.

Windsor Iodized Salt cannot be distinguished from pure Windsor Table Salt by taste and we recommend it to you for use on the table and in all your cooking.

You owe goitre protection to your children.

YOUNG PEOPLE HELD MEETING

Keene Resident Honored By Many Friends—News of Keene.

KEENE, Oct. 23.—The Agricultural Young People of Otonabee spent a very pleaasnt evening at the home of Mrs. George Hall in honor of Miss Lila Hall, their daughter who is shortly moving to another part of Otonabee township. About 50 young people were in attendance. A very pleasant time was spent, the evening being occupied by guessing contests, games and music. Mr. W. H. Fletcher acted as chairman of the occasion.

A very pleasant event occurred when Miss Hall was presented with a large mantle clock and address. Miss Hall being very much taken by surprise and replying in a most pleasing manner. This was followed by a bounteous luncheon after which community singing was lustily joined in, after a very enjoyable evening. The many friends returned to their several homes in the wee small hours of dawn. The address follows:

Dear Miss Hall,—

We your friends and associates of The Ontonabee Agricultural Young People's Society have gathered here tonight to extend to you our heartiest felicitations upon the announcement that you are about to take up your residence in another part of Otonabee, we are also glad to know that old Otonabee still holds a charm for some of its young people and that you have chosen to remain among the envirous of this community and that we will still have you among us to still help in the social life of this community. We happily congratulate you upon the step in which you are taking and most sincerely hope that you future life will be one filled with joy, happiness and prosperity we recognize the sterling qualities of which you possess and your unfailing efforts which you have always put forth for the betterment of our young people, both at home and in your social activities. We would ask you to accept this gift, not because of its monetary value but as a very small token of esteem in which you are held. We again heartily congratulate you and can assure you that you carry the best wishes of all your friends here tonight to your future home.

Signed on behalf of the Otonabee young people,

Annie Reid, Ladies' Pres.
Sadie Dixon, Vice-Pres.
Peter Mather, Pres. Men's.

Will Hold Debate.

On the 29th of October the young Agriculturists are holding a concert and debate in the Town Hall, Keene, followed by lantern slides put on by F. C. McCrae of Norwood, District Agricultural Representative, Indian River. Debaters are taking the negative side. A great deal of friendly rivalry exists between the two debating teams and a good time can be assured. The agricultural class are already making great preparations for the coming winter activities it being their intention to put numerous debates, concerts, etc., during the winter month. Mr. Clarence Robertson of Keene, a member of the agricultural class held in Keene last winter is now at the O.A.C. Guelph. Others are going to attend at a later date this coming winter.

Mrs. McIntyre of Toronto spoke on Sunday in the Presbyterian church to the W.M.S. Mrs. MacIntyre brought a very inspiring message to the ladies present.

Fishing Notes.

The fishing season has by no means ended, some very large catches have been reported. The maskinonge appetite has improved for the fisherman's bait. Mr. Parnell Nicholson and party left for Niagara after spending a week at Rice Lake. Their catch includes 13 lunge, 15 pickerel and fifty bass. This year goes to prove that Rice Lake can be classed among the foremost lakes for the sportsmen.

The duck shooting season is now in full blast. The season has been too fine for hunters to report any large catches but the colder weather now at hand will soon bring them to the hunter's paradise. As usual the bulk of the ducks are rafting in the centre of the lake. There has been a little Sunday shooting but the game laws seems to be better observed in this respect this year.

Mr. Ed White of St. Catharines arrived this week and as usual has brought his good shooting eye along, which means that Ed. will have his share of ducks.

Mr. Roy Farr of Port Hope has paid his usual visit to his cottage at Ashburn's Point.

Ploughing Match.

A number of people attended the annual ploughing match at Douro. Mr. Harold Collins of Keene took first prize for finishing and second prize for ploughing.

Mr. Stanley Taylor and party are back in the Aspley district shooting.

Mr. James Ashburn is very ill.

Mr. Joseph Walker was in Peterboro on Wednesday on business.

Mr. Michael Kennekley has been busy disposing of a car of coal in the village.

Mrs. Millin and daughter Ada was in Peterboro on Saturday.

Miss Clara Roach has returned home from St. Joseph's Hospital where she underwent a serious operation.

Mr. Joseph Thornton moved to his new residence on Monday.

Mr. Collins of Peterboro was in the village on Monday.

Miss Marion MacFarlane of Peterboro is visiting in Keene.

Rev. Andrew McLachlan is in Toronto on business this week.

Farewell services for the Rev. W. R. McWilliams, B.A., B.D., who leaves for Japan December 1st will be held on Keene circuit on Sunday 26th will be held on Monday evening. A four-piece string orchestra from Peterborough assisted by a male quartette and local talent will furnish the program.

Getting Too Fat? Try This—Reduce

People who don't grow too fat are the fortunate exception. But if you find the fat accumulating or already cumbersome, you will be wise to follow this suggestion, which is endorsed by thousands of people who know. Ask your druggist for Marmola Prescription Tablets and follow directions. One dollar is the price the world over. Get them from your own druggist or send price direct to Marmola Co., General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich. By doing this you will be able to reduce steadily and easily and pleasantly, without starvation diet, or tiresome exercise. Start taking them today and get slender.

BANK CLEARINGS.

Total for the Week Shows an Increase Over Last Week of $44,150.

The total bank clearings for the week, given out by the Peterboro Clearing House was 868,931 an increase of 44,150 over last week. The total for the corresponding week in September of this year was low at $747,081 while the total for the same week in October last year was the highest for the four weeks, being $913,146.

What will the future of this boy bring? He is the youngest lad ever to enter college. He is Arthur Gottsman, admitted to Oglethorpe University in Atlanta at the age of 10. Psychological tests show that he has a 19-year-old mentality. His grade was 184, one of the highest marks in that particular test ever made in the United States.

One of the most famous prodigies of recent years is now a clerk, receiving $23 a week for operating an adding machine. But Robert Milton and Anatole France achieved fame in their maturity after starting out as boy prodigies.

There is no middle-ground for boy geniuses. Which course will Arthur Gottsman take. Would you want your boy of normal intelligence to trade fortunes with him?

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

PEANUT ROAST.

Peanut roast, a good substitute for meat loaf, is made by grinding peanuts very fine, mixing with bread crumbs and egg and seasoning, and baking it until it is a rich brown.

A Public Danger.

Caught Disease On the HANDS!

Skin disease threatens us every day. Invisible germs of blood-poison, eczema, etc., are waiting to infect the least cut or sore place. The money you use carries germs—you get them on the handles, rails and straps of the trains and street cars, and in a score of other ways.

Solely through Zam-buk, Mr. Henry C. Davis, of South 17th Street, Kansas City, U.S.A., has just escaped a virulent type of eczema, contracted, he suspects, through use of public towels.

"I had medical advice," he says, "tried in addition all sorts of so-called eczema remedies, without finding the hoped-for relief. Zam-buk treatment soon gave positive results. It took away the painful irritation and quickly purified and healed the deep troublesome sores."

HUNTING MOOSE AND DEER.

For many years hunters from Ontario have realized that the very best hunting grounds are located in the vicinity of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Hunting clubs, as well as small parties, appreciate the necessity of arrangements made in advance. Canadian Pacific agents are qualified to give you accurate information as to where deer, moose and big game can be found. They are plentiful in the French River district to Sudbury from French River; along the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway from Sudbury to Chapleau, and also in the Maritime Provinces, as well as in the district around Sharbot Lake.

Ask any Canadian Pacific agent for a copy of the Hunters' Pamphlet or write W. Fulton, District Passenger Agent, C. P. R. Building, Toronto. 10,17,24,31

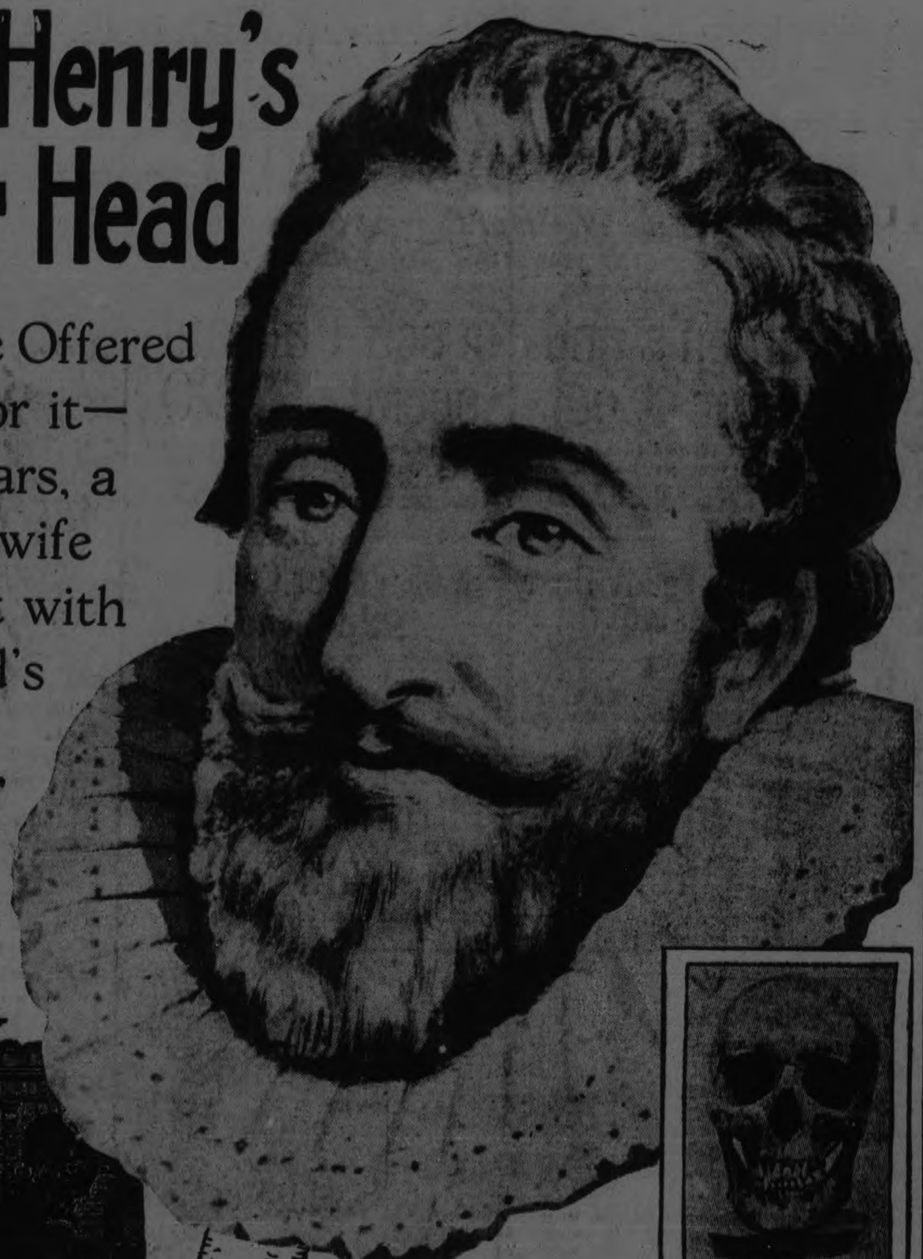
Sold! for 60 Cents—King Henry's Million Dollar Head

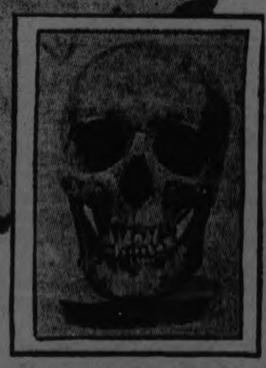
Alive, Queen Catherine Offered a Dukedom for it—Dead 300 Years, a Paris Housewife Pitched it Out with Her Husband's Other "Old Junk."

Interior of the Cathedral Abbey of St. Denis, Showing the Royal Tomb of Henry IV, From Which French Revolutionists Stole His Head.

Margaret of Navarre, Wife of King Henry IV.



King Henry IV, of France, From an Old Portrait.



The Head of King Henry IV, Bought by an Antiquarian for Sixty Cents at an Auction of Old Junk in Paris.

PARIS.

THE head of King Henry IV., of France—for which the cruel Catherine de Medici offered five million francs in gold when it was still on the monarch's shoulders—has just been sold, at a public auction of old junk, for the equivalent of 60 cents!

M. Bourdais, of Dinard, the well-known antiquarian, dropped in quite by accident at the Salle Drouot, a building where forced auctions are held by the government, one day when they were selling a miscellaneous collection of trash consisting chiefly of unredeemed stuff from the "Mont de Piete" or State pawnshops.

Piled up along with the old muskets, hair-trunks, torn tapestries and hodgepodge, was a head, or rather a skull.

He thought at first it was a mere relic from the cabinet of some long-dead doctor or professor of anatomy, but something about it attracted him and he examined it more carefully. He concluded that it was very old, probably early Sixteenth century, and then to his amazement he discovered, with the aid of a microscope, that it had apparently been inefficiently embalmed, and subsequently severed from the body long after death.

Here was a mystery.

Embalming was very unusual in mediaeval France. M. Bourdais immediately suspected that it might be the head of a historical personage. He kept his own counsel, but decided to buy it.

When the head was put up, nobody else bid for it at all. Nobody wanted an old skull. The antiquarian offered ten francs for it, and it was immediately knocked down to him.

After it was in his possession, he took the government into his confidence, and started an investigation. It developed that the head had been in the attic of a bourgeois family of Paris for several generations, along with a number of old flags, pikes and rusty swords which were supposed to have been relics of the revolution.

A few years ago, the family was moving to Marseilles. The husband, Joseph Marie Bonvin, veteran of the Franco-Prussian war and interested in war relics of every description, wanted to pack up the entire contents of the garret and take it along. His wife protested. They compromised and threw out some of the stuff—including the old skull—which was subsequently salvaged by the concierge (janitor) and sold at the nearest pawnshop for the price of a bottle of red wine.

M. Bourdais was convinced, however, that the skull was a century or more older than the date of the revolution, which was about 1800. This would throw it back to the reign of Henry IV., who was King from about 1580 to 1610. Further investigations, coupled with careful measurements of the skull, convinced him that it might be the head of the monarch himself.

Then he set about a new investigation from a different angle, and made the historical discoveries which have convinced him that it is indeed King Henry's head—that the head which he had bought for ten francs, and might have just as easily been bought for the price of a cabbage, was the same head for which, in life, Catherine de Medici had offered five million!

While Henry was still King of Navarre, in the latter part of the Sixteenth century, with Catherine de Medici's son on the French throne as Charles IX., and Catherine herself the chief political power of the state, the great religious wars broke out between the Catholics and Protestants. Henry, who had been educated as a Protestant, took sides with the famous Colignys, father and son, against Catherine. He was handsome, bearded, reckless, popular, a great fighter and a great leader. He not only led the Protestant armies, but fought like a demon himself on the battlefields, and won a number of important victories.

The cruel Italian Catherine set a price on his head, offering five million francs in gold and political honors, including one of the minor European dukedoms under her control, to any one who could bring about his death or capture.

Later came the massacre of St. Bartholemew, in which Catherine's adherents controlling Paris, slew every Protestant they could lay their hands on. They got plenty of other heads, including Coligny's, but Henry was always too wily for them and they didn't get his.

He presently became King of all France, and the head was most becomingly adorned with the royal crown, until 1610—eventually, by the way, he had turned Catholic—when he was assassinated by a political and religious fanatic by the name of Ravaillac.

He was so popular that the public cried out for a terrible vengeance on the assassin. Henry, affable, quick-witted like a true Gascon, good-hearted, indulgent, had been adored by everybody. His numerous love affairs, with Gabrielle d'Estrees, Henriette d'Entragues and other beauties of the day—though none of them were more lovely than his own wife, who was Margaret of Valois, sister of King Charles—made him a romantic figure.

They tortured Ravaillac to death, cut his body in four pieces and hung them on the scaffold. They embalmed the body of the King, after the manner brought into France by the Medicis, which included severing the head from the body and then replacing it in proper position in the casket, and buried him with great pomp in the great Cathedral of St. Denis, outside the gates of Paris, the official resting place of French royalty, filled with famous tombs.

The story of what subsequently became of King Henry's head, is equally interesting. The head and body lay peacefully in its tomb at St. Denis until two centuries after his death when the revolution came.

The Sans-Culottes were after the heads of all royalty, both living and dead. They had an intense hatred of all Kings. They cut off the heads of King Louis XVI. and of his beautiful Queen, Marie Antoinette. They cut off many lesser heads indirectly connected with royalty, including that of DuBarry, the King's sweetheart, and of the lovely Princess Lamballe, which they hoisted on a pike and carried through the streets.

Then it occurred to the mob, drunk on excitement and blood, that they would go out and get the heads of dead royalty as well. They marched to the Cathedral of St. Denis, smashed open a number of royal tombs, desecrated the bodies and kicked the heads around the floor.

The royalist historian Touchard La Fosse, tells specifically about their finding the head of Henry IV., as recounted by an eyewitness. The head was even then little more than a skull, but the magnificent beard was still preserved.

Nothing more is known about it historically until the moment it appeared again, at the auction of old junk, knocked down to M. Bourdais for the trifling sum of ten francs. Antiquarians are convinced of its true identity. After M. Bourdais has completed his study of it, the head may be replaced, along with the body which still lies there, in the tomb at St. Denis.

USED JEWEL FOR A PAPER WEIGHT

Largest Sapphire In World Worth $35,000 Weighs 916 Carats.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Declared to be the largest sapphire in the world, a jewel, once used as a common paper-weight, has been brought from India and is now being offered for exhibition in London. The jewel is worth more than $35,000, weighs 916 carats and is in the form of a plucked flower with a short stem. It was acquired by a government official in India who, ignorant of its value, used it as a paper-weight in one of the guard huts on the Indian frontier.

The discovery of the jewel was made by the director of Indian Revenue when he visited the outpost. Its history has been traced to the twelfth century when one of the Bellalla kings, while on a pilgrimage to Ceylon, was given the sapphire by a Buddhist monk. During the reign of this king the stone became the object of much veneration and was afterwards captured by Malik Kaffur, the great general of Allandan. Later it came into the possession of a state official, but was lost about 1875.

Experts are of the opinion that the jewel was a hair ornament of an ancient deity and there is, it is believed, a companion stone in existence.

De Valera Given Orders By Ulster Not To Cross Border.

DUBLIN, Oct. 23. — (Canadian Press).—Addressing a crowd at Newry last night, prior to his departure for Ulster, Eamon De Valera answered a challenge of the Northern Government to arrest him if he crossed the border.

Mr. De Valera said he was elected a representative of County Down and that no man worthy of the people could ignore that challenge. In the course of his speech, Mr. De Valera declared he always had stood for unity in Ireland and that if the Catholics of the six counties wanted to secede he would oppose them as strongly as he had opposed Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier. If the North was determined to fight for partition, Mr. De Valera said the determined men of the South would win in the final contest.

VIENNA PRIVATE BANK FAILS

VIENNA, Oct. 23. — The private bank of Brevillier & Co., one of the oldest and best known firms of Vienna, founded in 1802, was declared insolvent Tuesday. The liabilities were estimated at $800,000. The assets are said to be considerable, but are not realizable at present. Speculation in francs by clients was declared to be responsible for the failure.

THOUGHTS VAGRANT

She was giving an order to the grocer.

"And I require some cheese," she said.

"Yes, miss," replied the grocer, smiling amiably, "I have some lovely cheese!"

"You should not say 'lovely cheese!'" said the customer, severely.

"But why not, miss? It is lovely cheese!"

"Because"—she tried to combine maidenly modesty with an air of learning— "because 'lovely' should only be used to qualify something that is alive."

The grocer's smile broadened as he glanced at the Gorgonzola.

"Well, miss," he said, "I'll stick to 'lovely'!"

Egypt Welcomes Premier After Failure in England.

CAIRO, Egypt, October 23.—The Egyptian Premier, Said Zaghlul Pasha, was enthusiastically greeted at Alexandria on Monday night upon his return from Britain, where he interviewed Premier MacDonald regarding Egypt's aspirations for complete independence.

He admitted that he had returned without realizing these aspirations, but declared he was ready to sacrifice his life if necessary for his country's independence.

The British had replied to his request "with a refusal without proof or justification," he said, declaring it had been demonstrated that the Egyptians must remain solidly grouped under the banner of "complete independence for Egypt and the Soudan."

"We will never admit, nor will those who come after us, that a single foreign soldier shall remain on Egyptian soil," the Premier declared.

THREE ARRESTS ARE MADE OVER LINDSAY ROBBERY.

TORONTO, Oct. 23. — Inspector Hammond of the Criminal Investigation Department of the Ontario Provincial Police returned to Toronto Tuesday night from Lindsay, where he had been investigating the big robbery at the home of the late Sir Sam. Hughes. While the family of Lady Hughes was at a summer home, the town house was thoroughly ransacked, and about $3,000 in valuables taken. Some of the jewels stolen were prized for their sentimental value. Inspector Hammond has been quietly working on the case for the past few weeks, and on his return to Toronto reported the arrest of three young men on charges of housebreaking. So far very little of the stolen property has been recovered, but it is expected that within a few days more will be found. The arrests were made at Lindsay.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Funeral of Frank Linton Largely Attended—Social Events in Town.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 23.—The funeral of the late Franklin Linton, on Tuesday morning, was largely attended. Christ Church, where the funeral service was held, was filled with friends and relatives. Many of his friends from Peterboro were present. Rev. G. C. Clarke, rector of Christ Church, had the service, with Rev. Mr. Blagrave of Peterboro assisting. Mr. Clarke, in his sermon, said: "We have gathered here to show, in our poor way, our sympathy for the sorrowing friends. We speak of the life of one who was, in many respects, an example for us all. He was baptized in Christ Church, was a member of the Sunday School when a boy, and later was superintendent for some time. He began, when a boy, as an employee in the Rathbun Lumber Company in Campbellford, and later went to Peterboro in a larger field of his chosen life work. He was a man, conscientious indeed, strict in his moral life, and a trusted employee of his company. Now we spourn his loss, who, by his life and example, we can ill afford to lose. Though he is taken from us, his influence will remain. By our presence here we show in act, if not in word, that we are praying:

"Father; in Thy gracious keeping,
Leave we now Thy servant sleeping."

There are very few in Campbellford that did not know him and his sterling qualities.

The beautiful hymns that were sung and the prayers, as well as the sermon, made a very impressive service. The pall-bearers were:—Messrs. G. A. Kingston, A. J. Jenkins and Dr. H. O. Richardson, of Campbellford, and Messrs Dickson-Davidson, Ross Dobbin and E. H. Howson, of Peterboro. The floral tributes were very beautiful, and many, showing the respect in which the deceased was held. They were contributed as follows from Peterboro Lumber Company, Peterboro Masonic Lodge, Peterboro Lock Company, Peterboro Lawn Bowling Club, Messrs. Howson and Dawson, Peterboro; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Overend, Peterboro; Campbellford Masonic Lodge, Christ Church Willing Workers, Christ Church Women's Auxiliary; Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Kingston, Mr. and Mrs. Alf. McKeel, Captain and Mrs. Hyland, Mrs. and Miss Cook, Mrs. Bogart, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Archer, Mrs. Wm. Smith, Campbellford; Misses Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, Belleville; Mrs. and Miss Davidson, Mrs. Dickson, Miss Helen Monroe, St. John's Chapter of St. Andrew, Belmont Club, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Benor, Mrs. Hazlett, Mrs. Walsh, The Misses Dickson, Rotary Club, Peterboro; Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Tait, Campbellford; Mr. and Mrs. E. Birks, Campbellford; Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Doyle, Belleville; also flowers from the family.

Mr. Ad. Linton, brother of the deceased, arrived on Monday night from Calgary to attend the funeral.

The late Mr. Linton will be missed by many friends in Campbellford, especially in Christ Church.

NEWS OF MARMORA.

Temperance Activity in Town—Personal Mention.

MARMORA, Oct. 23.—On Monday, Oct. 20th, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Christie, Mr. John J. French, of Marmora, was married to Mrs. Carrie Briggs, of Cordova, by Rev. D. R. Clare.

The remains of the infant child of Mr. Harry Scott, of Havelock, was brought to Marmora and buried in the Marmora cemetery on Monday, October 20.

Miss Elsie Williams, who is teaching in Prince Edward County, spent the week-end at her home in Marmora.

Temperance Address.

On Sunday evening last, Rev. D. R. Clare gave a strong temperance address. In graphic pictures, he showed what would be the results if the O.T.A. failed in being sustained on Thursday next. He made a strong appeal to the people present to stand by the O.T.A. and help the future of our country.

On Tuesday evening there were three meetings in town with regard to the coming plebiscite.

In the Methodist Church a number of workers gathered to make final arrangements for the work on Thursday, and to thoroughly discuss the situation.

In the Free Methodist Hall, Mr. Goderich and Mr. Potter made strong appeals for the sustaining of the O. T. A.

The town hall was occupied by the members of the Moderation League, where, to a scattered audience, an out-of-town speaker waxed eloquent on the crimes of the bootlegger, and reasons why the country should have the free sale of liquor.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Bell and daughter, Lorraine, motored to Peterboro on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. David Simmons and Connie, spent Sunday in Trenton.

Rev. E. W. Roland, of Omemee, and Rev. J. M. Whyte, of Eldorado, spent Tuesday visiting Rev. and Mrs. Clare.

DO NOT STARCH.

When you put away muslins and linens they should be washed but not starched.

MENU FOR FAMILY

Breakfast—Wheat cereal cooked with dates, thin cream, creamed spinach on toast, apple sauce, cinnamon toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Tomatoes filled with eggs, whole wheat bread and butter, carrot marmalade, milk, tea.

Dinner—Cream of mushroom soup cold sliced roast beef, baked cauliflower, fresh pear salad, white layer chocolate cake, milk, coffee.

A child under six should not be allowed to eat highly seasoned or "hot" relishes, so if father must have a mustard or horseradish sauce for his cold roast beef, mother will have to say "no" to Junior and be firm about it.

Cinnamon toast will please a child and even a four-year-old may be allowed to eat this gentle spice.

Cinnamon Toast

Six slices white or whole wheat bread cut ⅜-inch thick, 4 tablespoons butter, 1½ tablespoons cinnamon, 3 tablespoons light brown sugar.

Cream butter. Mix and sift sugar and cinnamon and stir into butter. Toast bread quickly on both sides. Spread evenly with prepared butter and serve warm.

Mother will like this toast for afternoon tea now that cold days are coming.

Tomatoes Filled With Eggs

Four large smooth tomatoes, 4 eggs, 8 tablespoons cream, salt and pepper.

Dip tomatoes into boiling water and remove skins. Cut a slice from stem end of each tomato and remove seeds. Break and egg into each tomato and fill with cream. Cover with the slice of a tomato. Put each tomato in a buttered ramikin and bake 10 or 15 minutes in a hot oven. Remove tops, season with salt and pepper and serve at once.

Carrot Marmalade.

Three cups carrots, 2 lemons, 1 orange, 2 cups sugar.

Wash and scrape carrots. Put through food-chopper. Cover with water and cook until tender. Squeeze juice from lemons and orange and scrape as much of the white fiber from the rinds as possible. Put rinds through food-chopper. Cook in as little water as possible to prevent burning until tender. Combine with cooked carrots, add sugar and lemon and orange juice and cook until thick, about 15 minutes. Pour into sterilized jelly glasses and cover with paraffin when cold.

When the carrots are new and tender they are better for marmalade than later in the season.

Fresh Pear Salad.

Pare pears and cut in halves lengthwise of the fruit. Remove cores. Allow half a pear for each serving. Fill the cavities with peanut butter, place on a bed of lettuce and mask with boiled salad dressing.

The peanut butter can be combined with cream or cottage cheese and the combination made moist with cream.

Breakfast—Fresh pears, scrambled eggs with bacon, corn bread, milk, coffee.

Luncheon — Spinach timbales, whole wheat bread and butter, sliced tomatoes, oatmeal cookies, cocoa, tea.

Dinner— Casserole of chicken, mashed potatoes, creamed lima beans, stuffed tomato salad, vanilla ice cream, sponge cake, milk, coffee.

With the exception of the stuffed tomato salad and the rich gravy over the chicken, a 4-year-old child may be given all the dishes suggested in the menus. He should not have the seeds of tomatoes and you may prefer to stew them and rub them through a puree strainer.

Corn Bread.

One cup corn meal, 4 tablespoons whole wheat flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons brown sugar, 1 teaspoon soda, 2 cups sour milk, 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons butter.

Mix dry ingredients. Beat eggs until light in a bowl with a dover beater. Add sour milk to dry ingredients and beat until smooth. Add eggs and pour mixture into a hot frying pan with bottom and sides well covered with butter. Bake half an hour in a hot oven.

Spinach Timbales.

Two cups cooked spinach, 2 eggs 2 tablespoons milk, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Chop spinach and season with salt and pepper. Beat egg until light with milk. Combine mixtures and fill timbale cups two-thirds full of mixture. Set in a pan of hot water and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Butter cups well before filling. Remove from molds and serve.

Stuffed Tomato Salad

Four large smooth tomatoes, 2 cups cooked chopped corn, 2 tablespoons mixed green pepper, ½ teaspoon onion juice, mayonnaise.

Peel tomatoes and scoop out seeds. Sprinkle inside with salt and let stand one hour on ice. Combine corn, pepper and onion juice with mayonnaise and fill tomatoes with mixture. Use enough mayonnaise to make the filling moist. Serve on lettuce hearts and mask the whole with mayonnaise. The corn and pepper can be combined with French dressing or a plain boiled dressing and mayonnaise used only as a garnish.

Oatmeal Cookies.

One cup oatmeal, 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ cup sugar, 4 tablespoons butter, ½ cup milk, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 egg, ½ cup chopped raisins, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon vanilla.

Cream butter and sugar and add egg well beaten. Mix raisins with flour, baking powder, cinnamon and salt and oatmeal. Add alternately with milk to first mixture. Spread on a buttered and floured cookie sheet and bake in a moderate oven. Cut in two-inch squares and spread on molding board to cool.

WHY SOME PEOPLE ARE "FRIGHTENED TO DEATH"

YOUR nervous system is the vital force of your body; the force that gives energy to every organ and every muscle. So great is the power of the nerves that a tremendous shock, such as fear, may cause death.

A lesser nerve shock will blanch the cheeks, make the knees tremble, cause the heart to beat wildly or almost paralyze breathing.

To sustain our vitality we must nourish the nervous system. When we restore lost nerve power we find ourselves filled with new strength.

Nervous, exhausted men and women can quickly regain their nerve power. As they rebuild their nerves they soon see the signs of returning vitality.

Wincarnis gives to the nerves the very elements they must have to be nourished back to energy. For fifty years this nerve restorative and strength giver has reinvigorated those who were weak, thin, pale and so easily discouraged that life seemed scarcely to hold any real happiness.

If you are lacking in vital nerve force, go to your druggist today and begin the safe Wincarnis treatment. A sixteen-ounce bottle, which is a fourteen-day Wincarnis treatment, is sold for $1.50 by all leading druggists. Wincarnis is so effective that only three table-spoonsful a day need be taken. Try Wincarnis and see the difference just a few days will bring.

MIGHTY FLOOD OF WET CITIES RECEDES BROKENLY FROM ROCK OF FIRMLY DRY RURAL ONTARIO

All Cities Veered Toward the Wet Column and Most Plunged In.

FERGUSON RETICENT.

Cleavage of Rural and Urban Opinion Calls For Serious Consideration.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press).— With about 25 per cent. of the rural polling booths still to be heard from and with about one million ballot cast the Ontario Temperance Act early this morning had secured a majority of 25,000 inyesterday's plebiscite. Such a result was the final form of a vote which, in the early returns accorded as high as 80,000 majority for government control but which constantly dwindled from this peak to a more moderate win for the existing legislation.

The early lead for Government Control was furnished largely by the urban returns, Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa and Windsor giving a large anti-O.T.A. votes, and other cities also assisting substantially the Moderation League's cause.

The rural balloting, however, took a directly contrary course, and the heavy Govenment Control leadership was overcome by returns which were received early in the morning.

Upon this result Premier Ferguson—at the instance of whose government the plebiscite was taken—refused to comment last evening.

The Prime Minister said he would want to see the complete returns before venturing any pronouncement, and that the vote in its various aspects would have to be the subject of discussion and consideration by the government.

The notable cleavage of rural and urban opinion upon the issue, was pointed out to him, but, but he would not state whether or not the government in handling the liquor problem would make any discrimination between the country and the city upon the lines which the vote had taken.

Rural Fights Urban.

The vote in its broad lines was a contest between ruralite and urbanite. Speaking generally, the O.T.A. found its greatest support in the country districts, while Government control, without a single exception, gained in the cities over the showing which it made in 1919. In the vote of that year the cities of Ontario actually returned a majority of 18,408 for temperance. Yesterday, however, the cities voted overwhelmingly the other way and embraced the Government control plan by a majority totalling 97,705.

The turnovers thus recorded in the cities was noteworthy. Ottawa was outstanding in this regard, a dry majority of 466 there being changed to a wet majority of 10,389.

London also swung into the wet column, a dry majority of 4,989 being changed to a wet one of 476.

Guelph followed suit, going wet by 48 where it had gone dry by 4,989.

Chatham changed a dry majority of 2,982 into a wet one of 660.

St. Catharines likewise switched a dry majority of 512 into a wet one of 4,311.

Galt, which had previously gone dry by 572, went wet by 580.

Niagara Falls, where a dry majority had been 831, went wet by 1,416.

Sarnia, previously dry by 1,082, went wet by 558.

Stratford and Welland also left the dry cause to espouse Government control.

Other cities in the province were unchanged in their allegiance, but in every case their majority for the Temperance Act suffered a slump.

YOU will find that Sunlight quickly softens the water as no other product can do. CHINA WORKS TO PREVENT FAMINES

Two Thousand Miles of New Roads Have Been Built.

PEKING, Oct. 23.—A report recently issued by the engineering department of the China International Famine Relief Commission, organized four years ago as a result of the great famine in central China, gives the following interesting data as to preventive work done in conjunction with the American Red Cross.

Two thousand miles of new road were built and 750 miles of roads repaired. The total cost of this work was over $4,000,000, Chinese currency, or about $2,000,000 gold.

In regions subject to drouth, approximately 25 miles of irrigation ditches were constructed, at a cost of $51,000 and over 370 miles of drainage ditches were dug or cleaned at an expense of $202,000. Five hundred miles of river dykes were built or repaired entailing an outlay of more than $500,000. Wells were sunk to the number of 6,672, at a cost of $405,000.

In addition the commission contributed $360,000 toward the work of confining the Yellow River to its channel at Lichin, where it had broken its dykes and flooded the surrounding country.

MENUS FOR A FAMILY.

Breakfast—Fresh pears, ready prepared cereal with thin cream, crisp bacon, toast, cocoa, coffee.

Luncheon—Puree of carrots, whole wheat bread and cheese sandwich, prune jelly, tea.

Dinner — Broiled Salisbury steak, mashed potatoes, creamed corn, tomato stuffed with spinach salad, whole wheat bread and butter, new honey, chilled watermelon.

If the four-year-old has his orange juice half an hour before breakfast he will begin with his cereal and not miss the pears.

If you grated the corn for creaming the youngest may partake with the rest. Otherwise corn is difficult to digest and should not be given to children under school age.

The juice of the watermelon won't hurt the "baby" but he won't be able to digest the fruit itself.

The crushed seedless pulp of a perfectly ripe fresh tomato should be combined with spinach and served without dressing for the juniors.

Puree of Carrots.

Two cups diced carrots, 1 cup whole milk, 1 tablespoon butter, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon sugar, paprika.

Wash and scrape carrots and cut in dice. Cook in boiling water to prevent burning until tender. Rub through a puree strainer, using the water in which the carrots were cooked. Season, return to the fire with butter and milk and heat but do not let boil.

Whole Wheat Bread and Cheese Sandwiches.

Cut bread in thin slices and spread lightly with softened butter. Put together with cottage cheese made moist with sweet cream.

Prune Jelly.

One-half pound prunes, 3 cups water, ¾ cup sugar, 2-inch piece stick cinnamon, 1 cup boiling water, 4 tablespoons cornstarch, juice of 1 lemon, few grains salt.

Wash prunes well through several waters. Let stand two hours in cold water and cook in same water until tender but not mushy. Remove meat from stones. Return prunes to water in which they were cooked, add sugar, cinnamon and boiling water and simmer 15 minutes.

Make a smooth thin paste with the cornstarch and as much cold water as necessary and stir into the boiling prune mixture. Cook, stirring to prevent burning for 10 minutes. Remove stick of cinnamon, add lemon juice and turn into a mold. Let stand until cold, then put in the ice box. Let stand one or two hours. Serve with whipped cream.

RICH WIDOW'S NEW HUSBAND NEW YORK MAN

Paris Ceremony Makes J. P. Rosenburg, White Haired and 75, Consort of Ex-Countess.

WIFE IN JOKING MOOD.

Can't Remember All Husbands, She Says—Is Mother of Countess Piccio.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—Julia Bachelder, mother of Loranda Bachelder Piccio, whose troubles with her noble Italian airman husband are said to be more or less smoothed over, exhibited a new husband to friends at Ciro's today. He is Jacques P. Rosenber, banker, of No. 829 Park avenue, New York. Julia said radiantly:

"Yes, we are married."

She was asked:

'How many husbands does this make?"

"Heavens don't ask me; you cannot expect me to remember all these details.."

The reporter persisted:

"Number 5?"

"Or number 6—that's as far as I can count, anyway."

New Husband Delighted.

Mr. Rosenberg, who is white-haired and distinguished looking, professed he was delighted at his marriage.

Mrs. Julia Bachelder, widow of a wealthy Chicago lumberman, is also well known in social circles in New Orleans, where she lived.

In 1917, prior to the entrance of the United States into the World War, Mrs. Bachelder offered to equip a complete ambulance outfit for use of American soldiers, should war come with Germany.

She had then returned from a six-years' residence in Europe and had married Count de Bois Lucy, of Paris. When she arrived in New York she renounced the title of Countess de Bois Lucy and desired to be known as Mrs. Bachelder.

Two years ago a report from Paris had it that Mrs. Bachelder was about to take Julian Hussey, wealthy co-proprietor of the famous Lanson champagne, as her sixth husband.

Daughter Fled With Child.

Mrs. Bachelder came into prominence again last January, when her daughter, Loranda, wife of General Count Pier, Rugero Piccio, Italian "ace of aces," tried to take her child out of Italy in a motor boat to French Corsica. Piccio overtook the Countess in an airplane and took the child back to Italy. General Piccio brought suit for separation and his wife countered with another separation action.

Jacques P. Rosenber is listed in the telephone directory as a broker with offices at No. 42 Broadway. He lives at No. 829 Park avenue but inquiries there yesterday brought no response. At the office building, it was said that Rosenberg has been away for several months, presumably in Europe. He was said to be about 75 years old.

An inscription on his office door stated that he has offices in London and Paris.

FENG'S TROOPS CAPTURE PEKIN

This Brings the War in China to an End—Interview With Victorious General.

Cable communication with Pekin was restored to-day and the first despatch from the Chinese Capital was from Ray G. Marshall, United Press Staff Correspondent, who interviewed Marshall Feng Yu Hsiang, the "Christian General," after the latter seized the city.

(By Ray G. Marshall, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PEKIN, October 24. — "The greatest crime in modern times was the intrigue that caused the present war in northern China," Marshall Feng Yu Hsiang, the famed Christian general, whose 10,000 fighting men the best in China—hold the capital, today said in an interview, with the United Press, after his coup d'etat.

"Leaders of China have decided that war must end for all time. That is why we have seized the city."

"China has been made a shell, which all men must now try to piece together and support. I believe public opinion will back us up in this. It was criminal of Wu Pei Fu to send half clad, half-starved soldiers, in no condition for warfare, to fight against the Manchurians," said Marshall Feng, who started north to take part in the fighting for Wu Pei Fu, and returned to take the capital away from his erstwhile commander, has not driven President Tsao Kun from Peking, as erroneously reported. The president was still at the palace this afternoon and was to issue a mandate terminating the civil war in the north and declaring that all disobeying the order were traitors.

To Send Battalion

The Japanese cabinet decided today to send a battalion from Port Arthur to the north of China to protect Japanese residents owing to the changed situation caused by the entry of Feng Yu Hsiang into Peking, warships are also to be sent.

News of Feng's Peking coup had apparently not reached the fighting lines, however. It was predicted that Wu's troops would throw down their arms when they heard of it.

Wu Pei Fu has been advised secretly to leave the front and return to his native province of Shantung.

The transition from all-powerful war lord of Chi Li to an outcast was difficult for Wu to accomplish immediately, however, when Feng sent a telegram this afternoon informing his former chief of what had happened Wu said he doubted the authenticity of the telegram, providing the telegram was genuine, he said, he was willing to return to Peking and discuss the situation.

Wu has been in the north, trying to spur his troops on to defeat those of Chang Tso-Lin, Manchurian War Lord, Chang is reported willing to meet Feng Yu Hsiang in a conference.

HASTINGS CHURCH HELD ANNIVERSARY

Sixty-first Annual Celebration—Rev. Isaac Snell Preached.

HASTINGS, Oct. 23.—The sixty-first anniversary of the Hastings Methodist Church was held on Sunday. Rev. Isaac Snell, a former pastor of the church, had charge of both morning and evening services. The service in the Presbyterian Church was withdrawn so as to enable the minister, Rev. D. A. Thompson, and the members of the church to attend the Methodist Church service. The floral decorations in the church were many and beautiful, the front of the altar being a mass of blooms. Special music was rendered by the choir and other visitors from the congregation.

OIL SUBSTITUTE IS TESTED

Swedes Experiment with Charcoal Gas as a Motor Fuel.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 23.—Experiments in the use of charcoal gas instead of oil as a motor fuel for automobiles, boats, and even trains, have been carried out successfully by the Svania-Vabis Works in Malmoe, it is announced to-day. The gas, derived from ordinary charcoal, and produced at only a fraction of the cost of gasoline or alcohol, can be carried in containers conveniently placed in motor cars and can be piped via a generator to the motor.

Another development in connection with the use of cheap motor fuel is the announcement from the Sala-Gefle Railroad that its passenger cars are being converted for the use of coal gas instead of steam.

PRIZE TO A BIG FAMILY

25,000 Francs Awarded to Couple With Ten Children, including Quadruplets.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—The 'big family' pribe of 25,000 francs has been awarded wby the French Academy, at former Premier Poincare's request, to Devouste Dubreuil, whose family has been struggling against the high cost of living with ten small mouths to feed. The children include quadruplets—two boys and two girls—born during the war, for whom M. Poincare, who was then President of France; King Albert of Belgium, King George of England and the Empress of Russia, were godfathers and godmother.

M. Poincare induced the academy and the multi-millionaire founder of several score such annual prizes to waive the rules which limit the awards to families in which the parents are under 40 years of age. Dubreuil is 55.

TREES

This surprised us: More timber is used for fuel than for lumber. So claims U.S. Forestry service.

Still, many a campfire overnight burns up enough cedar to cost $1000 when transformed into cedar chests.

Nothing is really valuable until delivered to where it is needed. Transportation is the king-pin of all economic problems.

KIDNEY TROUBLE?

The Kidneys are the Blood Filters—When They Weaken and Stop Up, The System Becomes Overloaded With Uric Acid

Toronto, Ont.—"I can highly recommend Dr. Pierce's Anuric (anti-uric-acid) Tablets to all those who suffer in any way with their kidneys or bladder Anuric is by far the best medicine of the kind I have ever taken. My kidneys were congested and inflamed, my back ached something awful, my bladder was weak and I suffered from a scalding and burning sensation. I was almost down and out—but, thanks to Doctor Pierce's Anuric (kidney) Tablets I do not suffer any more. Those who suffer as I did will find Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets just the medicine they need.'—Mrs. Albert Blunt, 6 Blevins Place.

ORGANIZED

Everything is getting organized. Among others, we read of a convention of National Asociation of Piano Tuners. Average person would never dream of such an outfit. Organization is the craze—trades, professions, politics, cults, creeds, sects, for, against, opposed to, backing..... Oh, well, when the movement runs its natural course, everything will be so highly organized that a deadlock will result.

A bit or disorganization—return to individuality, away from mob movement—is needed. It'll be the inevitable reaction from specialization and organization.

CONSTIPATION must be avoided, or torpid liver, biliousness, indigestion and gassy pains result.

Easy to take, thoroughly cleansing

The Affair at Flower Acres

by Carolyn Wells

© 1924 by NEA Service Inc.

"Only this," Finley replied. "I was on the east veranda—finishing a cigarette, and thinking that as soon as I had finished it I would go up to my room. I heard a shot, and I daresay I tossed the cigarette away unconsciously as I ran in the direction of it."

"Ran?"

"Yes, or walked very swiftly. At anyrate, I reached the west door of the sun parlor in a few seconds, and, going in, I found Mr. Raynor on the floor, a pistol by his side. I picked up the weapon——"

"Don't you know that was a wrong act?"

"I didn't stop to think of right or wrong. I picked it up almost unconsciously; at anyrate, involuntarily. It was almost dark; I could with difficulty distinguish what had happened, and then, suddenly, the lights came on, and Miss Turner stood in the house doorway."

CHAPTER V.
Family Affairs.

Mr. Dobbins raised his finger.

"Wait, sir; stop right there. Let me reconstruct the scene."

He rolled off this phrase with gusto.

"As I understand it, the sun parlor, on the south side of the house, has four doors, one facing each of the points of the compass."

"Exactly right," agreed Goddard, "and the north door connects the sun parlor with the house."

"Opening into a hall——"

"A cross hall, yes," Goddard said.

"Now, then," and Dobbins looked straight at Malcolm Finley, "when you came in through the east door, as you say you did, what did you see?"

"It was dusk, I could see nothing distinctly, but I made out the figure of Mr. Raynor, fallen on the floor, and I saw lying near him a pistol, which I at once picked up."

"Why?"

"I have told you I don't know. Merely a natural, unconscious action."

"Humph! Your story is not very convincing. Then what else did you see?"

"Almost immediately the light was snapped on, and I saw Miss Turner, the nurse, in the house doorway."

"And Miss Turner's expression—her attitude? Did she—er—look surprised?"

"That I can't say. I merely saw that it was Miss Turner who stood there, and my glance flew at once to Mr. Raynor."

"You examined him?"

"No; I stood quite still. Mrs. Raynor, startled by the sound of the shot, appeared at the west door. She had come from the terrace, where we had had tea——"

"Yes, she told all that. Reconstruct the scene, please."

"Mrs. Raynor appeared at the west door of the sun parlor, and stood there—as shocked, as petrified, as I was myself."

"Next?"

"Next, I think, Miss Raynor came—brushing past Miss Turner in the house doorway, and almost at the same instant Orville Kent appeared at the south doorway. He came in and went at once to his sister, and then we all began to make exclamations and ask questions. But there's the scene—as you call it."

"The next thing is," Dobbins proceeded, "to fix the time accurately. Do you know it, Mr. Finley?"

"I know that it was a little before seven—ten minutes or so before the hour. But I didn't look at my watch."

"Do you know the hour, Mrs. Raynor?"

"No—I've no closer idea than that it was a little before seven."

"Miss Raynor?"

"I think the shot occurred about fifteen minutes before the hour—and yet, no—I put on my boudoir light at five to seven, I think, or was it twenty to? I can't remember. Why does it matter so much?"

"Do you know, Mr. Kent?"

"Not precisely; but when I left Miss Fay at the bridge she had just said it was seven o'clock, and that is nearly five minutes' walk away. When I came to the south door I saw Mr. Finley and the others gathered round in consternation—just as he described them."

"I have here before me, then, the first arrivals on the scene, with the exception of Miss Turner. I think her presence is advisable."

Dobbins stepped to the door and summoned the nurse, who came at once.

"Please tell me of the tragedy as you know it, Miss Turner," the detective said.

"There's little to tell," said Miss Turner, who looked utterly worn and exhausted, perhaps owing to her experiences with the doctors in the next room, "I heard a shot——"

"At exactly five minutes before seven——"

"Because, as a nurse, I always know precisely what time it is. I glance at my wrist watch constantly—partly from habit, partly from the necessity in my profession of always knowing the time. Without looking, I can tell you now that it is exactly eight minutes after eleven."

"That's right," Dobbins said, with a satisfied glance at his own timepiece. "Where were you at five minutes before seven, Miss Turner?"

"In the pantry."

"And you, Miss Raynor?"

"In my boudoir—as I've told you."

"You, Mr. Finley?"

"On the east veranda."

"Mr. Kent?"

"Between the brook at the foot of the hill and this house."

"Mr. Goddard?"

"In my bedroom."

"Mrs. Raynor?"

Nan's face was very white, and her voice faltered as she said, "On the west terrace."

"But," and Miss Turner spoke with a cold clearness, "I saw you, Mrs. Raynor, just going out of the sun parlor as I turned on the light."

"Just coming in—you mean," cried Orville Kent.

"No," Miss Turner declared, "just going out—and hurriedly. She came back, a moment later, and acted surprise at—at what she already knew."

"You're mistaken," said Finley, in a quiet way. "Your own surprise at the fearful scene the sudden light showed you dazed your eyes as well as your brain, and you couldn't tell just what you did see."

"Indeed, I could!" Miss Turner spoke with decided asperity. "But I will admit I don't know which of you it was that killed him. Only—Mr. Dobbins—it must have been one or the other, and they both know it."

"I think Miss Turner should be warned," put in Goddard's stern voice, "that she is unwise to accuse any one so definitely of what she cannot prove. As nearly as I can learn, the 'scene' which Mr. Dobbins so earnestly desired to have reconstructed includes some five or six individuals—any one of whom might have shot Mr. Raynor—besides the possibility of his having shot himself. Therefore, Miss Turner, for your own good, let me advise you to say less and think more."

"After I have thought more—I can say a good deal more," was the significant response to this, and then Miss Turner was called back by the doctors.

"A valuable witness, that nurse," and Detective Dobbins nodded his head in satisfaction. "The way she knew the time, now; there's efficiency for you—there's reliability for you. We'll learn a lot from that woman when the time comes for her further revelation."

"But don't forget, Mr. Dobbins," Goddard warned him, "that Miss Turner, so far, is just as open to suspicion as any one else. Don't forget that, although Mr. Finley was at the east door and Mrs. Raynor at the west one, yet they may have been attracted by the sound of a shot that was fired by someone who was at either the north or the south door."

"But Mr. Kent came in at the south door——"

"That was later, Mr. Dobbins. It is quite possible that an intruder from outside came in at the south door, fired the shot that killed Mr. Raynor, and disappeared again before Mr. Kent reached the house at all."

"In that case, you would have seen him running away, Mr. Kent?" the detective interrogated.

"Not in the dusk," returned Orville Kent thoughtfully. "I am sure, as I make out the time of the shooting, he would have had time to get away before I came to the south door. It was too dark to see a man if he desired not to be seen—I mean by that, if he kept to the shadow of the shrubbery. A man walking straight away from the south door I should probably have seen, but not one who skulked furtively away—as, of course, I had no thought of looking for any such person."

Every one present except the detective seemed relieved at the suggestion of an intruder from the outside. Goddard followed it up.

"As you can clearly see, Mr. Dobbins, the probability of an intrusion by an outsider is too strong to be neglected. I trust, therefore, you will thoroughly investigate it before accusing, without sufficient evidence, any member of the household."

"Evidence will be forthcoming, Mr. Goddard. We have, as yet, scarcely begun to look for it. Testimony comes first, and we have discovered much already. The time of the shot is accurately fixed by Miss Turner at five minutes before seven——"

"Is her unsupported testimony to be implicitly relied on, Mr. Dobbins?"

"Just what do you mean by that, Mr. Goddard?"

"Only that if Miss Turner chose, for any reason, to state the time inaccurately, she could, of course, do so. Myself, I think the shot was fired a trifle earlier than that."

"Now as to the weapon," Dobbins said briskly, ignoring Ezra Goddard's suggestion. "Who can identify this pistol?"

"Every one of us," Kent said, carelessly. "It was the property of my brother-in-law, and was always kept in the upper right-hand drawer of that desk at your side."

"Was it, indeed?" and Dobbins seemed surprised. "And was it, to your knowledge, Mr. Kent, in that drawer just before the shooting?"

"To my belief, rather than knowledge—a belief based on the assumption that it was doubtless there, because that was its accustomed place."

"Or," suggested Malcolm Finley, "in the event of an ill-intentioned intruder, Mr. Raynor himself may have opened the drawer and taken the pistol out to protect himself, and so may have been shot, by his own hand or another's."

"I can't see it as a suicide," and Dobbins gave a long look at Finley. "Where was any motive for Douglas Raynor to kill himself?"

"For that matter, who had any motive to kill him?" asked Goddard.

"We won't go into that at present," Dobbins returned, quickly.

"No, don't," was Goddard's warning. "Let me tell you, Mr. Dobbins, this case is far from simple. Let me ask you to go slowly, for there are many things yet to be discovered."

"That I well know, Mr. Goddard. But this pistol is a valuable bit of evidence. We must take care of it. It will, of course, show the fingerprints of Mr. Malcolm Finley—as he handled it. If it shows no others——"

"It will prove that the murderer wore gloves," said Ezra Goddard.

"Let me come in—let me hear all this!"

The words were spoken by Dolly Fay, who came into the room, looked quickly about and then seated herself close to Nan.

"Ask me things, Mr. Detective—I can tell you a lot.

"Your evidence would be of no use, miss; we can't take children at witnesses——"

"Pooh! I guess you'll be glad to get evidence from anybody—if it's good evidence."

"Do you know anything about the matter?" asked Dobbins.

"Not a thing——"

"Why did you come over here, Dolly?" asked Nan. "I think you'd better run home again."

PRINCE FIRST

Myopia Hunt Clubhouse was followed by a ride through the woods and meadows on Desert Queen, the pick of Tuckerman Stables, to the home of Francis Appleton.

The Prince lunched at the Appleton Farms, and then the hunt was started.

Tea at the Tuckerman's, where the Prince sat down with the hunting set of the countryside and others, followed the drag.

Last night the Prince attended a dinner-dance at Gravelly Brook Farms, the home of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Lawrence.

The crowd curious to see the Prince had opportunity to do so at many points, and ranged from those high in social standing to the girl workers in cotton mills along the 25-mile motor route from Low to Hamilton. His hat was touched in acknowledgment of greetings from time to time.

The Prince appeared to gain energy as the day advanced. The hunt, with a pack of picked hounds following a laid trail, included as many women as men.

The Prince led the riders over the first jump, but at the second checking station he was well in the rear of the riders that came up.

Asked by James W. Appleton, master of the hounds, if he had had enough, the Prince replied:

"By no means. Let's get along."

The hunt carried the riders through three Essex County towns—Ipswich, Topsfield, and Hamilton.

Over the last stage the Prince led all the way. Croppers at fence and water jumps reduced the field, but no serious injuries were developed in the hunt, in which a stiff pace was set all the way.

He leaves to mourn his loss a sorrowing wife and one son Gordon at home, also two sisters, Mrs. A. C. McCrea of Mark Street, and Mrs. A. Mather, of Hamilton.

The funeral will be held from his late residence on Saturday at 1 o'clock, to the Little Lake Cemetery. Please omit flowers.

G. O. P. CAMPAIGN FUND CLOSE TO THREE MILLIONS

Party's Treasury Lacked $800,000 on Oct. 15 of Maximum Set For Expenses.

COMMITTEE PROBES.

Big Contributions From Business Men Are Alleged To Be Cancelled.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Testimony indicating the manner in which the Republican National committee has set up organizations within the various industries, businesses and professions to raise campaign funds from men within those fields of endeavour was given Thursday to the senate campaign fund investigating committee.

At the same time the committee received from Republican national headquarters supplemental statements regarding contributions showing that the total received as of October 15, was only $800,000 below the maximum of $3,000,000 which Chairman Butler has stated he expects and hopes to raise for the conduct of the present campaign. These statements covered the period from October 10 to 15 and showed receipts of approximately $500,000 within those five days. There also came to the attention of the senate investigators rumors that $100,000 is being sent into Montana independent of the Republican National committeeman and the Republican state chairman for use against Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Democrat, prosecutor of the oil inquiry who is a candidate for re-election. Chairman Borah said there would be a full investigation.

Concealed Donations.

Another development of the day was a request from counsel for Senator Robert M. Lafollette that the Republican state chairman of New York, New Jersey and Illinois and Ohio be called for questioning as to whether there have been "concealed" contributions from big business men. Samuel Untermeyer said he regarded it as significant that there was missing from the Republican list of contributors such names as those of Elbert H. Gary, of the United States Steel Corporation, J. P. Morgan, the Rockfellers, as the heads of the standard Oil Companies, all of whom, he asserted, are well known as Republicans.

Before the commitee finished its day's labors it received from Fred N. Shepherd, excutive manager of the American Bankers' Association further denial of the charge that there was suggested at a recent meeting of the association that the member banks contribute amounts equivalent to certain percentages of their capital to a fund to fight Senator Lafollette in western cities.

LUMBER MEN CREDIT HOME BUYER'S AIDS

Building and Loan Associations Help in Erection of One Thousand Dwellings a Day.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Oct. 24.—That the great increase in the number of individual home owners throughout the country is due more to building and loan association support than any other agency was declared here to-day in a resolution adopted by the eighth annual convention of the National Retail Lumber Dealers' Association.

The subject was widely discussed by the delegates, who represented 17,000 retail lumber merchants in the land, and it was pointed out by J. F. Goodman of Kansas City that during this year there have been built, because of building anod loan aid, an average of 1,000 homes a day.

The lumber men were urged to cooperate with the home buyers, giving them necessary credit, but seeing to it that the home purchaser does not overbuy or assume heavier financial burdens than he is able to carry.

The convention adopted a resolution stating that lumber dealer advertising creates business without increasing the cost of building to the The report from every section was that Fall business had been fair and that Spring trade dependes to some extent upon the outcome of the national election.

AUNT'S BLOOD SAVED NIECE

Woman Kept Wound Open and Nourished Child Three Days.

IN AUTO WRECK.

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 24.—Lying at the bottom of a canyon 900 below the highway over which their automobile had shot, searchers Tuesday found Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Kelty and their 5-year-old niece, Meredith Waterbury. Kelty was dead. His wife and the girl were near death from injuries and exposure. The child owed its life to blood she had sucked from a gash in Mrs. Kelty's arm which the injured woman had kept open to give her sustenance. They had lain helpless at the bottom of the canyon since Sunday, when their car went over the edge of the road.

The Kelty's started Sunday morning for a day's tour in the mountains. When they failed to return Sunday night searching parties were organized to go in search of them. One of the wearied possees which had been tramping the hills and exploring the canyons went into a spot on the Arrow Trail known as Oak Flat.

They came on the wrecked Kelty car lying turned over 900 feet from the edge of the road over which Kelty had driven. Beneath it was his crushed and lifeless body.

Kelty, apparently, had been crushed beneath the car after it plunged from the road and down the mountain. Mrs. Kelty and her niece, the daughter of Mrs. J. Waterbury of this city, were so severely injured that they were unable to crawl back to the highway and attract the attention of passing motorists.

Fearing that the child would die in the chill nights, Mrs. Kelty resorted to nourishing her with blood from her own arm, continually reopening a gash that had been made when the accident occurred. Mrs. Kelty was barely able to explain the facts of the accident and the suffering that followed while she lay with the child.

Kelty was 65 years old and a pioneer of San Bernardino. He had retired from business.

BODY YOUTH WAS CHAINED TO TREE

Strange Case of Yale Graduate Who Disappeared Two Months Ago.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Oct. 24—(United Press).—Henry H. McHenry, 31, Yale graduate, who disappeared from his home in Philadelphia more than two months ago, was found chained to a tree in a lonely mountain wilderness near here, dead of starvation, one end of a 15-foot chain was padlocked around the man's neck, the other end being locked to a huge tree, McHenry had paced a path around the tree while hunger slowly sapped his life.

The body clad in a palm beach suit and other clothing the man wore when he disappeared from home, was found late yesterday by three hunters in the thickest part of Green mountain, from all appearances the man had been dead several weeks, the mystery is one of the most perplexing the state police have ever been confronted with. Two theories have been advanced—one that McHenry was the victim of some murderous plot and second, that he took an unusual method to commit suicide, a week after McHenry disappeared from his home. Advertisements were inserted in Philadelphia papers asking that he communicate with his parents, his father later, appealed to the police to search for his son advising them that since the world war the young man had frequently had mental lapses during which he wandered off into the woods.

THREE LIVES LOST.

As Result of Explosion in a Coal Mine Yesterday.

MADISONVILLE, K.Y., Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Three lives definitely was established yesterday as the toll of the explosion in the mine near here of the Hart Coal Corporation. Two bodies were found crushed under a five-foot cave-in of slate which had been dislodged by the blast. The first body was recovered earlier in the day. The victims were all residents of Madisonville. Seventeen men were in the workings at the time of the blast. Nine of the survivors escaped through an abandoned shaft, and the other five were brought out early yesterday.

UNREST IN BRAZIL.

New Revolutionary Movement Halted—Rigid Censorship.

BUENOS AYRES, Oct. 24.—Following the Brazilian Government's official announcement that it had halted a new revolutionary movement, which was to have broken out in Rio Janeiro last Tuesday, advices reaching here from Brazilian points tell of much unrest throughout the country and indicate that the political situation has again assumed a serious aspect.

One of the despatches received by La Nacion stated that "the present situation is as serious in Rio Janeiro as in the rest of the country. Rigid censorship has been resumed, as formerly, and the sending of more ample news on the situation is difficult."

A despatch from Rivera, Uruguay, which borders on the Brazilian state of Rio Grande do sul, declares that the border inhabitants are considerably alarmed over rumors of an insurrectionary movement.

8,000,000 ACRES FOR JEWS.

Ukrarnia Sets Aside Land to Relieve Congested Towns.

KHARKOV, Russia, Oct. 24.—The Ukranian Government has set aside 8,000,000 acres of land in the district of Ekaterinoslav to be developed by Jewish settlers, in order to relieve the extremely congested living conditions in the Jewish areas of the Ukraine.

Three thousand Jewish families from the smaller trading towns will transfer their abodes to the new area and the American Joint Committee has advanced to the Government a loan of $100,000 for the improvement of the land.

There are about 400,000 Jewish families in the Ukraine and the Ukrainian Commissariat of Agriculture has approached the authorities of the Russian Republic with a request for the apportionment of land in the Crimea and Volga districts for some portion of these families. It is thought likely that the request will be granted and that the Simferopol district will be chosen for the new settlement.

The French dressing for fruit salads should be made with lemon juice instead of vinegar and with paprika instead of black pepper.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 23—On Wednesday night a goodly number of the teachers of Christ Church Sunday School met with the parents of the scholars at the Parish Hall for a social evening for the purpose of getting acquainted.

Rev. G. C. Clarke, B.A., opened the meeting with a little talk, explaining the purpose of the gathering. A very interesting programme was given as follows:—Miss Maynard, instrumental solo; vocal solo, Mr. Robert Dunk, with encore. Mr. Humphries, Peopie's Warden, then spoke a few words, and also told a humorous story. Reading, Miss P. McComb; vocal solo, Mrs. A. J. J. Jenkins, and encore. Then followed a contest, "A Country Dinner." The prize for getting the most answers correct went to Mr. R. Dunk, who had all answered correctly. Solo, Rev. Mr. Clarke, who also responded to an encore; reading, Mr. A. J. Jenkins; solo, Mr. James Benor. At the close of this splendid programme, Mr. Humphries was called upon to tell of the big campaign planned for the month of November.

They will celebrate the seventieth anniversary of Christ Church in Campbellford. They expect, in some tangible way, to clear off the debt on the Parish Hall. On the night of November 3rd a congregational meeting will be held to open up the campaign. Every family is asked to be present on that night and the hearty co-operation of everyone is looked for.

Services have been arranged so as to have all the past rectors, since the Parish Hall was built, to come and preach. On Sunday, November 9th, Rev. Mr. Reid will preach; on the 16th, Rev. Mr. Carpenter will take the services; and on the 23rd, Rev. C. E. Clarke, the last rector, will be present and preach. A special preacher wil also be provided for the first Sunday of November.

At these meetings there will be special music by the choir, under the management of the splendid music committee—Miss G. Maynard (organist), Major Bygott, Miss L. Smith and James Benor.

The Rector asked that each organization of the church be ready and plan to take some active part in some of the programme during the month of November for the big campaign. He also emphasized the importance of the teacher in the Sunday School and the parents at home co-operating in the interests of the Sunday School. Religious education is the most important thing in a child's life. Miss Maynard and Miss Smith were the accompanists for the evening. All enjoyed the refreshments served at the close.

Trousseau Tea.

About eighty guests enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. James Dickson at a "trousseau tea," given in honor of her younger daughter, Georgie, on Wednesday afternoon. After enjoying looking at all the pretty gifts and other things of the bride's trousseau, a dainty lunch was served in the dining-room.

Salvation Army.

The Salvation Army had a farewell tea for Lieutenant Ross, who is leaving for a new field of labor at Fenelon Falls. About thirty-five of the soldiers and friends were present. The Army will greatly miss him, and hope he will be blessed of God and be made a bleasing to others.

The Army have been busy for the last few weeks collecting for their target for the harvest festival. The amount raised in Campbellford was $225, which is used for the support and upkeeping of homes in connection with the Army. They also had tag days at the fairs at Campbellford, Warkworth, Norwood and Roseneath, which cleared them about $57. This is used for the support of the local corp and officers.

MILLBROOK HEARS O.T.A. LAST SHOT

Joseph Wearing Tells of the Traffic From His Long Experience.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 23—The Town Hall was filled to capacity on Monday evening when a very successful rally in the interests of temperance, was held under the auspices of the East Durham Temperance Association, Rev. F. W. Howard being chairman. Music, furnished by the Millbrook band, added variety to the programme, as did also the community singing of temperance songs, led by Miss Ella Elson, who presided at the piano—the boys and girls of the C.S.E.T. and C.G.I.T. groups, with members of the local choirs, giving assistance.

The speakers for the evening were Messrs. Joseph Wearing, of Peterboro, and C. E. Weeks, of Lindsay, others on the platform being Rev. Joseph Wilks, Rev. A. H. McConnachie, and M. T. W. McIndoo, of Fairmount, vice-president of the Cavan Association, were among the prominent local workers who were also present.

Mr. Wearing was the first speaker, delivering a forceful address, and beginning by stating his personal position as a life-long and total abstainer, the invitation to drink, on many social occasions, being no temptation, and persistently declined. Born and brought up in the city of Liverpool, the speaker had, from early boyhood, "seen liquor in its naked reality, and knew it for the damnable thing it is." Thousands to-day may vote for Government control because they are ignorant of what free access to liquor will certainly mean.

Two main reasons were advanced for sustaining the Ontario Temperance Act: First, to vote for Government sale means reversing a settled policy of this province for years back. It would be a retrograde step like voting to abolish trial by jury, and would produce some such chaos as would follow a change from a protection policy to one of absolute free trade. The history of temperance legislation in Ontario was rapidly traced from the Duncan Act, Scott Act, the first plebiscite in 1894, to the enactment of the O.T.A. in 1919, and the fact noted that every time the electors were given opportunity to express themselves they returned a substantial majority in favor of a "dry" law. So that prohibition has been a definite, settled policy in Ontario for over forty years, and the sentiment to have it continued is steadily growing.

Second: There is absolutely no good reason advanced why we should have more opportunities of buying and drinking liquor than under the O.T.A. The claims of the moderationists that the O.T.A. is not working well, and has led to infractions of the law, to bootlegging, and secret drinking, were dealt with in a convincing manner, and the alleged error of the reasoning pointed out. The O.T.A. is not perfect, but Premier Ferguson has promised that, if sustained, it will be strengthened and properly enforced. Personally, the speaker thought the fine of $200 too large, and knew of cases where its payment had worked great hardship for a poor man and his family. The Liquor Commission sometimes paid back part of the fine in such cases, and hence there has been some uncertainty regarding the law, when the whole matter should be left entirely in the hands of the magistrate. "But it's working mighty well, as I know, for I have been prosecuting for years under it."

.50 for Campaign.

Rev. R. T. Richards, secretary of the East Durham Association, presented the financial claims of the campaign, fifty dollars being the levy for Millbrook. The offering was taken up and a generous response reported. Personal subscriptions will be solicited and may be left with Rev. G. S. Gervan, G. E. Burnham, chairman of the loca committee, T. H. Aiken, or P. Stinson. Six hundred and fifty dollars must be raised in the Riding as a minimum to meet necessary expenses.

Mr. C. E. Weeks, who over thirty-five years ago practiced law in Millbrook, was the concluding speaker, and though the hour was late he received an attentive hearing. The danger that the younger voters, who have no first-hand knowledge of the misery, crime, poverty, shame and degradation resulting from the use of intoxicants and thus might be beguiled by the specious arguments of the Moderationists, was pointed out.

"The Ontario Temperance Act is no radical or revolutionary measure, born in a day and passed in a mood of frenzy. It is the fruit of lang years of ceaseless struggle, and steady effort to progress toward better things." The same arguments put up by the enemy when the reduction of licenses, the restriction of hours of sale, and the prohibition of sale to certain classes, are heard to-day, and these opponents have the effrontery to profess that they are inspired by a desire to promote the cause of temperance and of liberty. That they are "conscientious objectors" requires too much credulity for ready acceptance.

A selection by the band and community singing dismissed the gathering.

BARBARIC

Children, especially girls, still are sold for money in the interior of China, reports the American Church Mission in Nanking. One little slant-eyed lad was sold for $6 to pay a tavern bill.

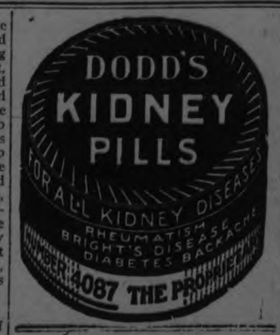
This appears barbaric to the American nation—which still sells many of its children into industrial slavery, child labor.

CHANGED

John Hancock said: "Security to the persons and property of the governed.... is the end of civil govment."

John Adams added: "The security of right and property is the great end of the government."

Government used to exist for the people. Now the people exist for the government, according to practices of some leading politicians and public affairs lunatics.



THE HOME HELPERS.

Interesting Meeting Held in Omemee—A Thank Offering.

OMEMEE, Oct. 23.—A very pleasant and profitable afternoon was spent in the Presbyterian Church when the members of the W.M.S. entertained the Home Helpers of the Society, and also observed their annual thank-offering. The meeting was held in the auditorium of the church. Following the devotional exercises led by the president, Mrs. (Rev.) Black, an interesting talk was given by Mrs. F. G. Sandy on the organization of the Omemee branch of the W.M.S., she being now the only member who has been a faithful attendant since its formation on April 3rd, 1901. The first president of the society was Mrs. (Rev.) Cannewin, and since that time the following ladies have held the office:—Mrs. W. W. Jardine, Mrs. (Rev.) Whitelaw, Mrs. O. G. Williamson, Mrs. F. G. Sandy, Mrs. (Rev.) Curry, Mrs. E. White, Mrs. S. T. Wilson, Mrs. S. J. Macket, and the present president, Mrs. (Rev.) Black. The average membership has been twenty-five, and the Society can now boast three life members. Several speakers were recalled, who have addressed the thank-offering service on previous occasions, many of which were held at the Sunday morning service, while others were observed during the week. This year, by way of a change, a unanimous invitation was extended to Mrs. Ewart, of Cobourg, the presbyterial president, to address the gathering, which invitation she readily accepted. At the close of Mrs. Sandy' talk, Mrs. E. H. Mitchel rendered, in a very efficient manner, a vocal solo entitled "This is my Task."

Mrs. Ewart was then introduced, and for upwards of an hour gave a very vivid account of the diamond jubilee of the W.M.S., held in Montreal this summer. The speaker related snatches of a number of addresses given, and also told of the organization of the Society in British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba and Ontario. In conclusion, Mrs. Ewart said, "Our success has been attained by Prayer, Love, Sacrifice, Leadership and Service, and we are still needing the environment of all to carry on the work."

A discussion followed on the C.G.I.T. and organized Sunday School classes, after which a hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Ewart for her address and interest in the Omemee Auxiliary. The offering was then presented, followed by the dedicatory prayer by Mrs. O. G. Williamson. After a few brief remarks by the president, the service was brought to a close by the hearty rendition of a hymn, after which all repaired to the Sunday schoolroom where refreshments were served by the members of the Society from small tables, with blue and white cloths, on which reposed an attractive bouquet of marigolds. During the social intercourse which followed, it was plainly evidenced that the occasion was one of pleasure as well as profit to all.

ARCHDEACON HALTS O.T.A. MARCH OF SCHOOL CHILDREN IN OTTAWA AND YOUNGSTERS CRY HIM DOWN

Anglican Churchman Proclaims on Street 1000,000 Majority for Wets.

SCENES IN OTTAWA.

"Whiskey Knows No Manners," Boy Declares—Teachers May Be Censured.

OTTAWA, Oct. 24.—There was a hot time in the old town last night, but no hotter than the night before. Last night Ottawa voted wet by 25,629 to 15,240. On Tuesday night the situation was fanned to fever heat when at 4.15 o'clock a parade of High and Public school children started from the High School campus for a march through the principal streets for the cause of the O.T.A. The parade was marshalled by Phil Brockel, Physical Director at the Y.M.C.A. and was held under the authority of the W.C.T.U. When the teachers and pupils in the parade reached the corner of Bridge and Front streets, the trouble arose.

Venerable Archdeacon Beamish, rector of St. Thomas' Anglican church, accompanied by one of his parishioners, Mr. John Elliott, walked to the intersection, and Archdeacon Beamish attempted to stop the procession.

"What authority have you to parade," he asked the children, and he touched Brockel on the shoulder.

The children halted momentarily, but as their stopping obstructed traffic at the busiest corner in the city, Brockel told the two men that they could not stop the parade there. Principal P. C. MacLaurin of the High School who lead the parade, then came up and told the children to move off. They did move off, but by this time a large crowd had gathered. The parade was dismissed at the Postoffice after the children had gone around the market square. Archdeacon Beamish was successful in drawing teachers from the parade, whom he engaged in argument until the children returned to the scene after dismissal.

Much Excitement.

When the children returned, excitement ran high. Mr. Beamish drew a large crowd of children about him and the arguments pro and con commenced.

"Who authorized you to march in this parade?" he asked.

"Our fathers and mothers," was the chorus reply.

"Did you ever drink?" a youth was asked.

"No."

"Then why are you marching, when you do not know anything about it?"

"I guess you know about it," retorted the boy.

"That is fine manners for young folks from O.T.A. homes."

"Whisky knows no manners either," came back the boy.

Then the children began to chant, "We were not forced into the parade," in loud voices and the Archdeacon found difficulty in making himself heard.

By this time Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., had been attracted by the crowds and shouting, and when he appeared he asked what the trouble was. The matter was explained by Archdeacon Beamish, whereupon the Colonel expressed his disapproval.

"This parade was not authorized by the Board of Education, and is illegal," he exclaimed.

Both gentlemen then declared that during the next two weeks every teacher in the parade would answer for their conduct for parading young children.

Previously Mr. Beamish had stated to Mr. MacLaurin that the Moderationists had not paraded in such manner.

"That is their privilege," was the educator's curt answer.

"You may go home and sleep, knowing Government control will carry by 100,000 votes," assured the Divine in addressing the children. "You are supporting a losing cause."

By this time the crowd had milled to a point directly across the street from the Prohibition Union headquarters on Bridge street east, and the children reminded the Rector that he should make his speech in front of the Moderation headquarters on Front street.

HOW NEWCOMERS WERE RECEIVED

Story of British Welcome League a Bright Spot in Canada's Immigration Problem.

Mr. Albert Chamberlain, founder of the British Welcome and Welfare League in Toronto, was the speaker at to-day's Kiwanis Club luncheon. President John R. Marshall presided. Charles Elliott was introduced by Kiwanian Ray Scott as a new member and Kiwanian Harry Dickens, formerly of Guelph and now of Peterboro, was also given a hearty reception. A feature of to-day's programme was the presence at the luncheon of Captain Plunkett of "The Dumbells" and a number of his associates who contributed a number of musical selections. President Marshall thanked Captain Plunkett and his party for their entertainment.

The address of Mr. Chamberlain was illustrated by lantern views showing the arrival of British immigrants to Toronto and their subsequent disposition. This phase of the address was in charge of Mr. F. Chamberlain, a son of the speaker.

The work of the British Welcome League started many years ago, when Mr. Chamberlain discovered a number of immigrants at the Union Station, who were without home and friends. The speaker's heart was touched as he stumbled upon a lonely, weary little group of immigrant strangers—father, mother, and nine children — hovering about a dreary corner of the old Union Station seeking shelter for the night.

A dismal, discouraging impression of the New Land of which they had held such high visions!

With the welfare of such families heavily resting upon his heart, Albert Chamberlain — now known as "the friend of the British immigrant" —brought together a group of business men who were responsible for the organisation of the British Welcome and Welfare League.

For many years a spacious building on Front Street—and later one on Spadina Avenue — served as a hostel where 233,490 men, women, and children gratefully found a refreshing night's sleep upon their immediate arrival in Canada.

Thousands of tired, homesick mothers were heartened as Nurse Robb gave them welcome and carried the babies off to a much-needed bath. On the opening night 342 souls slept in the hostel. 119 of them were babies!

A hospitable dining-room provided 35,728 meals to newcomers. A hot cup of coffee, a sandwich, a piece of cheese, proved very welcome to the batches of Britons arriving on night trains.

Not only were the immigrants made welcome on the night of their arrival, but a bond of friendship was woven through the succeeding months. Puzzled over financial, domestic, and vocational problems, they continually sought the assistance and advice of the League.

Although not a labour bureau, the League placed more than 10,730 men into positions.

A little room was set apart as a clothes press to which the city's contributions of partially worn clothing were brought. From this room were distributed 35,400 articles of clothing to the destitute. And mark this, never was an immigrant charged for any service rendered.

A regular Wednesday evening "cheer-up" concert and a Sunday evening "Christian Citizenship Meeting" brightened and inspired the lives of those who were starting afresh in the new country.

The cessation of emigration during the war period interrupted for a time the work of the League, and it was only resumed again in the fall of 1923. During the first year of its re-organisation a marvellous task was accomplished, winning the commendation of such prominent bodies as the Toronto Board of Trade, the Methodist Ministerial Association, the Toronto Presbytery, the Department of Immigration and Colonisation at Ottawa, the Department of Immigration at Toronto, the Navy League of Canada, the Toronto District Labour Council, His Worship the Mayor of Toronto, the Knights of Columbus, the Canadian Red Cross Society, the Civic Employment Bureau, the Ontario Employment Service, and others.

But prized most are the letters of appreciation received from the newcomers who have been tided over a difficult period of their lives—

During the first year of our re-organisation 2,000 newcomers were advised; 11,797 meals and 5,312 beds provided; 2,000 articles of clothing distributed. Medical attention was given to twenty; 200 were placed into work. More than $8,000 was spent.

SOU TH.

Southern states have a big building boom—half again as much as a year ago. No other section shows such an increase. A great period of construction and prosperity lies ahead for the South. Watch southern cities grow. Lack of industrial power and marketing organizations—these are the South's handicaps, but they'll be overcome.

SAY WOMENS VOTE TURNED THE TRICK

Local Workers in Both the Camps Credit Women's Vote With the Result.

"Oh, thank you very much!" and "Umph!" were two of the most characteristic replies received over the telephone this morning, in response to information given regarding the final aspects of the plebiscite that did a complete back flip after its very "wet" atmosphere of last night. The responses indicated the way in which the inquirers had voted. This morning, one anxious male voice asked appealingly if there were enough sub-divisions still unheard from to upset the big "dry" majority.

To those who thought that Canada's premier province was in need of a drink, the results must remind them slightly of the famous phrase that "the female of the species is more deadly than the male." Or perharps, more up and doing. The women "manned" the polls yesterday and presented an almost absolutely united front in their determination to deliver a knockout blow to a threatening John Barleycorn. The fact that the women don't want Government Control means either that their homes are more comfortable and happy without the liquor that might enter under their roofs, or else that they prefer to make their own, if the charges brought by some of the Moderation believers are right that the majority of homes have a brew of their own somewhere about the premises.

The somewhat crestfallen anti-prohibition officials claim that the militant attitude of many of the women workers yesterday was unfair, and that they did not scruple to place obstacles in the path of those who might be known to have a leaning toward something stronger than tea.

On the other hand, the Prohibition forces give much of the credit for a "glorious victory" to their lady helpers. Every poll in the city had its feminine scrutineers, both inside and outside, while the same could not be said of the male scrutineers. The women co-operated with enthusiasm in efforts to get every woman to vote. One young lady made three trips to North Monaghan to record her preference, some slight difficulty with the officials at the poll causing her this inconvenience. Excellent assistance was rendered also by a group of youths from the Peterboro Collegiate Institute, who distributed literature and handled cars.

An official of the Prohibition forces is authority for the statement that the day's work passed off with very little friction, and that relations between those in favor of a little drink now and then and those antagonistic to any such luxury were quite friendly. This gentleman is of the opinion that the vote polled in the city yesterday does not represent the total strength of adherents to the Prohibition cause, as "many were led astray by the arguments of the Modernationists, particularly with regard to bootleggers, and voted for their cause." The same man compared the stand made by the dry forces yesterday to that of the British troops in France, when they checked the onward march of the victorious Hun. Just so did the men and women engaged in the battle against John Barleycorn check "this retrograde movement."

One gentleman, asked his opinion of the reason why the men who wished for Government Control did not get out in sufficient numbers to nullify the strength of those who voted to a woman almost for Prohibition, thought that the questions submitted were not broad enough to satisfy the men. However that may be, those who bewail the result have only another example of the "irresistible force" exerted by a lady with one idea in her mind.

RAGS

The high-grade writing paper industry is alarmed because rags, from which fine paper is made, are no longer saved by housewives.

This nation of ours once had vast respect for the penny. Children were taught this respect in school. Sermons were preached about it. Editors encouraged it. The mighty penny, alas! has fallen into evil days. With its buying power cut in two, the penny has become a target of indifference. Economy will return as the shoe increasingly pinches. The ragman will again ply his trade.

FOUR BANDITS HANGED TODAY

in which four lives were forfeited.

The enactment of the last act of the grim tragedy in the great stone fortress on the bank of the River Des Prairies, virtually began yesterday afternoon with the commencement of the series of last farewells, between the doomed men and those who were dearest to them in life. With the first suggestion of evening shadows and as the sun sped downward towards the horizon of the western hills for the last time in the experience of those condemned, the near relatives were received for their final leave taking. Mrs. Morel and her two daughters were the first to appear and tney were quickly taken to the death cell of their doomed husband and father, the meeting and the parting was, it was said, affecting in the extreme and some difficulty was encountered as was to be expected in terminating the interview for the first time according to jail officials, Morel seemed to manifest a suggestion of weakening, this however, passed off quickly and from then on, he continued to present the same stalwart front that has marked the entire period of his incarceration. Especially that of his latter days spent in the direct shadow of the scaffold. Mrs. Serafini was brought to Bordeaux from the Fullum street jail, where she is held for trial on a charge of murder arising out of the same case for which her husband was to-day put to death. Her farewell interview with Serafini was marked by evidence on both sides of considerable feeling brought to an end only when the time allotted had expired and it was necessary to terminate the visit. Mrs. Serafini was followed some time later by three brothers of Louis Morel, the erstwhile police athlete, then came a sister of Mrs. Frank and Tony Frank's alleged nephew, the former only was permitted to pass through the outer wall of the immense steel doors.

Inside the central enclosure guards of the prison more than forty in number patrolled given sections in a double line, thus forming a complete ring around the inner portions of jail, took station in the walls or their appointed places in the area of the scaffold. Outside the jail similar patrolling was devised to prevent unauthorized persons from getting anywhere near the building.

The forces thus engaged consisted of upward of a dozen mounted officers of the Montreal police, some forty patrol men and motorcycle officers, some on motorcycles, others in motor police cars, and others on foot, and about thirty members of the provincial police. No portion of the ground contiguous to the prison was ever beyond the range of vision of an officer. The mounted police were assigned to patrol the outer walls. The figures of horse and rider could be seen at intervals of a few yards against the grey stone background, and the glare of searchlights all night long. In order that the vigil might be maintained steadily the guards and police were employed in shifts of four hours each throughout the night.

In the complete silence of the night never once broken but by one passing train, and by the murmur of troubled waters of nearby river—though the question "when?" kept pounding figuratively in one's ears, the strain of waiting was terrific. It was only at a minute or two after five o'clock, just as the first yellow tinge of the new day gave light enough to see it that the silent watchers without observed the black emblem of satisfied justice crept to the flagstaff over the central gateway to the prison. It was even then scarcely discernible, and some unable to sufficiently penetrate the mist and see the tiny flag clinging silently to the staff did not believe the thing they had been waiting for was an accomplished fact.

Presently, however, the bell of the tower of the Bordeaux French Catholic church began a solemn toll. There was no mistaking its significance—it tolled four distinct times.

Almost immediately the great double steel doors opened and in the rising early morning mist a motor car sped down the still lighted driveway, as it passed the small group of watchers below a voice told them "it is all over."

Few people of the curious variety were to be seen about the neighborhood of the jail this morning subsequently to the execution. No trouble or disturbance of any kind marked the approximate twelve-hour vigil of the guardian force, the extra forces being dismissed from duty at 7 o'clock this morning.

Mrs. Frank spent something more than an hour with her husband before her farewell was terminated by order of Governor Seguin. It is understood that Mrs. Davis visited the jail in the afternoon. Mrs. Gambino, whose fight before the Cabinet for commutation of sentence was a losing one, arriving at the portals of the jail at about 9 o'clock. She was permitted entrance with the usual time restrictions which were rigidly enforced, she was accompanied by Mrs. Valentino, who, however, did not enter the jail edifice. Mrs. Frank was the only woman in the case who indicated a persistence in endeavors to see her husband after she had ostensibly left him for the last time at about 7.30 p.m. At quarter after midnight she arrived at the driveway entrance to the prison in a taxicab, accompanied by two other women, and pleaded against the "no admittance" orders of the patrolling guards and constables. She declared Governor Seguin had told her to come back again in a couple of hours, but the officers advised her of the improbability that she would be allowed in the jail again.

But Mrs. Frank was obdurate. She declared she would call at the home of Governor Seguin and seek to enlist the good offices of the Governor's wife in her behalf. However, the police on guard persuaded her to leave the scene. At shortly after four o'clock, however, she was back again with the same request, and it was necessary this time to order her away from the vicinity. This was the only occurrence to interrupt the general quietude of the approach to the jail from the hour of sunset when the cordon of armed men were thrown about the big building in the Guerin Boulevard until the black flag fluttered significantly from the portico of the main gate. Elaborate precautions were taken to completely insure the carrying out of the executions free from any possible interference or untoward happening. It is not considered likely that any penal institution in the country has ever before borne such a resemblance to an armed camp. Almost every yard of the suggested "vulnerable" portions of the great prison were virtually under the constant scrutiny of either a jail guard, a provincial police detective or constable, or a member of the metropolitan police of Montreal. Some one hundred and forty such officers were scattered about inside and outside of the big edifice.

Searchlights Used.

Continual vision of the walls was possible by means of powerful searchlights, mounted at strategic points. The effect of the searchlights was to bring the expanses of the gray stone into sharp relief which, with the dimly illuminated or altogether dark latticed windows, produced an effect at once picturesque, even beautiful to the eye, but ghostly atmosphere of an imaginative mind keyed to a sense of what was happening or about to happen.

Last Minute Reprieve.

In the criminal annals of Canada, this quadruple hanging is said to be unique, and was only at the last moment that Mike Valentino, also sentenced to hang with the others, was reprieved. It was unique in other ways, for there was no bravado in the steady steps to the end. Both Father Mullin and Father Pare were authority for the statement that none of the condemned took either liquor or narcotics to steady themselves for the final plunge.

The hours running up to the finale were freighted with indecision. Valentino had been given the clemency of government; so had Davis. Up and down Boulevard Gouin, cars moved as slowly as the law allowed. Motorcycle police intervened and sped them on their way. And always there was the same interrogation, "Is it over?" Within the jail, the seventy who waited for the execution met strange bedfellows. The orders of the sheriff were that no one would be admitted after midnight. Taking the instructions seriously, most of those who intended to be present got there, but around two o'clock several people were admitted without a pass or any other order from the presiding officer of the court.

Wrote Two Letters.

During the night, Louis Morel wrote two letters, one addressed to "The Journalists," the other to his children. The letter to the Journalists said:

"To my creditors,—I offer you my death in a spirit of reparation for all the sins of my life. I offer you, lastly, my death as an act of perfect Love, as a last act of Love on earth. I pardon all, and implore the Holy Virgin to appease the anger of God, and to preserve Nieri from eternal malediction."—Louis Morel, for the Jornalists."

The second letter read:

"To my children,—I am writing my last thought to you before leaving this earth. My heart is torn by grief and remorse at the miseries I have caused you. I also beg Him to prolong your lives and preserve your souls and your charitable hearts which you have exhibited in giving me the last kiss. I love you, my children, and I pray God to bring you to me in Heaven.—Louis Morel."

It was stated that Serafini had signed a letter thanking the government for the reprieve of Valentino and Davis, and declaring that both were innocent of the crime.

On the very eve of going to the scaffold, Serafini, one of the four bandits to pay the supreme penalty of the law this morning, made a last desperate attempt to avoid his punishment by attempted bribery. Serafini is said to have offered one of the guards the sum of two hundred dollars to aid him in his escape. The guard is now being sought by the Provincial police.

Dan Lorrain, Chief of the Provincial Detectives, confirmed the story of the attempted bribery, although he said the no arrest had yet been made.

Coward To Last.

Serafini, coward to the last, went to the scaffold this morning with his last bit of cowardice on his soul. A few hours before he went to the scaffold he squealed on a guard, telling the prison authorities that a few days ago he had given him two hundred dollars.

What the money was actually for is now being revealed by provincial detectives, but it is presumed it was either to give him poison or to aid in his escape.

Omer Secours was arraigned in police court this afternoon on the charge of having received two hundred dollars from Serafini. He admitted having received two one hundred dollar bills and when asked to explain what he had taken them for he said that Serafini had asked him to see that masses were said for his soul and devote the money to this purpose. Asked whether he had done so and to what priest he had given the money, he replied, after some hesitation, that he had put one hundred in the poor box of one of the city churches and had spent the other hundred dollars in laying in his coal supply.

J. H. Burnham Compliments Women On 'Great Victory'

Interviewed this morning on the plebiscite result, Mr. J. H. Burnham had the following to say:

"The women won a great victory yesterday. Their next victory will be over the ministers in an effort to get into the pulpit."

Ivory white is much more flattering to the average woman than pure white, and is much preferred for frocks. The newest evening gowns have a pinkish glow to them, though they are called white.

RESPONSIBILITY IS LAID ON JARVIS, SR.

Jury Went Out To Consider Verdict Shortly After Noon To-day.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—Jury in the assizes of trial of Peter Smith, former provincial treasurer, Aemilius Jarvis, Sr., Aemilius Jarvis, Jr., and Harry Pepall, charged with conspiracy to defraud the province, went out to consider the verdict shortly after noon after Chief Justice R. M. Meredith and W. N. Tilley, K.C., Crown prosecutor, had taken the morning in reviewing the case.

His Lordship said that the charge simplified meant that the men had tried to cheat the province and he asked what Jarvis, Sr., had done that he should get such a large sum. He had risked none of his money in buying bonds in England and the banker there had done real work. He told the jury that it must be satisfied that Peter Smith got securities or part of them. "If he did not get them Andrew Pepall could prove it, but Smith has not the benefit of Pepall's evidence. If he received bonds from some one else, why has he not brought that party here to say so."

Tilley said Smith went to the government with a lie on his lips and deceit in his heart. The elder Jarvis was responsible for the whole deal, he said.

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

by Shirley Sharon

Skirts this Autumn are to be shorter, but the length is left to the discretion—or indiscretion—of the individual.

The French dressmakers are making their early Autumn models as narrow as women can wear them and as short as they will wear them. The length is largely a matter of what you like and what suits you, keeping in mind that to a reasonable degree the shorter a skirt is the smarter it looks. Nine or ten inches from the ground is the usual length, and sports clothes and dancing-frocks are often fourteen from the floor. The straight beltless dresses, sheaths of black or brown or dark-blue cashmere or twills, fitted close to the hip as possible and worn quite short are extraordinarily slim and youthful looking.

STUDENTS PLAY OSHAWA'S SQUAD

Collegiate Rugby Team's First League Game On Saturday.

HERE ON NOV. 1ST.

The P.C.I. Rugby Team play their first League game to-morrow afternoon at Alexandra Park, Oshawa, when they will meet the fast Oshawa High School squad. This game that will pry the lid off the Central Ontario group of the Interscholastic League, promises to be a bang-up affair.

Mr. Browne and his P.C.I. team have been in a quandary the last few weeks over the Rugby situation in the central group. Everything looked rosy for a big year of Rugby with lots of games and plenty of stiff opposition. The locals were shaping up into a real Rugby machine. The first game was to be with Lindsay Collegiate. But Lindsay heard of the strength of Coach Browne's youths, so Lindsay fell out, leaving only Oshawa High School and the local school in the group.

Oshawa had rounded up a high-class team and were bound they weren't going to lack experience or practice, so they set in to hook up a string of exhibition fixtures with the best teams ot the Toronto High School League.

Oshawa have played many games now but they still desired more seasoning and to-morrow's game was forced upon them by the O.R.F.U., and Mr. Browne's efforts, much against their will or hopes. Oshawa showed such lack of desire to meet the locals that the P.C.I. coach had Kingston C. I. raked in to play, and the Limestone squad were all prepared to step into the breach and play the first game of a home and home series here to-morrow.

However, Oshawa changed their mind with the aid mentioned and the series was arranged. Oshawa will play a return game here on November 1, and this ought to be a red letter day for the local Rugby fans who will be out in droves to see the struggle at the Riverside park. In this series games are to count and not as usual in Rugby series, points.

Coach Browne has had his husky hopefuls hopping and pushing all over the Oval three times a week, and they are all in perfect condition and ready to stand the bumps of the most severe game. The coach saw the Varsity-Queen's battle in which the tricolour won 8 to 2 last Saturday, and he carried home more than the result of the game. He has coached the team in a great many new plays and the fans will get an eyeful of trick plays, but in the main the locals will stick to their mode of defence and attack used last season with such good results. Each member of the team has added weight and experience. "Allie" Bookhout, the locals yard-gaining half, tips 'em at only 190 now. He and Cole make a fast pair.

Mr. Browne is confident and is discouraging any Oshawa plans for a third game. He has ordered the P.C.I. twelve to step into the game with the best they have from the first whistle. The squad had their final grooming this afternoon in the Central Park, and are all set for the first encounter.

But P.C.I. are not the only confident ones. Oshawa are betting their uniforms that they will out-point the P.C.I. to-morrow. They, too, have improved vastly, and their games, in which they have always been victors, will not prove wasted.

The winner of the series will play Kingston for Eastern honours.

The success of the Mercantile League last year should be equaled and even bettered this year. Three new teams have entered and they promise to provide reall rivalry for the other outfits.

PECK CUP FINAL ON SATURDAY

Canadian Woollens and the Thistles Meet at the Oval.

KICK OFF AT 2.30.

The soccer bill for Saturday afternoon is the Peck Cup final between the Canadian Woollens and the Thistle at Nicholls Oval. The kick off is timed for 2.30 o'clock and the referee is Mr. Jack Clark.

Last year the Woollens won the Peck Trophy from the G.W.V.A. by two goals to one and intend holding it for another season because it is the first silverware that they have ever won while the Thistle never had this cup in their possession but they have full confidence in winning another trophy, no doubt, they will have a full team out, in spite of the fact that Jackson has been laid up with a severe injury since the Quaker game three weeks past.

This cup tie game should have been played on Labour Day and in all probability the President of the Trades and Labour Council will present the cup to the winner at the finish.

DOLAN TO SUE JUDGE LANDIS

Describes Interview With Judge Which Nearly Resulted in Blows.

PRESS HIS CASE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press).—"Cozy" Dolan took another step Thursday in his fight to clear himself of charges that he was implicated with Jimmy O'Connell in the attempt to bribe Heinie Sand, Philadelphia shortstop.

In the office of his counsel, W. J. Fallon, who intends to bring suit against Commissioner Landis and organized baseball, Dolan re-enacted the scene of the examination by Landis and related his version of conversation which took place at the hearing which resulted in his banishment. The former Giant coach reiterated his denial of any knowledge of the alleged bribery deal, and reasserted his innocence of any wrong-doing. Dolan also disclosed almost ended in blows when he became involved in a heated verbal exchange with the Commissioner.

"Landis rushed across the room, pointed a finger at me and exclaimed, 'Dolan, you are guilty'," the former coach declared in recounting the details of what took place during the Commissioner's closing examination.

"I am guilty! I don't remember anything about it," Dolan said he replied.

"We stood facing each other and Landis apparently interpreted my attitude as threatening him and he said:

"'If you came here looking for a fight, get out'."

After Dolan had been quizzed for an hour by a score of newspapermen, Fallon declared he would press his legal efforts to clear Dolan, restore him to good standing in baseball and obtain his share of the world's series money. He said he expected to file papers within three or four days.

WORLD SERIES UNCOVERED TWO BRILLIANT RIVALS AT THIRD

Fred Lindstrom and Osee Bluege Performed In Great Style In World Series—Lindstrom Proved a Big Surprise In Groh's Place.

BY BILLY EVANS

Those fortunate enough to have attended the 1924 world series saw two of the greatest young players in the big leagues in action.

I have reference to Fred Lindstrom of the New York Giants and Osee Bluege of the Washington Nationls.

It is a bit of coincidence that both these players should star at third base.

Lindstrom essayed to fill the shoes of the great Heinie Groh and did it so well that no one, not even the Giants, missed the highly valuable Groh.

In the field the work of Lindstrom could not have been improved upon. Groh, in his palmy days, never played a better defensive game at third base. During the series Lindstrom made a dozen remarkable fielding plays.

At the bat he was a huge surprise. Known to be a clever fielder, no one was greatly surprised by his brilliant work in that department Expected to be just so-so at the bat, he was one of the most consistent hitters of the series.

Against Walter Johnson, Lindstrom did his best work at the bat, getting four hits in one game. It was the sensational batting of this youngster, who was born about the time that Johnson broke into the majors, that did more than anything else to upset Johnson.

Taking the place of Heinie Groh, who invariably plays his best in the pinch, was a big task for the 18-year-old boy but he more than delivered.

Like Lindstrom, Bluege, a great third baseman, was called upon to substitute for the star of the series, Roger Peckinpaugh. Bluege, a marvel at third, was forced to shift over to shortstop in four of the games. He came through with flying colors. Bluege is one of the best fielding third basemen in the majors, not excepting Joe Dugan of the Yankees. He is not a great hitter but always dangerous with runners on the bases. Incidentally Bluege, with the free swing he uses, should develop into a much better batsman than he has so far shown.

Unquestionably two of the outstanding stars of the big show were the rival third sackers, Lindstrom and Bluege.

In a few years these same young men will be much discussed baseball celebrities.

CRICKET SCORE IN FIRST GAME

White Sox Beat Giants By 16 to 11 in Opening Game in Europe.

ENGLISH REPORT.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press).—A crowd of more than 2,500 yesterday witnessed the opening European exhibition game between the Chicago White Sox and the New York Giants. The Sox won by a score of 16 to 11. The game was played at the Everton Football Grounds.

This is the way a British press agency described the game:

"Many who had not previously witnessed a ball game were astounded by the prodigious hitting of the American batsmen, the ball frequently falling into the stands. The play was exceedingly fast, but the smart fielding of the Chicago side was the downfall of the New Yorkers. The latter held the lead until the sixth inning, but the Sox gathered four runs in the sixth to lead by 7 to 6.

"The seventh inning gave the Sox the most commanding lead of 16 runs to 7, but they failed to increase this in the following two innings, where the Giants put on four additional runs to be beaten by five runs. Mostil of the Sox, playing at left field, made some wonderful catches in the outfield. On one occasion he had to lean over the barrier in an attempt to hold the ball.

"Ruel was the outstanding batsman. He often drove the ball among the spectators in the stands. Kamm, at right field, also played a fine game, while Robertson was the best of the pitchers."

HIGHT TO GET SANITY TEST.

Court Acts on Plea That Minister in Poison Plot Is Defective.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Oct. 24.—Judge J. C. Kern granted a motion by counsel for Lawrence M. Hight, former clergyman, for an inquiry into his sanity before he pleads to the indictments charging him with the murder by poison of his wife and Wilford Sweetin.

The affidavit filed in support of the motion alleged that Hight was "a mental defective and insane, and incapable of pleading to the indictment."

"The defendant has at this time no finances whatever," the affidavit said, "and is without means whereby to employ competent and expert medical men."

As an evidence of the "weakened mental state" of Hight, the affidavit charged that "he has allowed himself to become almost totally under the influence of the State's attorney," and had discussed the charges against him with the State's attorney, "not realizing that the State's attorney was bending every effort to present a case against him, and try to convict him and cause him to be hung."

ALLOWS TRADE BY ALDERMEN

Appeal Against Disqualification of Leeds Aldermen Was Sustained.

LAW RELAXED.

LONDON, Oct. 24. — (Canadian Press Cable.)—The court of appeal yesterday by a majority decision allowed the appeal of Alderman Braithwaite of Leeds against the judgment of the late Justice Bailhache, of the King's bench division of the high court of justice, disqualifying the alderman from service as a member of the city council of Leeds because he had running contracts with the Leeds municipal corporation.

Lord Justice Sir John Bankes of the court of appeal said that an historical survey of legislation on the matter seemed to show the importance of securing prominent persons to serve in municipal life, so it was necessary despite opportunities which might be given for mal practices to relax to a very considerable extent the stringency of the original disqualifying provisions of the act bearing on the case in question. In the present instance, his lordship pointed out, there was no charge of bad faith made against the alderman.

Municipalities throughout Great Britain were greatly perplexed last August by the decision given by Justice Bailache (since deceased) to the effect that it was illegal for directors of companies to trade with public bodies, such as municipal corporations of which they were members.

This decision was given in Alderman Braithwaite's case, a citizen of Leeds having taken proceedings against him because he was a director of a firm which had large contracts with the Leeds municipality. The plaintiff made no suggestion of anything improper in connection with the case, but admitted that Leeds stood to benefit by the contracts in question.

It was asserted at the time that if the judgment were confirmed on appeal it would have the effect of driving good men from service on such bodies as town councils. Two aldermen of Leeds resigned as a result of the Bailhache decision.

The appeal against the disqualification of Alderman Braithwaite was taken on behalf of other municipalities as well as Leeds, as all the municipalities were more or less affected by the Bailhache judgment.

LOCAL CRICKETERS MET ON WEDNESDAY

Charlie Thorpe Selected as the Best All Round Cricketer for the Season.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the Peterborough Cricket Club was held on Wednesday evening, and plans made for the coming year. Owing to inroads of other sports, cricket has been more of a dead issue for years, but the past season showed signs of considerable promise, and indications are that this line of sport is once more coming into its own. A discussion took place as to the advisability of purchasing a "home" and it is likely that this will be done, providing a suitable site can be obtained.

During the evening Mr. A. Coutts, the retiring president, announced that he intended to present a bat to the best all-round cricketer for the season, who turned out to be the popular vice-captain, Charlie Thorpe.

Election of officers for next season resulted as follows: G. R. Langley, President; R. A. Stuart, Vice-President; P. Manning, Secretary-treasurer; C. Thorpe, Captain; G. Coutts, Vice-captain; W. R. Fox, Chairman, Publicity Committee; W. Stocker, Chairman, Entertainment Committee, and H. Foster, Chairman, Grounds and Equipment Committee.

There is every likelihood of a large membership next year; arrangements are now being made to provide a suitable fixture list and it is the earnest desire of the executive to welcome any person to membership who can, or is interested in, cricket.

It is unanimously agreed that with the enthusiasm displayed at the meeting that the rejuvenation of the Peterborough Cricket Club is complete.

BELAND SAYS IT MEETS EVERY TEST

Insurance Man Gives Tanlac Credit For Restoring Health.

"In my case Tanlac has accomplished what seemed impossible," recently declared Ernest Beland, a well known insurance man, 523 Chambly St., Montreal, P.Q., Canada.

"Last winter I was taken down with grippe and at the end of two months in spite of all that could be done, I was so completely wrecked that my friends nor myself thought I would ever get well. For weeks I could not sleep except by the use of opiates, and the pains combined with shortness of breath, choking sensations and a nagging cough, made life almost unbearable.

"Two bottles of Tanlac improved me so I was able to get up and move about the house, and by the time I had finished my seventh bottle my recovery was complete, and I was able to return to my work. My appetite has come back in full force. I sleep good, have put on 11 lbs., and feel fine in every way. Tanlac is priceless."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

ST. JAMES' MISSION.

Large Number Attend the Meetings Each Evening —Good Results.

The mission being conducted in St. James Church continues to attract an ever-increasing number, and deepened interest, congregations interested in the message of the missioner, Rev. John E. Brown. On Wednesday evening Rev. Mr. Brown gave a stirring address on "Booze," which was of special interest in view of the impending vote in Ontario on the temperance issue. Last evening his message was on "Prayer, Its Place and Power in the Life of the Christian." Out of a wealth of personal experience he pressed home in striking and vivid language the power of prayer in the individual life.

Mr. Brown will speak on Saturday evening on "The Prodigal of Today," and on Sunday, in addition to the regular services, will give an address at a men's mass meeting in St. James Church at 4 p.m. The subject will be "The King of Lion Tamers." All men are invited to hear this address.

MENUS FOR A FAMILY

Breakfast—Stewed dried apricots, codfish balls, milk toast, cocoa, coffee.

Luncheon — Potato and cheese soup, whole wheat bread and butter, apple charlotte, milk, tea.

Dinner—Tomato bisque, baked haddock, scalloped potatoes, fried peppers, cabbage-apple and celery salad, steamed graham pudding, milk, coffee, hot rolls, butter, honey, oatmeal bread for children.

Dried apricots should be washed through many waters and soaked over night in cold water to more than cover. This water should be drained off and the fruit should be simmered in boiling water "to cover" until tender. Of course, if it's more convenient you can "soak" the apricots for six or eight hours during the day and simmer them for two hours while you are getting dinner. But dried apricots must be allowed to stand in water for several hours to remove the preparation used to prevent discoloration during drying.

WONDER PICTURE COMING TO GRAND

"The Lost Tribe" Is One of the Best of its Kind Ever Produced.

"Direct from New York's latest and greatest picture palace, the Piccadilly, to the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, for the first showing in Canada."

That seems a pretty big statement from a press agent, and what is probably more interesting, it is quite true."

Captain Hurley's great wonder picture, "The Lost Tribe," will be shown here for three days at the Grand, starting Monday, November 3rd, and will then continue upon a coast to coast tour.

"The Lost Tribe," discovered in New Guinea, by Captain Hurley, has been the subject of more magazine and newspaper articles during the past few months than has all the motion pictures ever made in Holywood. They are the first pictures ever taken of a primitive and savage people whose chief occupation is cannibalism and head-hunting. Capt. Hurley descended upon these people, who are thought to be the lost tribe of Israel, by seaplane. The head-hunters thought that it was a strange bird coming to them from the gods. Never was such thrilling adventures recorded by the camera. After months of diligence, Captain Hurley only made slow progress towards friendliness, but with the confidence secured he began to film their daily life, social and religious customs, marriage ceremonies, and every intensely interesting feature of an honest-to-goodness headhuntre.

There is a thrill in every foot of film, something weird and daring every minute.

Fantastic music, secured by phonograph by Hurley, from the native orchestras, accompany the picture.

"The Lost Tribe," unlike many pictures taken in foreign lands, has an interest to the entire community. These native headhunters have their flappers and Valentinos, their stunt men and daredevils, just like our own film casts. They have more thrills to the foot than any wild and woolly western serial ever had.

Captain Hurley will be remembered in Canada as the official photographer with Shackleton at the South Pole and with General Allenby in Egypt and Palestine.

"The Lost Tribe" is so unlike any picture ever seen in Canada that is worthy of the attention of every man, woman and child, and it will prove equally interesting to all.

IN MEMORIAM.

LADLEY—In loving memory of my dear sister, Mrs. T. B. Ladley, who departed this life October 24, 1922.

Her memory is as dear today
As in the hour she passed away.
The happy hours we once enjoyed
How sweet their memory still,
But death has left a vacant place
The world can never fill.

—Inserted by Her Loving Sister, Ellen Werry.

IN MEMORIAM.

WEAVER—In ever-loving memory of our dear father, Mr. Robert Weaver, who died October 24th, 1923:

Fresh in our hearts your memory clings,
Yet ourhearts are sore,
But each passing year will nearer bring,
The day we shall meet once more.
We little thought when we said "Good Bye,"
As we parted, dear father, that you were to die,
Grief that we felt words cannot tell,
For we could not be near you, to bid you farewell.
Our lips cannot tell how we miss you,
Our hearts cannot tell what to say,
But God only knows how we miss you
In our home that is lonely to-day.
Friends may think we have forgot you,
When at times they see us smile,
But they little know the sorrow
Which that smile hides all the while.

—Sadly missed by wife and family.

IN MEMORIAM.

WEAVER—In loving remembrance of our dear brother, Robert Weaver, who passed away, October 24, 1923.

Rest in peace; your pain is ended,
Sleep in peace, your cares are done,
You have gone where those that love you,
Soon are coming, one by one.

—Father, sisters and brothers.

PAT RAFFERTY IN "ACE HIGH," AT THE GRAND TO-NIGHT AND TO-MORROW.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

"ACE-HIGH."

Even the excitement of plebiscite night, could not offer a counter-attraction of sufficient potency to detract a fraction from the drawing power of Captain Plunkett and his Dumbells, and the Grand was crowded to capacity last evening by an audience eager to welcome the favorite entertainers in their sixth annual revue, "Ace High." With "Red" Newman and "Jock" Holland back with their old "mob," after a season on their own, the Dumbell cast is an all-star assemblage, and "Ace High" indicates that the Plunkett touch has lost none of its cunning, for here is a swift moving attraction, full of music and comedy, richly staged, and bright as a new Canadian nickel.

The old appeal of the Dumbells is retained, in spite of the fact that every number is new, and some of the features entirely different from other Plunkett revues.

The high light of the performance is, of course, Capt. Plunkett's orchestra, with the captain wielding the baton, and Harold Rich at the piano. The 1924 organization is the very essence of jazz, and good as were the other Dumbell orchestras, the new arrangement must be awarded the palm. They scored heavily last night in such numbers as "Pine House Blues," "June Night," "Stop Henrietta," a jazz version of Ridley's "Souvenir," and the amusing "Horsey, Keep Your Tail Up!" While interpolated in the orchestra specialties were Captain Plunkett's new song hit "Sally," a kid song, "Gee, I wish I were a Kid again" by the Plunkett Brothers, and "The Bells of St. Mary's," by Jock Holland and Al. Plunkett. The orchestra's work "stopped the show," and Captain Plunkett had to acknowledge the applause by a brief word of thanks, during which he expressed regret at the absence through illness of Ross Hamilton from the cast.

Al. Plunkett has some new songs in "Ace High," that promise to equal in popularity his better known numbers. He made a big hit in his "If I can't sing about Mammy, I Won't Sing at All," song, and "Shall I Have it Bobbed or Shingled?" was equally as successful. "Pum, Yum, Yum, Yum," has latest number, was a typical Al. Plunkett number, sung as only he can.

The favourite Red Newman went over big in his comedy song, "The Photo of the Girl I Left Behind," and he put a lot of patriotic fervor in "Don't Let Them Scrap the British Navy," the singing and sentiment of which drew tremendous applause. In addition "Red" was his own immortal self in a couple of funny skits in which Stan. Bennett and Pat Rafferty were of great assistance.

Bennett, in his old Vere de Vere part, has lost none of his power as a fun-maker. His work in the skits and his two songs "The Hussars," and a comic cowboy number, were most cleverly done.

Pat Rafferty made his usual hit, and contributed a burlesque Spanish serenade that was as funny as his "Gay Mountaineer" effort of last season.

Upon Jock Holland much of the impersonation work of "Ace High" falls, and he is equal to the task, both in his characterizations and his singing. Holland has two or three numbers and they are all good.

Morley Plunkett, Ben Allen and Jimmy Devon are well remembered members of the Dumbells, who are a big help to the latest productions, while Glen Allen, a new-comer, does some most effective dancing.

There is a spectacular opening to the new revue, and the closing scene, a cabaret number, is equally striking. The costumes and stage settings throughout, are lavish, and altogether "Ace High" will rank as one of the best of the Plunkett productions. Canadian play-goers need no further reference than that.

The Dumbells will be the attraction at the Grand again to-night and at two performances to-morrow, and indications point to record business for all performances.

AT THE CAPITOL.

CAPITOL HAS STRONG DRAMA OF TRUE LIFE

Virginia Valli Supported by Rockliffe Fellowes and Wallace Beery

"The Signal Tower," Universal-super-Jewel starring Virginia Valli will be given its initial showing at the Capitol theatre to-day, is a photoplay that sends the spectators homeward wondering just how many families there is in this land whose story might have furnished the material for this drama.

"True to nature" when applied to this drama, may be a "nature" that most persons have no real knowledge about. It is true not all of us are railroad employees destined to carry on their duties in a lonely stretch of forest, but all know quite well what the joys and tragedies are that enter the homes of the average in this country.

"The Signal Tower" was directed by Clarence L. Brown and he has achieved success in two ways: one in the convincing ability of his characterizations and the other in the reality of the externals. The vital dramatic interval of the story is set in the swirling environment of a storm at night within a mighty forest. A train wreck comes to add its chaos to the tormented mind of a man who believes that by devotion to his task—that of saving the lives of those who ride by rail—he would wreck forever the happiness of his home.

Valli's Most Appealing Role

Miss Valli never has been seen on the screen in a more appealing role than that of Sally Tolliver, wife of a man who works in the signal tower of a railroad that runs through a lonely forest.

But there is no loneliness in the home life of this family of three—father, mother and child. Neither is there tragedy until the coming of a third man, also a signal tower man, who, against the desires of the wife, is taken into the family.

The story that develops from then on is just as true as is the story of the happy days that come before. Throughout the picture is full of human touches that appeal.

The cast includes Rockliffe Fellowes, Wallace Beery, Frankie Darro, a child actor who goes through his part as though it were [illegible] "doing things" for James O. Barrows, Dot Farley and J. Farrell MacDonald.

"The Signal Tower" is a photoplay that should not be missed.

AT THE ROYAL.

RADIO AND "DEATH RAY" FEATURES IN LATEST PARAMOUNT PRODUCTION.

"Story Without a Name," Featuring Agnes Ayres and Antonio Moreno, Shows How Latter "Invention" Works.

The inventor of the new "death ray" which European governments have been bargaining for, has nothing on Antonio Moreno.

Moreno has a ray all of his own and while it may not be as diabolical as the other, it is causing him just about as much trouble daily at the Royal Theatre.

How come? you say. Well, here's the story.

This week at the Royal Moreno is jumping from desert island, to yacht, to schooner, to tug and back to desert island, trying to dodge his pursuers. There are as many people trying to get Moreno's invention as there are on the trail of the one which has been given so much publicity in the press of late. The only difference is that Mr. Moreno's foes are all motion picture actors.

Now the cat's out of the bag! For the feature at the Royal Theatre now is the Irvin Willat Paramount production, "The Story Without a Name," the screen version of Arthur Stringer's Photoplay Magazine prize-title story for which over two million and a half fans submitted suggestions for a title. $5,000 in cash and three de luxe radio receiving outfits are awarded the winners.

In the screen story those attempting to make Tony's life as miserable as possible are Tyrone Power, as the spy who attempts to learn the secrets of Holt's (Moreno) jealously-guarded apparatus for his own country; Maurice Costello, Louis Wolheim and Ivan Linow, all members of Drakma's (Power) rum-running crew. And to make Tony's work even more difficult there is a girl in the case—none other than the beautiful Agnes Ayres, if you please. Between trying to protect the girl from these blackguards and saving the "death ray," Moreno's life during the filming of "The Story Without a Name" was a strenuous one to say the least.

The story is one of a young scientist and his assistant who, while experimenting for the U. S. government, perfect a machine, which, by the long distance projection of electric rays, will destroy life. The picture opens with the first actual test of the machine. It is a success. The inventor is packing the fragile instrument into its carrying case to submit to government officials at Washington when Drakma and his gang of cut-throats enter. There's a wild fight during which the girl, rather than have the priceless invention fall into enemy hands, destroys the machine. She and the inventor are taken prisoners and the latter placed on an island to do all over again what the girl has undone, in other words, rebuild the triangulator, as the "death day" machine is technically called. And to hasten the work along, the girl is placed on one of the spy's rum-running ships, there to stay until Alan Holt has finished his job. This is Drakma's clever scheme to hasten the work along.

How Holt finally foils the schemers, their rescue by a battleship, etc., constitute one of the most gripping stories that have yet reached the screen.

FREE FALSE FACES FOR KIDDIES AT ROYAL SATURDAY AT 2.30 P.M.

A large shipment of the best false faces obtainable have been at the Royal the last three weeks, awaiting the approach of Hallowe'en. The quality of these false faces should be seen to be appreciated. They are now on display in the theatre window on George Street. Every child will be given one free tomorrow at 2.30.

ANDY GUMP AT ROYAL.

Another of the clever Andy Gump comedies was shown at the Royal last night, and for the balance of the week.

AT THE REGENT.

BEVERLY BAYNE IN NEW PICTURE

Beverly Bayne is determined now to keep in touch with the theatre-going public after her long absence. In "Her Marriage Vow," the first picture after her return to the screen, in which she starred with Monte Blue, her characterization proved that she had lost none of her screen charm and ability as an emotional actress since her departure. Her portrayal of the leading feminine role was strangely reminiscent of "Dear Old Girl."

A second picture has quickly followed the first. This time is is "The Tenth Woman," a screen version of the novel of the same name by Harriet T. Comstock, now being shown at the Regent Theatre.

Willa Brookes attempts suicide and is rescued by Barry Compton, a ranch owner, with whom Willa falls in love. On a trip east, Barry renews his acquaintance with Rose Ann (a married flapper) who is always looking for excitement. After one of many quarrels with her husband, she decides to go to Barry's ranch, where she arrives before he does. Meanwhile Willa comes to the conclusion that Rose Ann is Barry's sweetheart, and loses no time in making plans to go away. Barry returns, finds Rose Ann repentant, and learns too that Willa has just gone away. He follows her and for the second time saves her life when he rescues her from her runaway horse. He takes her home—and well, you will like the ending.

Beverley Bayne takes the part of Willa Brookes, June Marlowe is Rose Ann; John Roche is Barry Compton. Others in the cast are: Raymond McKee, Charles "Buddy" Post, and Gilbert Holmes.

James Flood is the director. Julien Josephson is the scenarist. It is a Warner Bros. Classic of the screen.

ROWDY DISTURBERS ATTACKED LABORITE

Stephen Kelly Struck on the Head With Lead Pipe and Knocked Unconscious.

LONDON, Oct. 24. — (Canadian Press).—The worst of a series of rowdy disturbances which have marked the British Election Campaign occurred last night at Greenock, where Laborite candidate councillor Stephen Kelly, while holding a street meeting, was attacked by a gang of Roughs, kicked on head with lead pipe and knocked unconscious.

A fierce fight followed between Kelly's adherants and attackers apparently supporters of rival candidate, a communist. Kelly's speaking engagements have been cancelled.

SOVIET PROPAGANDA IN BRITAIN URGING REVOLT OF PROLETARIAT DENOUNCED BY THE GOVERNMENT

Secret Letter From Zinovieff With Reply of Protest and Rebuke Issued By Foreign Office For Publication—Bolsheviki Appealed To British Communists To Secure Ratification of Anglo-Russian Treaty.

PROPAGANDA VIOLATES PROMISES SOVIETS MADE TO THE GOVERNMENT

"To Extend Ideas Of Leninism in England and Her Colonies" the Object of Letter to British Communist Party.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The British Government is again in conflict with the Russian Soviet Government on the question of propaganda, according to correspondence issued by the Foreign Office last night for publication in today's newspapers. In a letter signed "in the absence of the Secretary of State" by one of the permanent officials of the Foreign Office, J. T. Gregory, and addressed to Christian Rakovsky, the Russian Charge D'Affaires in London, attention is drawn to an accompanying copy of a letter received by the central committee of the British Communist party from M. Zinovieff, President of the Committee of the Communist Internationale, dated August 15.

"This letter," says the communication of Mr. Gregory, "contains instructions to British subjects to work for the violent overthrow of existing institutions in this country and for the subversion of His Majesty's armed forces as a means to that end. It is my duty to inform you that His Majesty's Government cannot allow this propaganda and must regard it as direct interference from the outside in British democratic affairs."

Revolution Encouraged.

Mr. Gregory then proceeds to point the intimate connection of the Communist Internationale with the Soviet Government and declares that no British Government ever will tolerate an arrangement with a foreign Government by which the latter while in correct formal diplomatic relations at the same time allows such a propagandist body to encourage and even order plotting and revolution.

"Such conduct," the letter of Mr. Gregory continues, "is not only a grave departure from the rules of international comity, but a violation of the specific and solemn undertakings repeatedly given to His Majesty's Government."

Mr. Gregory then at length alludes to the recently concluded treaty of agreement with the Soviet Government, and declares that the British Government intends that the undertakings in the agreement shall be carried out both in letter and spirit. He argues that if the Soviet Government has the power to make such agreements it should see that they are carried out and that "other parties are not deceived."

"I should be obliged," says Mr. Gregory's letter in conclusion, "if you would be good enough to let me have the observations of your Government on this subject without delay."

Communist Appeal.

Accompanying the letter of Mr. Gregory is a copy of M. Zinovieff's letter, which is endorsed "very secret." This communication which contains more than a thousand words, urges British Communists to continue to apply pressure so as to insure that the Bourgeoisie campaign to prevent ratification of the recently concluded Anglo-Russian treaty shall not succeed and to exercise similar pressure in British Government and parliamentary circles in favor of ratification of the treaty.

The Zinovieff letter represents the Government of Premier MacDonald as having been compelled by the Extremists of the Labor party to conclude the treaty and advocates "a campaign of disclosure of the foreign policy of MacDonald," which Zinovieff says represents "an inferior copy of the policy of the Curzon Government."

Urging "comrades" to strain every nerve to secure ratification of the treaty, Zinovieff in the letter observes that "the settlement of the relations between the two countries will assist in the revolutionizing of the international and the British proletariat no less than a successful rising in any of the working districts of England, as the establishment of close contact between the British and the Russian proletariat will make it possible for us to extend and develop the propaganda of the ideas of Leninism in England and her colonies."

Declaring that armed warfare must be preceded by a struggle against the inclinations to compromise, which are declared to be imbedded in a majority of the British workmen and against the ideas of evolution and the peaceful extermination of capitalism, Zinovieff says that only then will it be possible to count on the complete success of an armed insurrection.

Bore Within the Army.

The letter further complains that agitation and propaganda work in the British army and navy are weak and suggests the desirability of having "cells" in every unit to rectify this weakness. It also suggests that in the event of danger of war these "cells" could, with the aid of the transport workers, paralyze all military preparations and make a start toward turning an imperialist war into a class war.

Zinovieff suggests also the forming of a military section of the British Communist party and attracting to it talented military specialists who, for one reason or another, have left the military service and hold Socialist views.

SHOE INDUSTRY STILL IN SLUMP

Canadian Production Declined 600,000 Pairs in 1923—No Improvement Yet.

IMPORTS A FACTOR.

MONTREAL, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The Canadian shoe manufacturers have given an emphatic and positive denial to the report from Ottawa that more shoes were made in Canada last year than in 1922. According to a statement issued by the Canadian Shoe Manufacturers Association, they declare that, on the contrary, the 1923 production was less than of the preceding year by at least 600,000 pair.

The shoe manufacturers' association of Canada has been in communication with bureau of statistics in this connection and has informed the Dominion statistician that the shoe manufacturers are certain that the figures issued from Ottawa are seriously in error and grossly at variance with the facts.

It is admitted that the mistake may have occurred in some of the reports which have been made to the government by the individual firms.

The decline in the value of the out put of the Canadian shoe manufacturing industry last year was even greater relatively than the reduction in the number of pairs made by the Canadian factories.

Production for the current year to date shows no improvement over the situation last year. The falling off in Canadian production is attributed to lessened domestic demand and to the sharp increase in importations, particularly of shoes from the United Kingdon.

MEXICO SEPARATED FROM GREAT BRITAIN

Grave Step is the Outcome of the Murder of Mrs. Rosalie Evans.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—Mexico has broken relations with Great Britain, Foreign office announces withdrawal of all consuls from England. The Mexican Government takes this step owing to lack of diplomatic relations between the two countries.

This grave step on the part of the Mexican government is the result of charges made by district attorney of sale of Puebla, against military attache of Great Britain captain Holicombe, who is accused of trying to bribe prisoners now held and accused or murder of Mrs. Rosalie Evans.

FINE IS COLLECTIVE.

Either Jarvis or Smith Can Pay the $600,000 Fine.

LONDON, Ont., October 25. — Chief Justice R. M. Meredith stated to the Free Press this morning that the six hundred thousand dollars fine he imposed on Peter Smith and Aemelius Jarvis, Senior, was a collective one.

"I do not care who pays it," he said, "Jarvis or Smith."

Before sailing he promised to return in 1926 and friends of the Prince intimate that his next visit will be more of a self-educating mission than a pleasure jaunt. He is anxious to study the people and politics of the United States, they say. Next year he goes to South Africa.

ELECTION HITS COTTON TRADE IN LANCASHIRE

Business Just Recovering From Depression When Political Bomb Was Exploded.

CLYNE'S CHANCE.

Labor Government Leader Will Likely Be Elected In Triangular Contest.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The special correspondent of the Canadian Press in reviewing the position of the Manchester district in the present political struggle emphatically declares that nobody engaged in business there wanted an election, which probably accounts for the fact that very little election talk is heard on the steps of the Manchester Exchange. Lancashire, of course, lives mainly on its experts of cotton piece goods, which amounted last year to 138,000,000 pounds. After the long spell of depression, trade was beginning to pick up nicely when the election bombshell exploded.

Manchester has four triangular fights which will form the cockpit of the election with, in addition, one four cornered contest in Withington where the sitting Liberal, H. D. Simon, well known commercially and locally; an old Conservative opponent, Dr. Watts; a rising young barrister named Kenneth Burke, who is running as an independent, and a Labor candidate, Edgar Whiteley, are struggling for the right to represent the constituency in the House of Commons.

Clynes Heckled.

J. R. Clynes, who rose from a milliboy to Government leader in the House of Commons, is being opposed by a Liberal and a Conservative. In time gone by of all Manchester members of Parliament Jack Clynes has been one of the most favored, but this time he is meeting with considerable heckling, and the general impression is that if he had been engaged in a straight fight with the Conservative candidate, F. H. Holmes, he would go to the wall. The incursion of the Liberal candidate, however, may save him.

Horton Barclay, one of Manchester's foremost business men, who won the Exchange division for Liberalism at the last general election, has a Conservative opponent in E. B. Fielden, who is as well known as Barclay in commercial circles in Manchester. The division is mainly a business one and includes the stock and coal exchanges. As the candidates have nothing to quarrel over in the Russian loan, Mr. Barclay has raised the old issue of free trade. His action in doing so does not appear as popular as might have been expected, for the electors have told him that the tariff question is not concerned with the present issue. If Barclay goes back to Parliament apparently it will not be because he insisted on free trade as an issue in the fight, but because of his personal popularity.

Rusholme Seat.

In Rusholme, which Chas. Masterman captured from the Conservatives at the last election, he is endeavoring to hold the seat for the Liberals, and W. Paul, who fought the riding in the Labor interest last year, is standing as an avowed Communist, and notwithstanding the ban on Communism by the Labor party, he has received the official approval of the local Labor caucus. Paul has undoubted brilliance, but what he failed to do in the last election as a Labor candidate he is unlikely to accomplish now as an extremist, for Rusholme is "highly respectable" and indeed at one time was deemed a safe Tory seat.

Col. J. Nall has a stiff task in Hulme to hold the seat for the Conservatives. Moss Side will almost certainly return T. R. Ackroyd, the retiring Liberal, and the Gorton division will again return J. Compton, Labor, but the result in Blackley is doubtful, for instead of a straight fight between a Liberal and a Conservative the seat is also being attacked by Labor. However, B. M. Oliver, Liberal, had a majority of nearly 5,000 at the last general election.

FASCIST HOLIDAY.

Oct. 28 Second Anniversary of March on Rome.

ROME, Oct. 25. — (Canadian Press).—Premier Mussolini has ordered that October 28, the second anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome, shall be observed as a national fete day. All the public offices will be beflagged and illuminated and the civil servants, judges and students are to be given a holiday.

UNION REQUEST FOR SHORT DAY IN PULP MILLS

Forty-eight Hour Week Necessary For Workers in This Industry.

CATHOLIC UNION.

Representations To Government For Maintenance of Present Immigration Policy.

OTTAWA, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Resolutions dealing with unemployment, immigration, hours of labor and recognition of the union were presented to Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, and Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, Friday by a delegation representing the National Catholic Union. The delegation was headed by Chev. P. Beaule, President of the National Catholic Union, and the resolutions presented and spoken to by the various members were those passed at the annual meeting of the union which was held at Port Alfred, Que., this year.

Dr. J. E. Gontaine, Federal member for Hull, accompanied the delegation.

A. Morin of Hull, First Vice-President of the union, spoke briefly on the resolution calling upon the Government to fix a 48-hour week for workers in pulp and paper industries. He stated that conditions in this class of work was such that employees could not stand longer hours of labor. Thomas Poulin of Quebec, Secretary of the union, discussed a resolution of unemployment which advocated an investigation to ascertain if it would not be wise to revise the present immigration policy so as to prevent the exdus of Canadians from Canada, and also to exclude persons from this country for whom no work was available.

Unemployment Funds.

The resolution suggested the establishment of a commission to look into the question of creating unemployment funds.

Another resolution called upon the Federal Government to put a 20 per cent. tax on all vessels constructed or purchased outside Canada which registered for the Canadian coast wise trade. This was suggested because of the serious situation which the Canadian shipbuilding industry had been facing for a number of years.

Finally the delegation presented a resolution asking for complete recognition and the right to be represented where organized labor of Canada is represented.

Were Overlooked.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe assured the delegation that the matter presented would be given thorough consideration. The resolution placed before him and Mr. Murdock would be referred to the Ministers of the various departments that might be affected. Mr. Lapointe assured the delegation that it was due to an oversight that the Catholic Union was not invited to send representatives to the unemployment conference last September. This, he said, would not happen again. The question of the 8-hour day was now before the courts to determine whether or not it came under Provincial or Federal jurisdiction.

HUNTER STREET SCENE OF FIRE

Tool Shop at Rear of Coughlin's Monumental Works Destroyed.

Last evening at 7.17, the Peterboro Fire Department was called out to a fire in the centre of the city, when the tool shop at the rear of Coughlin's Monumental Works, at 216 Hunter street, was destroyed by fire.

The fire is thought to have been caused by a piece of hot metal from one of the machines used in repairing tools, or a hot coal.

The tool shop, which was an old building, and which was thoroughly dried out, burned like match wood, and sent large streaks of flames high into the sky, lighting up the whole district. From the situation of the fire, and the bright flames, many people were led to believe that half the main section of the town was on fire.

When the fire department arrived at the scene the building was a mass of flames, but they managed to keep the fire in check and to keep it from spreading.

The loss will be light, according to Fire Chief George Gimblett.

PRESIDENT RESIGNS.

STEEL OPERATIONS IN UNITED STATES REVEAL RECOVERY IN EARLY OCTOBER

Judge Gary Predicts Expansion Of Prosperity If Election Results Are Favorable—Volume of Business Increases.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press). — Leaders of the steel industry, attending the semi-annual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute Friday, reported a substantial improvement in business in the last few months, and agreed with E. H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, that a favorable election outcome would bring further expansion of prosperity.

Confidence that the election results would be satisfactory, Mr. Gary said in addressing the Institute, had been reflected in the steady and persistent increase in the volume of business. The output of the Steel Corporation, he said, had been 5,000 tons per day more in the early part of October than in the corresponding period of September, and profits of the company for the last quarter would be substantial, despite adverse influences encountered during the summer.

Steel operations throughout the country have increased from an average of about 30 per cent. in midsummer to between 55 and 65 per cent. of capacity at the present time, the manufacturers reported.

PETERBOROUGH FREE OF CRIME ASSIZES SHOW

Only Jury Case Is a Claim of $15,000 Against Walter T. Belleghem.

SUIT AGAINST CITY.

Fall On Icy Sidewalk Results In Claim of $3,000 Damages For Injury.

If the old custom is carried out in Peterborough this year, Hon. Mr. Justice Orde will next Tuesday receive a pair of white gloves in token of the city's freedom from crime — there being no criminal cases to come before him at the Fall Assizes which open then.

The only jury case to be heard is that of Rogers v. Belleghem, in which the plaintiff claims $15000 for damages for injury caused by alleged negligent driving by the defendant of his car.

It is declared in the statement of claim that Cecelia Mary Rogers is under the age of 21 years, and is represented by her next friend, Clemons Ethel Rogers.

On the night of 5th July, the statement says, Miss Rogers was being driven south on Chemong Road by Clarence H. Bacon, when Walter T. Belleghem drove his automobile against Bacon's, throwing Miss Rogers forward so that she sustained grave and permanent injury.

At the time of the collision the defendant, the claim declares, was recklessly racing with and negligently attempting to pass, at an immoderate rate of speed, another motor car going in the same direction when the travelled portion of the highway was not safely free from approaching traffic. Belleghem's car was on the west side of the road instead of the east side.

As a result of the collision, the statement avers, Miss Rogers sustained serious injuries, including the loss of her right eye, and suffered much pain and mental anguish.

The claim is for $15,000 damages, costs of the action, and such further relief as the nature of the case may require.

The defendant specifically denies all the allegations made in the claim, and declares that the plaintiff was sitting with two other adults in the front seat of a small automobile, in a position that made it difficult and dangerous for the driver to operate the car.

The defence further alleges that the plaintiff and her friends were engaged in conversation with apparent disregard of the danger of their position, and were driving at an excessive rate of speed.

The defendant declares he was neither intoxicated nor negligent, and pleads the Contributory Negligence Act in submitting that the claim be dismissed.

Peck, Kerr & McElderry are solicitors for the plaintiff and Mr. Belleghem is represented by Gordon & O'Brien.

Non-Jury Cases.

Non-jury cases to be heard at the Assizes include Patrick Hennessey vs. Herbert Hennessey, in which the plaintiff asks an order for possession of certain lands in Emily and Ennismore and the defendant, a nephew of the plaintiff, counter-claims $2,503.35. Wilfrid Huycke is acting for the plaintiff and Gordon and O'Brien are solicitors for the defendant.

Claim Against City.

Emma Trotter claims $3,000 damages for injuries sustained when she fell on an icy sidewalk, naming the City of Peterboro of defendant. The plaintiff is represented by Gordon and O'Brien, and City Solicitor Joseph Wearing is looking after the city's interests.

Says Misrepresentation.

In the case of Christina M. McKibbin against Samuel Walker McKibbin, of Lakefield, in which $1,730.25 is claimed, the defendant alleges the agreement on which the claim is founded arose out of misrepresentations made to him by his wife and her solicitor, when they said the plaintiff was entitled to recover alimony.

Gordon and O'Brien are representing the plaintiff since the death of A. E. Dixon, and the defendant is represented by R. R. Hall.

Must Go Over.

A writ names John Crane, manager of the Dominion Bank, and Katherine Isobel Picard, administratrix of the estate of the late Louis Joseph Picard, as defendants to an action brought by the now deceased Joseph Picard, in which an order is asked setting aside certain agreements; claiming $9,000 and interest and other relief. Gordon and O'Brien are named as solicitors for the plaintiff; James Fordyce Strickland is acting for John Crane; and Peck, Kerr and McElderry for Katherine Picard.

On account of the death of the plaintiff this week, the case will go over to another court, pending probate of the will of the late Joseph Picard.

BILLION COST OF ELECTIONS

Britain Spending Four Hundred Millions On Present Campaign.

TWO YEARS' BILLS.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—It is estimated that the general election now in progress will cost the country, directly and indirectly, fully $400,000,000. This means that Britain has spent approximately $1,200,000,000 in elections during the past two years, or enough to have solved its employment problems three times over.

The greatest amount of this tremendous sum is loss due to interruptions and uncertainty of business during the election. It is estimated that during the time between a dissolution of Parliament and an election there is a daily loss to the country of at least $30,000,000 through this cause.

The smaller portion of the $400,000,000 is candidates' electioneering expenses.

A candidate's expenses are strictly regulated by law, and if he goes beyond the figure he is legally entitled to spend he is liable to very severe penalties, which are often enforced.

A candidate in a city constituency is allowed to spend ten cents per voter in actual electioneering expenses, while in a rural constituency he is allowed to spend fourteen cents.

The number of voters in Britain is slightly in excess of 21,000,000.

The total number of candidates—Liberals, Conservatives and Laborites—is expected to be almost 1,500. This means, roughly, that approximately thirty cents is allowed by law to be spent on each elector; so that candidates are allowed to lavish about $7,000,000 on the electorate in the direction of mail charges and literature only.

Every candidate must deposit $750 with the Nominations Officer on his nomination. If he fails to secure 25 per cent. of the total vote polled he forfeits this sum.

The two wealthiest parties are the Conservatives and the Liberals, while the poorest is the Labor Party.

MAJORITY FOR O.T.A.

Latest Results For East and West Peterborough Increase Majority.

At noon to-day the available results in West Peterborough shows a majority of 1,116 for the Ontario Temperance Act. Fifty-six polls out of fifty-seven give the O.T.A. 6,240 and government control 5,124.

In East Peterborough, thirty-seven polls out of forty-one give the O.T.A. 3,878 and government control 1,305, or a majority of 2,573 for the O.T.A.

40TH CONSECUTIVE WIN FOR EDMONTON GIRLS

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 24.—By a score of 39 to 8 the Commercial Graduates Ladies' Baseball Team of this city last night defeated the Chicago Stars in the second game of a two-game series for the international basketball championship. The grads won the round by 65 to 21 and retain the laurels which they have held since June of 1923. This game was the fortieth victory consecutively chalked up by the world's champions.

SMITH BREAKS DOWN AS CASE NEARS AN END

Former Provincial Treasurer Gets Three Years In Kingston and Heavy Fine.

JARVIS CONVICTED.

Well Known Toronto Broker Gets Six Months in Jail and Shares $600,000 Fine.

TORONTO, October, 25. — (Canadian Press).—Peter Smith former treasurer of Ontario, in the U.F.O. Government, and Aemilius Jarvis, Sr., who was head of the long established and widely known Toronto Bond and Brokerage House of Aemilius Jarvis and Co., Ltd., were yesterday afternoon found guilty of conspiracy to defraud province. Smith was sentenced to serve three years in Penitentiary and Jarvis to six months in County Jail. In addition both men must remain imprisoned until fine of $600,000 is paid.

Aemilius Jarvis, Jr., son of the convicted broker, and Harry G. Pepall, vice-president and general manager respectively, of the bond firm, were both found not guilty of conspiracy to defraud the Province.

All four men were found not guilty on charges entered against them of stealing sums of $600,000 and $4,000 from the Province.

An appeal will be entered on behalf of Peter Smith and Aemelius Jarvis, Sr., against both conviction and sentence of court.

The four men were tried before Chief Justice R. M. Meredith and a jury in the Criminal Assize Court at the City Hall, the trial commencing last Monday and terminating with the verdict of the jury at 5.42 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

More than five hours were spent by the jury in reaching its verdict.

Jarvis elder and Jarvis younger clasped hands as the verdict was being given.

Peter Smith was seen to slump forward in his chair.

Harry G. Pepall remained with tense expression on his face.

Two Dismissed.

Dismissing Pepall and Jarvis, Jr., His Lordship said: "The jury have found that you are not guilty of any of the charges laid against you," said His Lordship. "My duty is to discharge you. I am glad to say you are discharged."

Peter Smith was next asked to stand up.

"Have you anything to say against judgment of court being now pronounced upon you for the indictable offence of which you have been found guilty?" asked the Chief Justice.

"I have only this to say," replied Mr. Smith, "which is not very much. As I said when I came into this court and was asked to plead I pleaded not guilty. I still adhere to that statement.

"I am not guilty of any conspiracy.

"I only saw Aemelius Jarvis once or twice in my life, and only once in connection with this deal. At the time the Cabinet made arrangements I was sick at home in bed with the flu.

"The jury have found me guilty of conspiracy. I am content to abide by their decision.

"But I will say this, I will take it to a higher court than this, where I will get forgiveness."

At this point the former Treasurer of the Province completely broke down. Tears came to his eyes and he could hardly control his voice. Making a desperate effort to control his feelings, he then pleaded: "I would like to have time enough to arrange my affairs at home. I have a wife and family at home. I have not made any provision for their future.

"That is all I have to say."

Smith Questioned.

Chief Justice Meredith: "Do you care to tell me how you got $130,000-odd from Aemilius Jarvis?—Do not answer if you do not want to."

"I never got that amount," replied Peter Smith.

"It does not matter how much—but a very large sum—over $100,000," said His Lordship.

"I did not get that money."

"Nobody said you did. I am asking about securities. Where did you get the coupons?"

"I got them from Andrew Pepall," replied Smith.

"What for?"

"Because he owed me some money, and he asked me to get them cashed. They were not due at the time he gave them. He was going away."

"Your counsel said you got them in trade. But you need not answer any more questions."

Aemilius Jarvis, Sr., was asked to stand up.

"Have you anything to say against the judgment of the court now being

SHAW BERATES ALL WHO FEED ON FLESH

Meat Diet Is Dope, He Declares in an Election Debate—Vegetarianism for Revolution.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Election diet is the subject of a piquant interchange of opinions which has just taken place among George Bernard Shaw, Dr. Josiah Oldfield, well-known dietic physician, and G. K. Chesterton.

Mr. Shaw who is a vegeterian, when asked whether he thought an apple a day would keep a revolution away, replied:

"I have repeatedly commented on the characteristic ferocity of vegetarians. The bull rhinocerous, elephant and human vegeterian philanthropist are typical examples of dangerous animals undulled by corpse eating. Armies fed on barley have conquered half the world, clans fed on oatmeal or potatoes have had to be exterminated because of their incorrigible pugnacity.

"Meat keeps people quiet, if they get enough of it. A week of beefsteak would change me into the mildest of men. Meat has not much value as a food, but it is incomparable as dope."

UNSOUND GERMAN STOCK IN THE U.S.A.

Warning Issued Against Doubtful Paper Shares of Companies.

BERLIN, Oct. 25. — (Canadian Press).—In view of requests from the United States for information concerning the value of many German corporation paper shares, three to five years old, issued on an inflation basis, the United States Chamber of Commerce in Germany yesterday published a warning to the United States public against such investments.

"The gratifying interest evidenced by American bankers and by the American public in German securities, which found expression above all in the successful flotation of the reparation loan," the statement says "is greatly jeopordized by the offering in America of such German securities which are entirely unsound and which in no way was suited for investors in foreign countries. We consider it our duty to warn the American public against such investments which are apt to injure greatly the interest in German economics."

The Frankfurter Zeitung issues a similar warning and urges Americans, in order to prevent a repetition of the unloading of German paper marks to consult reliable investment bankers before putting their money into questionable securities.

SOVIET PROPAGANDA IN BRITAIN URGING REVOLT OF PROLETARIAT DENOUNCED BY THE GOVERNMENT

Secret Letter From Zinovieff With Reply of Protest and Rebuke Issued By Foreign Office For Publication—Bolsheviki Appealed To British Communists To Secure Ratification of Anglo-Russian Treaty.

PROPAGANDA VIOLATES PROMISES SOVIETS MADE TO THE GOVERNMENT

"To Extend Ideas Of Leninism in England and Her Colonies" the Object of Letter to British Communist Party.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The British Government is again in conflict with the Russian Soviet Government on the question of propaganda, according to correspondence issued by the Foreign Office last night for publication in today's newspapers. In a letter signed "in the absence of the Secretary of State" by one of the permanent officials of the Foreign Office, J. T. Gregory, and addressed to Christian Rakovsky, the Russian Charge D'Affaires in London, attention is drawn to an accompanying copy of a letter received by the central committee of the British Communist party from M. Zinovieff, President of the Committee of the Communist Internationale, dated August 15.

"This letter," says the communication of Mr. Gregory, "contains instructions to British subjects to work for the violent overthrow of existing institutions in this country and for the subversion of His Majesty's armed forces as a means to that end. It is my duty to inform you that His Majesty's Government cannot allow this propaganda and must regard it as direct interference from the outside in British democratic affairs."

Revolution Encouraged.

Mr. Gregory then proceeds to point the intimate connection of the Communist Internationale with the Soviet Government and declares that no British Government ever will tolerate an arrangement with a foreign Government by which the latter while in correct formal diplomatic relations at the same time allows such a propagandist body to encourage and even order plotting and revolution.

"Such conduct," the letter of Mr. Gregory continues, "is not only a grave departure from the rules of international comity, but a violation of the specific and solemn undertakings repeatedly given to His Majesty's Government."

Mr. Gregory then at length alludes to the recently concluded treaty of agreement with the Soviet Government, and declares that the British Government intends that the undertakings in the agreement shall be carried out both in letter and spirit. He argues that if the Soviet Government has the power to make such agreements it should see that they are carried out and that "other parties are not deceived."

"I should be obliged," says Mr. Gregory's letter in conclusion, "if you would be good enough to let me have the observations of your Government on this subject without delay."

Communist Appeal.

Accompanying the letter of Mr. Gregory is a copy of M. Zinovieff's letter, which is endorsed "very secret." This communication which contains more than a thousand words, urges British Communists to continue to apply pressure so as to insure that the Bourgeoisie campaign to prevent ratification of the recently concluded Anglo-Russian treaty shall not succeed and to exercise similar pressure in British Government and parliamentary circles in favor of ratification of the treaty.

The Zinovieff letter represents the Government of Premier MacDonald as having been compelled by the Extremists of the Labor party to conclude the treaty and advocates "a campaign of disclosure of the foreign policy of MacDonald," which Zinovieff says represents "an inferior copy of the policy of the Curzon Government."

Urging "comrades" to strain every nerve to secure ratification of the treaty, Zinovieff in the letter observes that "the settlement of the relations between the two countries will assist in the revolutionizing of the international and the British proletariat no less than a successful rising in any of the working districts of England, as the establishment of close contact between the British and the Russian proletariat will make it possible for us to extend and develop the propaganda of the ideas of Leninism in England and her colonies."

Declaring that armed warfare must be preceded by a struggle against the inclinations to compromise, which are declared to be imbedded in a majority of the British workmen and against the ideas of evolution and the peaceful extermination of capitalism, Zinovieff says that only then will it be possible to count on the complete success of an armed insurrection.

Bore Within the Army.

The letter further complains that agitation and propaganda work in the British army and navy are weak and suggests the desirability of having "cells" in every unit to rectify this weakness. It also suggests that in the event of danger of war these "cells" could, with the aid of the transport workers, paralyze all military preparations and make a start toward turning an imperialist war into a class war.

Zinovieff suggests also the forming of a military section of the British Communist party and attracting to it talented military specialists who, for one reason or another, have left the military service and hold Socialist views.

ENGLISH BEAUTY.

Mrs. Lionel Tennyson, daughter of Baron Glenconner, has been declared one of England's loveliest society queens.

SHOE INDUSTRY STILL IN SLUMP

Canadian Production Declined 600,000 Pairs in 1923—No Improvement Yet.

IMPORTS A FACTOR.

MONTREAL, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The Canadian shoe manufacturers have given an emphatic and positive denial to the report from Ottawa that more shoes were made in Canada last year than in 1922. According to a statement issued by the Canadian Shoe Manufacturers Association, they declare that, on the contrary, the 1923 production was less than of the preceding year by at least 600,000 pair.

The shoe manufacturers' association of Canada has been in communication with bureau of statistics in this connection and has informed the Dominion statistician that the shoe manufacturers are certain that the figures issued from Ottawa are seriously in error and grossly at variance with the facts.

It is admitted that the mistake may have occurred in some of the reports which have been made to the government by the individual firms.

The decline in the value of the out put of the Canadian shoe manufacturing industry last year was even greater relatively than the reduction in the number of pairs made by the Canadian factories.

Production for the current year to date shows no improvement over the situation last year. The falling off in Canadian production is attributed to lessened domestic demand and to the sharp increase in importations, particularly of shoes from the United Kingdon.

MEXICO SEPARATED FROM GREAT BRITAIN

Grave Step is the Outcome of the Murder of Mrs. Rosalie Evans.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—Mexico has broken relations with Great Britain, Foreign office announces withdrawal of all consuls from England. The Mexican Government takes this step owing to lack of diplomatic relations between the two countries.

This grave step on the part of the Mexican government is the result of charges made by district attorney of sale of Puebla, against military attache of Great Britain captain Holicombe, who is accused of trying to bribe prisoners now held and accused or murder of Mrs. Rosalie Evans.

FINE IS COLLECTIVE.

Either Jarvis or Smith Can Pay the $600,000 Fine.

LONDON, Ont., October 25. — Chief Justice R. M. Meredith stated to the Free Press this morning that the six hundred thousand dollars fine he imposed on Peter Smith and Aemelius Jarvis, Senior, was a collective one.

"I do not care who pays it," he said, "Jarvis or Smith."

NEW YORK, Oct. 25. —(Canadian Press.)—Ploughing her way across the Atlantic Ocean this morning, the White Star liner Olympic is bearing the Prince of Wales back to England with souvenirs and memories of his visit to Canada and the United States.

Before sailing he promised to return in 1926 and friends of the Prince intimate that his next visit will be more of a self-educating mission than a pleasure jaunt. He is anxious to study the people and politics of the United States, they say. Next year he goes to South Africa.

ELECTION HITS COTTON TRADE IN LANCASHIRE

Business Just Recovering From Depression When Political Bomb Was Exploded.

CLYNE'S CHANCE.

Labor Government Leader Will Likely Be Elected In Triangular Contest.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The special correspondent of the Canadian Press in reviewing the position of the Manchester district in the present political struggle emphatically declares that nobody engaged in business there wanted an election, which probably accounts for the fact that very little election talk is heard on the steps of the Manchester Exchange. Lancashire, of course, lives mainly on its experts of cotton piece goods, which amounted last year to 138,000,000 pounds. After the long spell of depression, trade was beginning to pick up nicely when the election bombshell exploded.

Manchester has four triangular fights which will form the cockpit of the election with, in addition, one four cornered contest in Withington where the sitting Liberal, H. D. Simon, well known commercially and locally; an old Conservative opponent, Dr. Watts; a rising young barrister named Kenneth Burke, who is running as an independent, and a Labor candidate, Edgar Whiteley, are struggling for the right to represent the constituency in the House of Commons.

Clynes Heckled.

J. R. Clynes, who rose from a millboy to Government leader in the House of Commons, is being opposed by a Liberal and a Conservative. In time gone by of all Manchester members of Parliament Jack Clynes has been one of the most favored, but this time he is meeting with considerable heckling, and the general impression is that if he had been engaged in a straight fight with the Conservative candidate, F. H. Holmes, he would go to the wall. The incursion of the Liberal candidate, however, may save him.

Horton Barclay, one of Manchester's foremost business men, who won the Exchange division for Liberalism at the last general election, has a Conservative opponent in E. B. Fielden, who is as well known as Barclay in commercial circles in Manchester. The division is mainly a business one and includes the stock and coal exchanges. As the candidates have nothing to quarrel over in the Russian loan, Mr. Barclay has raised the old issue of free trade. His action in doing so does not appear as popular as might have been expected, for the electors have told him that the tariff question is not concerned with the present issue. If Barclay goes back to Parliament apparently it will not be because he insisted on free trade as an issue in the fight, but because of his personal popularity.

Rusholme Seat.

In Rusholme, which Chas. Masterman captured from the Conservatives at the last election, he is endeavoring to hold the seat for the Liberals, and W. Paul, who fought the riding in the Labor interest last year, is standing as an avowed Communist, and notwithstanding the ban on Communism by the Labor party, he has received the official approval of the local Labor caucus. Paul has undoubted brilliance, but what he failed to do in the last election as a Labor candidate he is unlikely to accomplish now as an extremist, for Rusholme is "highly respectable" and indeed at one time was deemed a safe Tory seat.

Col. J. Nall has a stiff task in Hulme to hold the seat for the Conservatives. Moss Side will almost certainly return T. R. Ackroyd, the retiring Liberal, and the Gorton division will again return J. Compton, Labor, but the result in Blackley is doubtful, for instead of a straight fight between a Liberal and a Conservative the seat is also being attacked by Labor. However, B. M. Oliver, Liberal, had a majority of nearly 5,000 at the last general election.

ROME, Oct. 25. — (Canadian Press).—Premier Mussolini has ordered that October 28, the second anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome, shall be observed as a national fete day. All the public offices will be beflagged and illuminated and the civil servants, judges and students are to be given a holiday.

UNION REQUEST FOR SHORT DAY IN PULP MILLS

Forty-eight Hour Week Necessary For Workers in This Industry.

CATHOLIC UNION.

Representations To Government For Maintenance of Present Immigration Policy.

OTTAWA, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Resolutions dealing with unemployment, immigration, hours of labor and recognition of the union were presented to Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, and Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, Friday by a delegation representing the National Catholic Union. The delegation was headed by Chev. P. Beaule, President of the National Catholic Union, and the resolutions presented and spoken to by the various members were those passed at the annual meeting of the union which was held at Port Alfred, Que., this year.

Dr. J. E. Gontaine, Federal member for Hull, accompanied the delegation.

A. Morin of Hull, First Vice-President of the union, spoke briefly on the resolution calling upon the Government to fix a 48-hour week for workers in pulp and paper industries. He stated that conditions in this class of work was such that employees could not stand longer hours of labor. Thomas Poulin of Quebec, Secretary of the union, discussed a resolution of unemployment which advocated an investigation to ascertain if it would not be wise to revise the present immigration policy so as to prevent the exdus of Canadians from Canada, and also to exclude persons from this country for whom no work was available.

Unemployment Funds.

The resolution suggested the establishment of a commission to look into the question of creating unemployment funds.

Another resolution called upon the Federal Government to put a 20 per cent. tax on all vessels constructed or purchased outside Canada which registered for the Canadian coast wise trade. This was suggested because of the serious situation which the Canadian shipbuilding industry had been facing for a number of years.

Finally the delegation presented a resolution asking for complete recognition and the right to be represented where organized labor of Canada is represented.

Were Overlooked.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe assured the delegation that the matter presented would be given thorough consideration. The resolution placed before him and Mr. Murdock would be referred to the Ministers of the various departments that might be affected. Mr. Lapointe assured the delegation that it was due to an oversight that the Catholic Union was not invited to send representatives to the unemployment conference last September. This, he said, would not happen again. The question of the 8-hour day was now before the courts to determine whether or not it came under Provincial or Federal jurisdiction.

HUNTER STREET SCENE OF FIRE

Tool Shop at Rear of Coughlin's Monumental Works Destroyed.

Last evening at 7.17, the Peterboro Fire Department was called out to a fire in the centre of the city, when the tool shop at the rear of Coughlin's Monumental Works, at 216 Hunter street, was destroyed by fire.

The fire is thought to have been caused by a piece of hot metal from one of the machines used in repairing tools, or a hot coal.

The tool shop, which was an old building, and which was thoroughly dried out, burned like match wood, and sent large streaks of flames high into the sky, lighting up the whole district. From the situation of the fire, and the bright flames, many people were led to believe that half the main section of the town was on fire.

When the fire department arrived at the scene the building was a mass of flames, but they managed to keep the fire in check and to keep it from spreading.

The loss will be light, according to Fire Chief George Gimblett.

STEEL OPERATIONS IN UNITED STATES REVEAL RECOVERY IN EARLY OCTOBER

Judge Gary Predicts Expansion Of Prosperity If Election Results Are Favorable—Volume of Business Increases.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press). — Leaders of the steel industry, attending the semi-annual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute Friday, reported a substantial improvement in business in the last few months, and agreed with E. H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, that a favorable election outcome would bring further expansion of prosperity.

Confidence that the election results would be satisfactory, Mr. Gary said in addressing the Institute, had been reflected in the steady and persistent increase in the volume of business. The output of the Steel Corporation, he said, had been 5,000 tons per day more in the early part of October than in the corresponding period of September, and profits of the company for the last quarter would be substantial, despite adverse influences encountered during the summer.

Steel operations throughout the country have increased from an average of about 30 per cent. in midsummer to between 55 and 65 per cent. of capacity at the present time, the manufacturers reported.

PETERBOROUGH FREE OF CRIME ASSIZES SHOW

Only Jury Case Is a Claim of $15,000 Against Walter T. Belleghem.

SUIT AGAINST CITY.

Fall On Icy Sidewalk Results In Claim of $3,000 Damages For Injury.

If the old custom is carried out in Peterborough this year, Hon. Mr. Justice Orde will next Tuesday receive a pair of white gloves in token of the city's freedom from crime — there being no criminal cases to come before him at the Fall Assizes which open then.

The only jury case to be heard is that of Rogers v. Belleghem, in which the plaintiff claims $15000 for damages for injury caused by alleged negligent driving by the defendant of his car.

It is declared in the statement of claim that Cecelia Mary Rogers is under the age of 21 years, and is represented by her next friend, Clemons Ethel Rogers.

On the night of 5th July, the statement says, Miss Rogers was being driven south on Chemong Road by Clarence H. Bacon, when Walter T. Belleghem drove his automobile against Bacon's, throwing Miss Rogers forward so that she sustained grave and permanent injury.

At the time of the collision the defendant, the claim declares, was recklessly racing with and negligently attempting to pass, at an immoderate rate of speed, another motor car going in the same direction when the travelled portion of the highway was not safely free from approaching traffic. Belleghem's car was on the west side of the road instead of the east side.

As a result of the collision, the statement avers, Miss Rogers sustained serious injuries, including the loss of her right eye, and suffered much pain and mental anguish.

The claim is for $15,000 damages, costs of the action, and such further relief as the nature of the case may require.

The defendant specifically denies all the allegations made in the claim, and declares that the plaintiff was sitting with two other adults in the front seat of a small automobile, in a position that made it difficult and dangerous for the driver to operate the car.

The defence further alleges that the plaintiff and her friends were engaged in conversation with apparent disregard of the danger of their position, and were driving at an excessive rate of speed.

The defendant declares he was neither intoxicated nor negligent, and pleads the Contributory Negligence Act in submitting that the claim be dismissed.

Peck, Kerr & McElderry are solicitors for the plaintiff and Mr. Belleghem is represented by Gordon & O'Brien.

Non-Jury Cases.

Non-jury cases to be heard at the Assizes include Patrick Hennessey vs. Herbert Hennessey, in which the plaintiff asks an order for possession of certain lands in Emily and Ennismore and the defendant, a nephew of the plaintiff, counter-claims $2,503.35. Wilfrid Huycke is acting for the plaintiff and Gordon and O'Brien are solicitors for the defendant.

Claim Against City.

Emma Trotter claims $3,000 damages for injuries sustained when she fell on an icy sidewalk, naming the City of Peterboro of defendant. The plaintiff is represented by Gordon and O'Brien, and City Solicitor Joseph Wearing is looking after the city's interests.

Says Misrepresentation.

In the case of Christina M. McKibbin against Samuel Walker McKibbin, of Lakefield, in which $1,730.25 is claimed, the defendant alleges the agreement on which the claim is founded arose out of misrepresentations made to him by his wife and her solicitor, when they said the plaintiff was entitled to recover alimony.

Gordon and O'Brien are representing the plaintiff since the death of A. E. Dixon, and the defendant is represented by R. R. Hall.

Must Go Over.

A writ names John Crane, manager of the Dominion Bank, and Katherine Isobel Picard, administratrix of the estate of the late Louis Joseph Picard, as defendants to an action brought by the now deceased Joseph Picard, in which an order is asked setting aside certain agreements; claiming $9,000 and interest and other relief. Gordon and O'Brien are named as solicitors for the plaintiff; James Fordyce Strickland is acting for John Crane; and Peck, Kerr and McElderry for Katherine Picard.

On account of the death of the plaintiff this week, the case will go over to another court, pending probate of the will of the late Joseph Picard.

BILLION COST OF ELECTIONS

Britain Spending Four Hundred Millions On Present Campaign.

TWO YEARS' BILLS.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—It is estimated that the general election now in progress will cost the country, directly and indirectly, fully $400,000,000. This means that Britain has spent approximately $1,200,000,000 in elections during the past two years, or enough to have solved its employment problems three times over.

The greatest amount of this tremendous sum is loss due to interruptions and uncertainty of business during the election. It is estimated that during the time between a dissolution of Parliament and an election there is a daily loss to the country of at least $30,000,000 through this cause.

The smaller portion of the $400,000,000 is candidates' electioneering expenses.

A candidate's expenses are strictly regulated by law, and if he goes beyond the figure he is legally entitled to spend he is liable to very severe penalties, which are often enforced.

A candidate in a city constituency is allowed to spend ten cents per voter in actual electioneering expenses, while in a rural constituency he is allowed to spend fourteen cents.

The number of voters in Britain is slightly in excess of 21,000,000.

The total number of candidates—Liberals, Conservatives and Laborites—is expected to be almost 1,500. This means, roughly, that approximately thirty cents is allowed by law to be spent on each elector; so that candidates are allowed to lavish about $7,000,000 on the electorate in the direction of mail charges and literature only.

Every candidate must deposit $750 with the Nominations Officer on his nomination. If he fails to secure 25 per cent. of the total vote polled he forfeits this sum.

The two wealthiest parties are the Conservatives and the Liberals, while the poorest is the Labor Party.

MAJORITY FOR O.T.A.

Latest Results For East and West Peterborough Increase Majority.

At noon to-day the available results in West Peterborough shows a majority of 1,116 for the Ontario Temperance Act. Fifty-six polls out of fifty-seven give the O.T.A. 6,240 and government control 5,124.

In East Peterborough, thirty-seven polls out of forty-one give the O.T.A. 3,878 and government control 1,305, or a majority of 2,573 for the O.T.A.

40TH CONSECUTIVE WIN FOR EDMONTON GIRLS

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 24.—By a score of 39 to 8 the Commercial Graduates Ladies' Baseball Team of this city last night defeated the Chicago Stars in the second game of a two-game series for the international basketball championship. The grads won the round by 65 to 21 and retain the laurels which they have held since June of 1923. This game was the fortieth victory consecutively chalked up by the world's champions.

SMITH BREAKS DOWN AS CASE NEARS AN END

Former Provincial Treasurer Gets Three Years In Kingston and Heavy Fine.

JARVIS CONVICTED.

Well Known Toronto Broker Gets Six Months in Jail and Shares $600,000 Fine.

TORONTO, October, 25. — (Canadian Press).—Peter Smith former treasurer of Ontario, in the U.F.O. Government, and Aemilius Jarvis, Sr., who was head of the long established and widely known Toronto Bond and Brokerage House of Aemilius Jarvis and Co., Ltd., were yesterday afternoon found guilty of conspiracy to defraud province. Smith was sentenced to serve three years in Penitentiary and Jarvis to six months in County Jail. In addition both men must remain imprisoned until fine of $600,000 is paid.

Aemilius Jarvis, Jr., son of the convicted broker, and Harry G. Pepall, vice-president and general manager respectively, of the bond firm, were both found not guilty of conspiracy to defraud the Province.

All four men were found not guilty on charges entered against them of stealing sums of $600,000 and $4,000 from the Province.

An appeal will be entered on behalf of Peter Smith and Aemelius Jarvis, Sr., against both conviction and sentence of court.

The four men were tried before Chief Justice R. M. Meredith and a jury in the Criminal Assize Court at the City Hall, the trial commencing last Monday and terminating with the verdict of the jury at 5.42 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

More than five hours were spent by the jury in reaching its verdict.

Jarvis elder and Jarvis younger clasped hands as the verdict was being given.

Peter Smith was seen to slump forward in his chair.

Harry G. Pepall remained with tense expression on his face.

Two Dismissed.

Dismissing Pepall and Jarvis, Jr., His Lordship said: "The jury have found that you are not guilty of any of the charges laid against you," said His Lordship. "My duty is to discharge you. I am glad to say you are discharged."

Peter Smith was next asked to stand up.

"Have you anything to say against judgment of court being now pronounced upon you for the indictable offence of which you have been found guilty?" asked the Chief Justice.

"I have only this to say," replied Mr. Smith, "which is not very much. As I said when I came into this court and was asked to plead I pleaded not guilty. I still adhere to that statement.

"I am not guilty of any conspiracy.

"I only saw Aemelius Jarvis once or twice in my life, and only once in connection with this deal. At the time the Cabinet made arrangements I was sick at home in bed with the flu.

"The jury have found me guilty of conspiracy. I am content to abide by their decision.

"But I will say this, I will take it to a higher court than this, where I will get forgiveness."

At this point the former Treasurer of the Province completely broke down. Tears came to his eyes and he could hardly control his voice. Making a desperate effort to control his feelings, he then pleaded: "I would like to have time enough to arrange my affairs at home. I have a wife and family at home. I have not made any provision for their future.

"That is all I have to say."

Smith Questioned.

Chief Justice Meredith: "Do you care to tell me how you got $130,000-odd from Aemilius Jarvis?—Do not answer if you do not want to."

"I never got that amount," replied Peter Smith.

"It does not matter how much—but a very large sum—over $100,000," said His Lordship.

"I did not get that money."

"Nobody said you did. I am asking about securities. Where did you get the coupons?"

"I got them from Andrew Pepall," replied Smith.

"What for?"

"Because he owed me some money, and he asked me to get them cashed. They were not due at the time he gave them. He was going away."

"Your counsel said you got them in trade. But you need not answer any more questions."

Aemilius Jarvis, Sr., was asked to stand up.

"Have you anything to say against the judgment of the court now being

UNSOUND GERMAN STOCK IN THE U.S.A.

Warning Issued Against Doubtful Paper Shares of Companies.

BERLIN, Oct. 25. — (Canadian Press).—In view of requests from the United States for information concerning the value of many German corporation paper shares, three to five years old, issued on an inflation basis, the United States Chamber of Commerce in Germany yesterday published a warning to the United States public against such investments.

"The gratifying interest evidenced by American bankers and by the American public in German securities, which found expression above all in the successful flotation of the reparation loan," the statement says "is greatly jeopordized by the offering in America of such German securities which are entirely unsound and which in no way was suited for investors in foreign countries. We consider it our duty to warn the American public against such investments which are apt to injure greatly the interest in German economies."

The Frankfurter Zeitung issues a similar warning and urges Americans, in order to prevent a repetition of the unloading of German paper marks to consult reliable investment bankers before putting their money into questionable securities.

THE WOMEN'S COUNCIL.

Regular Monthly Meeting Held Yesterday—Date of Elections.

The regular monthly meeting of the Local Council of Women, was held yesterday afternoon in the green room of the Young Women's Christian Association. The president, Mrs. A. Stevenson, occupied the chair. There was a smaller attendance than usual at this meeting, only a baker's dozen of representatives of affiliated societies being present.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. J. Wearing and Mrs. A. Mowat read the correspondence.

With regard to the demonstration of meat which the Council has been making arrangements for with the Live Stock Branch of the Department of Agriculture, at Ottawa, it was decided to hold this next month in the market hall. A committee in charge of the arrangements is composed of Mesdames Stevenson, Mann, Mowat and Nelson.

Miss A. M. Lancaster's resignation of the chairmanship of the Committee on Citizenship, was accepted and it was decided to leave the office open until nominations were made for the next elections.

The request of the Local Council that the Public Library be open on Sundays under their provision, as was the case last year, was granted, and it was decided to commence the open Sundays on November 2nd.

Mrs. J. Wearing was appointed convenor in charge of attendants for the various Sundays.

Date of Municipal Elections.

Mrs. C. J. Snider, president of the Catholic Women's League, presented a resolution from that body, asking that the date of holding the municipal elections be fixed on some day other than the first or the sixth of January. It was announced that consideration of this matter had been taken up by other affiliated societies, and the following had expressed themselves as in favor of a change: The Queen Alexandra Home and School Association, the Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity Methodist church, the Ladies' Auxiliary to the G.W.V.A., and the Women's Missionary Society of the George street Methodist church.

Mrs. F. A. Hodgson explained the reasons given by the Catholic Women's League for the change as being primarily religious. The first and sixth of January were both great feast days of the church, and it was felt that voting on such occasions was not in keeping with the spirit of the day. Other reasons advanced by various members were the inconvenience of getting out the vote on a holiday, the fact that many people were absent on vacation trips, and that the close proximity of the first of January to the Christmas holidays made it impossible for voters to become thoroughly acquainted with the views of the various candidates.

Mrs. J. Mills made a strong plea for the holding of meetings prior to election day, so that women voters especially might be educated in the main issues of the election.

Mrs. A. Mowat moved a resolution which carried, changing the wording slightly of the League's proposition and asking that the Council of the city be requested to give their earnest consideration to the advisability of changing the date of the municipal elections from January 1st, pointing out also that January 6th was not considered a suitable occasion.

Mrs. C. J. Snider, Mrs. W. R. Morris and Mrs. A. Mowat were appointed to frame the resolution.

Report of Annual Convention.

Mrs. A. Stevenson gave a brief account of the proceedings at the recent annual convention of the National Council of Women in Toronto, speaking of the various outstanding women present, and the principal subjects under discussion.

Mrs. Stevenson announced that a review of the proposed budget of the National Council, which has an important aspect this year, would be given by Mrs. Mowat at the next regular monthly meeting.

SPEED.

A mile in 23 seconds — Malcolm Campbell makes it in England with his automobile, a 12-cylinder Sunbeam.

Ten years ago such speed would have astounded the world. No one pays much attention to it now, for airplanes are far faster. The importance of anything is entirely by contrast, or relatively. The goal of brain training should be to develop a sense of values for determining the importance of things and situations in relation to others. Values are relative.

Everett Fairman of Petherick's Corners Was the Victim.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, October 25. — On Monday evening, when Mr. Everett Fairman was returning home from the fowl supper at Hastings he was stopped along the curve in the River Road. Just below the 8th Line corner, as he came around the curve he noticed a car stopped across the road, and as the road was quite narrow, with a deep ditch on one side and a wire fence close to the other side, it was impossible to get by.

As he approached the car, a man walked out into the road and threw up his hand in a friendly sort of manner, as if he was in trouble. So Mr. Fairman stopped.

The man walked up to the car, looked into the windshield, and then flung the door open and showed a revolver, ordering him out into the road, and in the meantime another man stepped into the coupe from the other side.

When Mr. Fairman did not show any intentions of getting out, he was thrown out the door, inflicting a slight wound on the shoulder and also his right knee.

The two men then searched him and the car very carefully, taking everything into their own possession, but did not keep anything except the spare key for the ignition switch and a permit which goes with the license.

The police were at once notified, but no trace has been found of them.

As there were no markers on their car there is no way of identifying it.

Put on a Play.

A number of the young people of the community are practising a play entitled "When Your Wife's Away." This will be given the evening of the box social.

Mr. John Mackenzie, of Stanwood, has rented the brick house at the Corners opposite the church, formerly occupied by Mr. Wm. Kemp. He has already moved most of his furniture, and intends finishing up this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Irwin and Mr. John Simpson motored to Warkworth on Thursday.

Mr. Allan Simpson spent Sunday with friends in Stirling and vicinity.

The results of the plebiscite at the Hall on Thursday were as follows:
Number of ballots used, 144.
Number of ballots spoiled, 3.
Number of ballots for O.T.A., 123.
Number of ballots for Government Control, 18.

EMPLOYMENT INCREASES.

OTTAWA, Oct. 25. — (Canadian Press).—The trend of employment at the beginning of October was upward, according to returns from 5,855 firms tabulated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. These employers increased their pay-rolls from 765,422 persons on September 1 to 771,932 at the first of this month.

Quiet Wedding at Home of Mrs. James Dickson—Funeral of Miss Ellen Armour.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 25.—On Saturday morning, October 25, at 11 o'clock, a quiet wedding took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. James Dickson, Bridge Street, when her younger daughter, Georgie Hazel, was married to Dr. Paul Earle Kingston, of Niagara Falls, N.Y., only son of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. W. Kingston of Tweed. The bride was given away by her brother-in-law, Mr. Ross McLaren, of Melrose. Rev. C. F. McIntosh performed the marriage ceremony. The young couple were unattended. Miss Eleanor Dawson (Peggy), a niece of the bride, was the flower girl. Only the immediate relatives were present. The drawing-room where the ceremony was performed was decorated in pink, and the dining-room in yellow.

After the wedding breakfast the bride and groom left on the 1.30 train for their honeymoon, after which they will reside at Niagara Falls, N.Y. The wedding day chosen by the bride was the anniversary of her mother's wedding day.

The many friends of Miss Dickson extend to her and her husband their best wishes for a long, happy, married life.

Funeral Service.

The funeral of the late Miss Ellen Armour, which was held on Wednesday afternoon, was largely attended. The service at the house was in charge of Rev. D. A. Thompson of Hastings. Two favorite hymns "Rock of Ages" and "Jesus Lover of My Soul," were sung.

The pall-bearers were three nephews, John, Arthur and Wilfred Armour, and Messrs. Roy Skinkle, Will Hedger and Chas. McKelvie.

Among the many floral tributes were the following: Wreaths from the family, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Armour, Mr. John Armour and Dr. John Armour, of St. Catharines, a brother of the deceased.

A number of people from a distance were present at the funeral. Among whom were: Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Huycke, Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Huycke and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Booth, of Warkworth. These were old neighbors of the deceased, having lived for years on the farm just across the road.

The late Miss Armour had a host of friends, and was highly respected by all in the neighborhood.

Father Phelan's Bazaar which lasted for three days ending Thursday night was a great success and was well patronized. Many came in from the surrounding country as well as from the town.

On Thursday night part of the programme was the drawing for the prizes. This was done by Reeve Chas. Davidson. These will be given later. Father Phelan expressed himself as very grateful to all who helped to make the bazaar such a success and to those who attended and he hoped that a kindly feeling among all, would prevail.

In the "Christian Herald and signs of our times", a paper printed in London, England, on September 18th, 1924, there appeared a picture of the Rev. William Bilton and his church at Gravenhurst, Ontario, who a few years ago was pastor of the Baptist church in Campbellford, Ontario, with the following foot lines:

A Canadian Pioneer Pastor: Pastor William Bilton, whose efforts to distribute sound literature among Canadian lumbermen, are well known to our readers, and also the following extract in the paper:

"Readers in all parts of the country will be interested to see the portrait (with picture of his church) of Pastor William Bilton, of Canada, whose name has so often appeared in our columns in connection with his appeal for tracts and literature, for distribution among the Canadian lumbermen. Pastor William Bilton is now actively engaged at the Baptist church at Gravenhurst, Ont, and besides his duties as pastor of the church, he visits a consumptive hospital, with 500 patients, and continues his interest in the lumber camps. He is able to report that during the past year several have decided for Christ. Just recently Pastor Bilton has inaugurated a forward movement to renovate the church and also to build a school room to accommodate a hundred Sunday school scholars.

"On Easter Sunday a somewhat novel feautre was introduced in the form of an egg collection, the eggs numbering 100 being displayed on a large table in front of the pulpit to form the words 'He is Risen.' These were afterwards sent to the Sick Children's Hospital and were much appreciated by the little ones. Pastor Bilton desires to express his thanks to all readers of the Christian Herald who have so kindly helped in the past. Christian Heralds and other sound literature will always be most welcome and should be addressed to him as formerly, at the Baptist manse Gravenhurst, Ont., Canada."

The Regiment Band at Campbellford, are making arrangements to go to Havelock on Sunday afternoon November 9th., 1924, to help the War Veterans at their "Armistice Service" held that day. Major Belford will be the principal speaker for the afternoon.

The Armistice Service given by the band at Campbellford will be held in the Regent Theatre on the same Sunday night at half past eight after the evening services. As the band will be away in the afternoon the service will have to be at night instead of the afternoon as last year.

There will be special addresses and music by the band.

The congregation at Stanwood church are making great preparations for their anniversary services on Sunday October 26th and their fowl supper which will be on the following Tuesday.

The regular meeting of the Rebekahs was held in their rooms on Thursday night. The nominations for the officers for the coming year was taken.

SOVIET PROPAGANDA

May Defeat Labor.

The Zinoviev letter, concerning which the British Government yesterday despatched a sharp note to Russia, has become the preponderant sensation of the election campaign and probably will ensure defeat of labor and benefit the Conservatives. Unless the Liberals and Laborites in the four days remaining before the country goes to the polls can annihilate the deadly effect on the disclosures of communist intrigues, the Tories are expected to gain many seats. The Conservative press, displaying the Zinoviev letter luridly on front pages to-day, claims credit for the revelations which caused Ramsay MacDonald to send a note of protest to Russia and a moment when he and his followers were stumping the country defending the Russian treaties.

It is expected that the Premier and his followers now will discontinue their advocacy of the Russian agreements and the proposed loan to the Soviet government, until the matter is cleaned up Moscow makes amends.

M. Christian Rakovsky, Soviety envoy, has suggested that the note is a forgery. It was signed by Zinoviev, president of the Communist International and urged sabotage and revolution in England.

In an interview granted the Daily Herald, Labor organ, Rakovsky, said: "It was a crude forgery but the surprising thing is that the foreign office should publish this document without first ascertaining our views on the subject."

So far, the denials made by Rakovsky and the British Communists are accepted as conventional disclaimers, and have received scant attention.

While the Conservatives are claiming credit for revealing the Zinoviev letter, the Labourites point out that MacDonald's note to Moscow clearly shows Labour's attitude to Russia, it being a definite demand that interference in British affairs be stopped.

Much interest is being shown in speculating how the Zinoviev letter was apprehended, rumours describing how secret service men found it by intercepting the mails or how it was found during a recent raid on Communist headquarters by Scotland Yard, being rife.

Campaign speakers last night did not comment on the situation, but the entire electorate expects to hear it discussed to-day.

MacDonald speaks to-day at Swansea, Baldwin at Perth, and Lloyd-George at Chichester.

LONDON, October 25 (Canadian Press Cable). — Russia countered the British protest against the Zinoviev letter by entering an emphatic protest of her own to-day.

Declaring the letter "an obvious forgery," M. Christian Rakovsky, Soviet envoy, sent a note to the Foreign Office protesting against the publication before he (Rakovsky) had been informed.

It developes that the letter—publication of which, coupled with a sharp note to Moscow, caused tremendous sensation throughout the British Isles—has been a carefully guarded secret in the innermost political circles since early October.

The letter, purporting to be from Zinoviev, president of the Communist International Communists, urged revolution and sabotage in England.

Premier MacDoald yesterday sent an emphatic note, protesting against the letter, and asking the Russian Government if it could not cotrol its Extremists and live up to its agreements—agreements which are under fre in this country as one of the chief election issues.

DE VALERA SPENT A NIGHT IN JAIL

President of Irish Republic Arrested in Ulster and Shipped Home.

DUBLIN, Oct. 25. — (United Press).—Eamonn De Valera, erstwhile "President of the Irish Republic," who insisted on entering Ulster territory to speak at Newry, was arrested, spent a night in jail, and this morning was courteously placed aboard a train and shipped back to the Free State territory.

The Irish Extremist leader was forbidden by Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, to speak in the North. De Valera entered the Town Hall at Newry and was promptly taken to prison. If he tries to enter Ulster again, he will be interned.

810 POLLS STILL TO BE HEARD FROM

Majority is Now 39,879 for the Ontario Temperance Act.

TORONTO, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press).—With 810 outlying polls still to be heard from, the majority for the retention of the Ontario Temperance Act is now 39,879. The probability is that the dry majority will be somewhat increased. Returns show that over a million of Ontario's voters went to the polls. The latest returns show the following figures: 6,322 divisions out of 7,332. For the O.T.A. 541,003, for Government Control 501,124—majority for O.T.A. 39,879.

TORONTO VOTERS TO OPPOSE O. T. A.

Moderation League Member Says If They Don't Get What They Voted For There Will Be Trouble.

TORONTO, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Premier Ferguson's statement that he would enforce the O.T.A. as a result of the plebiscite has drawn the fire of J. A. McCausland, M.L.A., member for South-West Toronto. At a meeting of Ward Six, Women's Conservative Association last night sounded a warning that unless Toronto "got what it voted for," there would be serious trouble in the Conservative party. Referring to the statement of the Premier yesterday afternoon, Mr. McCausland declared that a caucus of members should have been called before making the decision. "We do not want government by the Cabinet," he declared.

WEDDING BELLS.

MACFARLANE—HALL.

A quiet wedding took place at one o'clock on Wednesday, October 22 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hall, Otonabee, when their elder daughter, Lilah Evelyn, was united in marriage to Mr. John A. Macfarlane, son of Mrs. and the late Donald Macfarlane, Rev. Mr. Pogue officiating.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was becomingly gowned in blue georgette and lace and carried a shower bouquet of ophelia roses. The wedding march was played by Miss Myrtle Payne, of Lakefield, cousin of the bride.

After the ceremony a dainty buffet luncheon was served. Mr. and Mrs. Macfarlane left later to spend their honeymoon in St. Thomas and points west, the bride travelling in navy poiret twill suit and black hat. On their return they will reside in Otonabee.

SMITH BREAKS DOWN AS CASE NEARS AN END

pronounced upon you for an indictable offence of which you have been found guilty?" he was asked.

"Yes," said Jarvis, in a tone of strong indignation. "I never knew Peter Smith, and never had any connection with him directly or indirectly. I never gave him one dollar or sanctioned one dollar being given to him.

"Nor had I any conspiracy or intercourse with Andrew Pepall to distort or mislead the Cabinet of Ontario.

"I never discussed the thing with Peter Smith——only with Mr. Drury to begin with, and with the cabinet."

Chief Justice Meredith: "May I ask you why you took half a million dollars or more for the petty services you performed?"

"I do not call them petty services. When man stakes his whole fortune signing Hypothecaton in London, which you do not put any credence in. When you have become liable for $3,000,000 and stake your life's fortune.

As Sir John Ferguson said, I was first person to repay him if province failed to take up this note within thiry days. I was borrower, as bonds came in they were paid for at Lloyds and I had to borrow money. You say that is a petty thing."

"Yes. You knew, Aemilius Jarvis that you did not run risk of one dollar."

"I ran risk of everything."

"You knew that province was behind you and was to pay everything?"

"Of course province was behind me, if British Government have to borrow when they borrow in United States, they put up collateral. When I borrowed from Lloyds I put up collateral .It is done in every transaction."

"Peter Smith", said His Lordship, "It is neither my right nor my duty to recount your misdeeds or to say one word that will add to your punishment. But in order that you may not think there is any disportion betoween penalty to be passed upon you and passed upon your co-conspirator I may say that you were chosen by people of municipality in which you lived to serve them and to serve this province faithfully. Aemilius Jarvis was not so chosen. You were made minister of crown and were what is commonly called, "a watch dog of the treasury."

Aemilius arvis was not. You made oath which you violated, solemn oath of office. Aemilius Jarvis did not.

"Judgment of court upon you, Peter Smith, is that you be imprisoned in penitentiary for three years."

Addressing Mr. Jarvis, chief justice said: "Judgment of court upon you Aemilius Jarvis is that you be imprisoned in county jail of this county for six months."

Then addressing both prisoners; "and further judgment of court upon you Peter Smith and upon you Aemilius Jarvis, is that you and each of you, pay a fine of $600,000 and that you remain in jail until it is paid."

PETER SMITH'S FATE.

The spectacle of a former Provincial Treasurer being sentenced to three years in penitentiary, and of one of the leading financiers of Ontario being given a six-months' term in jail for conspiracy to defraud the Province, is saddening in its picture of the downfall of two men who but a few months ago were seemingly fortune's favourites—yet it is impressive as a demonstration of the fairness and sureness of the administration of law in this country.

The fate of Peter Smith and Aemelius Jarvis, Sr., refutes the silly contention so often heard that there is one law for the rich and another for the poor.

The political prominence did not keep the former out of the penitentiary, nor did the wealth of the latter keep him out of jail.

The episode is a sordid one, and as Canadians we can be thankful that such cases have not been frequent so far as men holding public office have been concerned.

A BLOW FOR THE KISS.

There no longer can be any doubt about Russia. It has a rotten Government, speaking after the manner of men.

The Soviets haven't done so very much constructive work, but they have gone into the abolishing business on a considerable scale. They have barred independent thought, repudiated the obligations of man to man, condemned money, kiboshed religion, confronted the redoubtable Santa Claus with the "no-tresspassing" sign and now they have set a stern, unyielding jaw against the well-known human kiss. That, it will be admitted, caps the climax.

The kiss dates from the beginning of things. Despite the claim of cold, unfeeling experts that it is nothing more or less than a deliberate or an impulsive swap of some several hundreds of microbes that park within the lips and in the shade of the tongue, it has survived all attacks and oozed and smacked its way through the centuries.

It is an institution, succulent but portentous. It is an expression of a human purpose, a human desire, a human love, or a human passion. It is ingrowing and outbursting, and ever has been and ever will be, world without end.

Those Russians have overreached themselves entirely. It may be possible for them to tear down religious fabrics and civic structures, no matter of how long standing or of what stability, but they must fail utterly in this latest effort to establish a restrictive law.

The human kiss is a human confessional whose powers of suction are far too great and adhesive to admit of being torn asunder by any system of Government man may erect. Pooh! for the Soviets.

WILL ENFORCE THE ACT.

Premier Ferguson, after studying the plebiscite returns with the members of his Cabinet, has announced that his Government will strictly enforce the Ontario Temperance Act in according with the expressed wishes of the majority of the electors who voted on Thursday.

There is no other course open to the Premier.

His promise was definite, the issue was clean-cut, both sides knew the conditions under which the campaign was conducted, and Mr. Ferguson must accept the mandate.

To use a simile adopted from baseball, representatives of the Plebiscite Committee and of the Moderation League met in conference with Premier Ferguson and Attorney-General Nickle to decide the ground rules.

And, in the words of the Premier, who must be accepted as the umpire-in-chief, here were conditions under which both sides entered into the contest.

"It was made perfectly clear that all parties realized that if the people voted for the continuance of the Ontario Temperance Act the Government would treat it as any other piece of legislation, and would strengthen its weaknesses, if [illegible] and give it active and vigorous enforcement."

There were no conditions in regard to local option, no insistance upon anything but a straight majority.

The battle was fought out on the lines agreed upon, and the verdict has been given.

It favours the retention of the Ontario Temperance Act, true by a much smaller majority than before and by the support of the rural districts in the face of a large urban disapproval of the O. T. A., but nevertheless by a majority of the total vote cast.

The jury has given its verdict, and the Government must see to it that the wishes of the majority are carried out.

It will not be an easy task.

With a striking change of opinion in regard to the Ontario Temperance Act in the centres of population, the Government is faced with the task of enforcing a law disapproved by a half million voters.

Such a condition makes enforcement a most serious problem, and Attorney-General Nickle will have no reason to complain that his duties are too light.

THE CASE OF THE "WET" CITIES.

Moderation League officials as a result of the decisive condemnation of the Ontario Temperance Act by the majority of Ontario's cities are demanding that special consideration in the way of local option be extended to such centres.

It would not be difficult to make out a strong case along those lines were it not that the Moderation League, as explained elsewhere, went into the campaign with the understanding that a majority in favour of the Ontario Temperance Act would be accepted by the Government as a mandate for a vigorous enforcement of that measure.

The situation is a peculiar one.

The majority of Ontario's cities, Peterborough being one notable exception, have rejected the Ontario Temperance Act.

The urban majority against that measure is close to 100,000.

Yet that large margin has been completely wiped out by rural Ontario.

The cleavage between city and country is sharply defined, and the Moderation League, speaking on behalf of the thousands of urban voters who favoured Government control, declares that the cities which want that system should not be deprived of what they voted for because the rural districts are opposed.

Moderationists point out that the Government shops would in any case have only been located in larger centres where the farmers would not come into contact with them unless they desired to, and they argue that such of those centres as have supported Government control should have the opportunity to obtain what they have shown they want.

But the campaign was not fought out on local option lines, and because of that fact the demand now for a special system for the "wet" centres seems doomed to failure.

CHEERING WORDS.

Like newspaper men, bank managers are regarded as good observers. The latter are especially good observers of business conditions and therefore command attention when reporting a situation, either locally or nationally, says the Border Cities Star.

The other day Mr. J. A. McLeod, general manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, returned from a tour of the West. "It is coming back," he says, in commenting on the improved conditions he noted. "It is coming back strong. Future improvement may not be as rapid as some would like to see, but it will be steady, and the prospects are bright for a general improvement in business."

Cheering words, these. They have the ring of confidence that should be essentially Canadian. They convey the kind of news the East delights to hear, for we are vitally interested in the prosperity of the West. National progress is more rapid when the trade barometers of East and West climb simultaneously. And there is every indication that they are climbing together now. The business outlook in the East is bright, much brighter than it has been in many months. Business is steadily improving and reflecting more confidence. Trade statistics are reassuring. Our dollar is heading for the premium mark. In short, we have every reason to redouble our belief in the great future of this Dominion.

So, when Mr. McLeod says "there is nothing wrong with the West," we too can say, there is nothing wrong with the East. And altogether we may truly proclaim to the world that there is nothing wrong with Canada!

GERMANS CHEERED IN PARIS.

A German football team from Berlin played against the Club Francais in Paris yesterday and was applauded by fifteen thousand spectators.

A part of the German loan is to be raised in France.

One of the after-developments of the Conference of London was an alarm in Great Britain over a report that the Germans and the French were about to enter into a mutually exclusive trade agreement which would leave the British out in the cold.

Apparently the war is over.

The truth is, of course, that the last war has been over for some time, even in the heart of Paris. The apprehensions shown by the French during the last five years have not had their sources in the last war, but in the next war. If there had been no fear in the French mind that the Germans were plotting an early war of revenge, French policy would have been quite different ever since the signing of the alleged peace treaty. It was not anger at the Germans for what they have done, but anxiety over what they might do, which inspired the policy of Paris.

But even this feeling is losing its inflammation. The defeat of Poincare revealed this. The French were willing to turn for a time from foreign to domestic issues. On foreign questions, they were undoubtedly still with the belligerent Poincare. That was shown plainly and quickly enough when MacDonald had to hurry over to Paris to help Herriot smooth away the impression of surrender which the Chequers communique had created. But they no longer believed that the German menace was imminent and felt quite free to forget it for the moment while they considered the more pressing home issues of taxation and social reform.

Other changes have come in Europe. The Dawes plan and the German loan have definitely lifted the German people out of the penumbra of Bolshevism and made Germany again an independent "Power." This has quietly—and most fortunately—killed the feeling in Great Britain that such things as the French airfleet and submarine development were possible menaces. The British no longer look with apprehension across the Channel at a powerful France at the head of a military alliance that once absolutely dominated Europe.

This is, in fact, one of the great benefits of the Dawes plan—and one of the memorable achievements of the happy conjunction of MacDonald and Herriot at the head of their respective nations. Continental Europe is better balanced than it was. There is no longer a cock of the walk. Germany has ceased to be "a road" and become "a nation," and her free consent must be had if the magnificent French army is ever to march to the rescue of, say, Poland against a Russian attack. That Germany would help to keep alive the circle of alliances that contains her in a steel ring, is more than can be expected of human nature.

It looks as if that much-abused and much-misunderstood bogey-man of the idealists, the Balance of Power, were coming back. So far as German interests march with Russian interests, these two great outlawed nations must be reckoned with as in the same camp. Neither of them want a strong Poland. Neither of them relish the Greater Rumania created at Paris. Czecho-Slovakia already shows signs of realizing that it is poor policy for it to insist upon keeping the enmity of the Germans in Germany and the Germans in Austria. And Czecho-Slovakia is led by one of the most astute statesmen in Europe.

Great Britain is naturally drawing aloof—and, incidentally, drawing nearer to the United States. The British realize their chief problems for the future lie in the Pacific. That is where the Empire will be kept or lost. So far as British policy goes, Europe seems about to enter an era of tranquillity. The danger spots are Egypt, Irak, India, Singapore and Australia.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Contemplating the general results, rural Ontario will perhaps consider it has avenged the deficit of last year.

Now the plebiscite is over Ontario municipalities will begin to take stock of their civic timber available for the municipal elections.

The only way to make war on the bootlegger is to jail those convicted. Fines are no check upon illegal sale.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—Lower bids on Monday led to a slow trade and it was not till well on in the afternoon that sellers and buyers were able to come to terms. On heavy steers the prices were 15 cents and in excess lower than those recently paid, and shippers made claims of being considerable losers. For three loads as high as $7.35 a cwt. was paid, but the bulk were bought well below $7. Export heifers were less effected and brought from $5.50 to $6.25. Stores were steady at $5.50 to $6.25 a cwt. and bulls, if anything were firmer at $4 to $4.50 a cwt.

In choice butchers prices were easier with the export cattle and few loads went above $6.25 a cwt. Medium to good butchers sold from $5 to $5.75 and common grades were unchanged at $3 to $4.25 a cwt. Butchers' cows were in strong demand all week. Top cows were $5 and good average cows $4 to $4.50. Medium cows sold at $3.50 to $3.75 aud common cows averaged $3 a cwt. Bologna bulls were all taken from $2.50 to $3, exports from $4 to $4.50 and a couple of choice butchers' bulls sold at $5 and $5.50.

Stockers and feeders were dull on Monday, but following this there was a good trade, with a heavy turnover, though at easier prices. The high price of feed and the comparatively low beef prices are making farmers cautious buyers for winter feeding. A good average trade is reported in milchers and springers; the range for good ones being from $60 to $80 each. Rogers and Maybee have three boats to fill next week, one of which is for Antwerp. A coarser class of cattle can be used for this shipment, and many bulls can also be taken care of.

The calf market continues to rule strong, except for the heavy kind up and over 300 lbs. each. Well finished calves, 140 to 200 lbs., are in splendid demand at 10 to 12 cents a pound. Good medium calves are 8½ to 9½ cents, and common calves 6 to 7 cents.

The heaviest run of lambs for the season did not make much impression on prices, and a 25-cent a cwt. loss on Tuesday was made up later in the week, so that choice lambs closed at 12 cents for ewes and 10 cents for bucks. Choice handyweight sheep are selling from 7 to 8 cents, and the demand for breeding ewes has brought the price as high as 11½ cents a pound..

Hogs are quoted 50 cents a cwt. lower for the week, but packers are having difficulty in depressing prices. For the week end loading they are trying out a bid of $9.25 a cwt. f.o.b., but Monday will tell whether this is effective or not.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, October 25 (Canadian Press). — The feature of the local grain trade was the weakness that developed for Ontario oats, and prices declined 3 to 4 cents per bushel with car lots of No. 2 white offering at 60 cents. No. 3 white at 58 cents, and No. 4 white at 57 cents per bushel, ex-track, while Canadian Western oats were 1 1-2 cents per bushel lower.

The demand for all the mentioned grades was limited.

Prices of winter wheat grades of flour were reduced 20c per barrel owing to the continued downward tendency of the market for raw material. The spring wheat situation was without any new feature to note, prices being steady.

ALASKA TURNS TO FOX FARMING

SEATTLE, Oct. 25.—Fox raising is becoming one of the most important industries of southeastern Alaska according to Dr. V. R. Cline, fur animal specialist of Petersburgh, Alaska, who brought 40 pairs of blue foxes here from Ketchikan, Wrangell, and Petersburg, for shipment to Shismaref, on the Arctic Ocean north of Nome, Alaska. The animals were valued at $20,000. Fox farming has been started at Shishmaref.

Many foxes are shipped to the eastern part of the United States from Alaska. One of the largest fox farms in Alaska is near Ketchikan.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Oct. 25.—The attention of polo enthusiasts soon will be focused on the Pacific Coast. Major Colin G. Ross, secretary of the Coronado Country Club, announces that the polo season at Coronado Beach, Cali., will open Jan. 1. The annual midwinter tournament, under the auspices of the American Polo Association, will be held March 1 to 20. Several cups will be competed for.

The three turf polo fields at the Coronado Country Club have been rebuilt and regrassed since last season and will be in fine condition.

FORESTERS FIND HIDDEN GLACIER

TACOMA, Wash., Oct. 25.—A new glacier has been discovered in the Olympic mountains by forest rangers. It was found on Muncaster mountain. Four foresters climbed the mountain, 7,000 feet high, and learned that the peak was split into two parts with a large glacier between them. The ice field is a mile wide.

The Olympic peninsula, between Puget Sound and the Pacific Ocean, is one of the wildest regions in the country. Parts of it have not yet been penetrated.

CHRYSLER

Why The Country Is Chrysler-Wild Today

It is a revelation to sit in a Chrysler and look up at other cars you pass. The contrast is so marked that it recalls the days when the safety bicycle obsoleted the old high wheel over night. Viewed from the snug, low-hung comfort of the Chrysler, the others look awkwardly high and unwieldy. Not only do they appear unnecessarily high, but unnecessarily heavy and cumbersome. The delight which this contrast arouses is stimulated when the Chrysler gets under way. It has a flashing acceleration which is literally a new experience. Just as it is smartly unusual in appearance and conservation of space and height and weight, so it is strikingly unusual in performance. It romps away from its unwieldier brethren with ease, on level, or grade, or hill—negotiating traffic with an alertness that must arouse chagrin in those driving heavier and more sluggish cars. It rides as no car even of its own high-quality type ever rode before. It does all of the things it is called upon to do as no other car has ever done them before. The Chrysler has blazed a new way and ushered in a new day in motoring—that is why the whole country is Chrysler-wild today.

CAVAN COUNCIL HAD A MEETING

Council Will Share Cost of Patient in Isolation Hospital.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 24.—The regular monthly meeting of the Cavan Council was held on Saturday with the members all present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

No communications.

Mr. J. McIntosh of North Monaghan township addressed the council, asking to have some crushing done on the boundary road between Cavan and Monaghan also some gravel hauled on.

On motion of Deputy-Reeve Robinson and Councillor Fallis it was decided that Cavan spend as their share $50.00, on gravelling as requested by Mr. McIntosh, and that the brushing done should extend back ten feet from the travelled road, the whole work to be under the supervision of Councillor Hooton.

Mr. H. Bigelow waited on the council asking them to pay the hospital fees of E. Edwards, who had diphtheria while at his place in the spring of 1919 and had to be sent to the Isolation Hospital in Peterboro. On motion of Councillors Hooton and Elson, Mr. Bigelow was voted $25.00 as part payment of this bill, the total being $40.00.

Messrs. J. D. Armstrong and J. H. Paul, asked the council for assistance in placing a light at the entrance of the Fresbyterian church sheds, explaining that these sheds on account of being closed and being convenient, were used a great deal by the farmers of the surrounding neighborhood.

It was moved by Councillor Elson and seconded by Deputy-Reeve Robison and carried, that Cavan pay an equal share with Millbrook for the erection of this light, providing it did not cost more than $25.00. Councillor Hooton voting nay.

SALVATION ARMY PLANS DOMINION LAND SCHEME

Would Place Men and Boys If Fund Secured.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 25.—The following was issued from Salvation Army headquarters here last night:

"In the interview with commissioners Lamb, Wednesday night, on the subject of the Salvation Army's effort to place boys and young men upon the land in the Dominion, a mistaken impression is made by the suggestion that a sum of £250,000 had been set aside out of the general funds of the army for the immigration scheme.

"The plan is as, outlined by General Bramwell Booth, that if the government will provide the land, the army will make an appeal for funds to carry out the scheme, if the sum of 200,000 is forthcoming, General Booth will undertake to find another $50,000 to make up the required amount."

THE FALL WEATHER HARD ON LITTLE ONES

Canadian fall weather is extremely hard on little ones. One day it is warm and bright and the next wet and cold. These sudden changes bring on colds, cramps and colic, and unless baby's little stomach is kept right the result may be serious. There is nothing to equal Baby's Own Tablets in keeping the little ones well. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels, break up colds and make baby thrive. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TURKISH JUDGES KEPT ON BENCH.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 25.—In order to clear crowded dockets, the Angora Government has organized new courts, each with three magistrates.

Under the old regime the magistrates were so poorly paid that they invariably resigned after a short time to find more remunerative employment. Now, however, the presidents of criminal courts receive the equivalent of $60 monthly, without allowances, and can live decently.

ANGER SHORTENS LIFE

This is the Belief of a Very Noted Chicago Expert.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—(United Press).—People die of too much love, too much anger, too much excitement, according to Dr. Nellie Buchanan Cooper, president of the American Cometicians' Society, in an address at a life extension conference here.

"People can easily live to be more than 100 years old by following four simple rules," said Dr. Cooper.

"1. Curb your temperament. If you are prone to too strong affections be warned. The alternate fear and excitement wear away life at ten times the normal rate. Don't be angry. Don't get excited about anything. Be serene and look serene.

"2. Don't overeat. Make a large proportion of your diet green vegetables.

"3. Work. Don't be afraid of hard work, but avoid long hours and fatigue."

CHURCH KEEPS TREASURE

London Church Won't Sell 400-Year-Old Tapestry.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—As a contribution to English national pride and the wide feeling that English art treasures should be kept in the country, the wardens of the little village church of Lyme Regis have rescinded their decision to sell a 400-year-old tapestry to an American buyer.

The tapestry, which depicts the marriage of Henry VII and Elizabeth of York, has hung in the church for 40 years and is beginning to feel the effect of the musty stone walls. The church council, therefore, decided to accept the offer of $25,000 made by an American, but their action caused the villagers and the rest of England, for that matter, that they now plan to spend a little money in having the piece renovated and put in a glass case.

Everybody's Friend

Life Insurance nas taken on a new importance. Everybody needs it, most people want it,—it is everybody's friend. As a result, people are asking themselves today:

"Am I insurable?"

"How can I get sufficient life insurance?"

and the answer is found in the ever-increasing number of policies now being applied for.

There is a foundation for this success: The general public is rapidly coming to realize the solid basis upon which life insurance rests; that the business is subject to a rigid system of Government inspection; and that while Life Insurance is a form of organized sharing of each other's burdens, it is managed on a sound business basis.

ENTIRE DOMINION ENTERS NEW ERA

Depression is Past and Country is on Threshold of Prosperity.

That the lowest point of depression caused by the war is past and that the entire Dominion is on the upgrade and the threshold of prosperity, is the opinion of Mr. J. F. Weston, managing director of The Imperial Life Assurance Company of Canada, given during a special interview. Mr. Weston has just returned to Toronto after an extended tour of the Dominion in the interests of his company, which took him right to the Pacific Coast. During the trip he made a close study of economic affairs.

Although Canada will, undoubtedly, forge ahead, Mr. Weston thinks there are many things we might do to aid in that progress. He advises the elimination of national, racial, or religious prejudices against agricultural workers of Europe, thus increasing and encouraging the immigration of all those suitable for agricultural pursuits. If they are honest, industrious, and accustomed to the pleasant life of Europe where they learn to wring a living from the land by laborious toil, they are the kind of people we want for our land, not those who are accustomed to and expect the best from the start, said Mr. Weston.

Touching on the problem of the dry areas in south-western Alberta, Mr. Weston said, "The only hope of this area is to abandon grain growing, go into grazing, and get more stock on the land which will provide a market for the products of these portions under irrigation." Mr. Weston deplored the grave error in placing people on these sections. "That section of the country is at a crisis which has got to be met," he said. "The grain growers have got to be removed and the land put to producing something for which it is fitted."

Strongly advising the abolition of the artificial interference with economic laws by rescinding legislation which prevented the inflow of new capital, Mr. Weston said: "Canada needs capital for its future development, but until certain Acts are rescinded and the law of contract re-established on its former recognized basis of equity as between borrower and lender, there can be no hope of capital seeking investment here to the degree that the country needs, and which its present development and potential values in the absence of these restrictions would justify."

Many areas of the Dominion inspires Mr. Weston with great confidence. "We have struck bottom and are well on the way back now," he concluded. "While crop prices were low last year, the crop was large and a great number of farmers were able to liquidate their debts. The 'spotty' crop of this year in the favored sections, commanding much higher prices, will, undoubtedly, be reflected in much more improved financial conditions. At Vancouver there is an atmosphere of buoyancy and confidence which is justified by the growing development of Vancouver as a port, due to the increasing western traffic which is bound to grow."

His Mirror Told Him of Exhausted Condition

Mr. R. Paulin, Toutes Aides, Man., writes:

"I became so run down and weak that my heart became affected, and I would sometimes have to remain in bed for several days.

Some one advised me to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I did, and soon began to gain in weight and feel better. I have taken a great many boxes of these wonderful pills, and am feeling ten years younger. Dr. Chase's Medicines, as well as his Receipt Book, are a great help to us, for we live 40 miles from doctors and railroads."

FEW MUST REGARD WELFARE OF MANY

O. T. A. Comment By J. H. Burnham—Prohibition Is Communism.

In an interview with The Examiner to-day, J. H. Burnham said:

"Prohibition is in itself a revolution. Its underlying principle is that of the great economist, Jeremy Bentham as further elaborated by John Stuart Mill, viz., the greatest good of the greatest number and the abolition of all private rights conflicting therewith. This principle, after long years of waiting, has at last come in through the door of the prohibition of liquor which denies the right to the sober citizen of having liquor at home because it is against the interests of others. The welfare of the people as a whole has now been established as predominant. All private rights follow that abolished by prohibition, into the discard those of property and capitalistic wealth especially. The condition of the proletarians is appealed to. If people thought it necessary to abolish the private right of the sober man then manifestly it is a hundred times more important that the proletariat's very existence, the family's physical and moral health, etc., should be provided for in the general interest. This is what is known as 'The Labor Question.' It is particularly what Labor in Britain is contending for. We in Ontario may therefore prepare ourselves for the prohibition of private possessions. They must be given up for the welfare of those who have not been able to provide property for themselves. Sumptuary laws such as the prohibition of liquor, tobacco, etc., etc., are but one wing of this question. There are other and more important welfares of the people even than these to be attended to. The principle has, however, been established by the O.T.A. The application of it in other respects is now but a matter of time. Ten years will see the establishment in full working order of a differential tax by which those who have will be compelled to give up for the benefit of those who have not. There will be no resisting this contention. It is the logical result of establishing the principle which has now been approved by the people by which the welfare of the many is paramount and must be preserved at the expense of private rights and possessions, just as in the case of liquor."

SEA-GIRT ICELAND GETS NEWS DAILY

Far North Part of World Not Shut Off Altogether.

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, October 25. — Iceland, isolated from the rest of the world by hundreds of miles of stormy seas, is yet one of the best-informed countries with regard to current political and social problems, and to the Icelander, even in the remote villages, the newspaper is a most valued adjunct of modern life. In this little capitol city of 22,000 inhabitants, three newspapers are published daily and there are half a dozen weeklies.

In each of the important towns one or two newspapers are published and distributed throughout the contiguous district.

The Icelanders, all of whom are literate, and most of whom are inveterate readers of the classics as well as the modern literatures, are intensely interested in events of the world at large, and in Reykjavik a press association has been formed to bring in by cable despatches from the principal capitols.

Domestic news is handled by telegraph and telephone, and in the case of some remote districts, by couriers who travel by horseback over the rough mountain trails, fording glacial rivers and oftentimes risking their or telephone office from which their despatches may be filed.

When the American world flyers reached Hornafjord in their recent flight across the Atlantic, they found awaiting them, one local newspaper correspondent who had travelled by fishing boat from Seidisfjordur, nearly two hundred miles to the eastward.

Although mails are slow in the remote districts there is an unusually comprehensive telephone and telegraph system, and most of the smaller towns are in direct touch with the capitol in this manner.

THE "GUARDSMAN" A DELIGHTFUL TRIFLE

By ALICE ROHE

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—(United Press).—The Lady or the Tiger?" of drama has appeared at the Garrick Theatre to intrigue theatregoers with the most amusing comedy of the season.

The Theatre Guild's opening bill, "The Guardsman," by Franz Molnar, is a "trifle light as air," but what a delightful and alluring trifle!

Here, too, in a nutshell as it were, we have the finest example in the theatre of that debatable subject, the American versus the continental point of view. The play at the Garrick is typically and essentially foreign in its subtle and basic idea, in its deft treatment. But its appeal is universal. With such delicate finesse and such a deft turn does Molnar take the old subject of the jealous husband masquerading to trap the wife, that we are never conscious of the light material with which he is building drama.

He has, first of all, made these character actors. Everything that happens is plausible. Besides, there is a good deal of professional jealousy betwen the two, so that infinite comedy is introduced as to the husband's playing his great part.

The Guardsman is the role assumed by the actor, who believes his wife of six months is yearning for a new type of love.

One of the enlightening bits in the play is when the critic and the husband get in a wrangle as to the number of lovers the wife had before her marriage. The critic insisting on nine against the husband's seven, brings from the husband the indignant protest against the friends casting aspersions upon his wife's character.

The husband says his wife loves the soldier type. Under pretense of an out-of-town engagement he determines to woo her as a Russian military attache. His prayer is that the wife will not succumb. But—a rapturous kiss at the opera, a rendezvous for the next day at her home. Instead of the Russian guardsman disguise, the husband appears "au naturel".

Recriminations—accusations— the wife's assertion that she recognized him all the time; the husband wanting to believe, but tortured with doubts the audience also a bit doubtful, but nevertheless having an idea —too deft a situation to even be indicated in the words of a review—one that for sheer cleverness and fine acting must be seen.

Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt, Helen Wesley and Dudley Digges as wife, husband, theatrical "mama" and critic, are completely in balance with the fine comedy.

FURS THE RAGE THIS FALL

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, N.Y., Oct. 25.—(United Press).—Women are all making a rush upon the fur shops these early fall days. Furs are being worn despite the fine weather. Short jacquettes are appearing by the hundreds until it seems that every second women must own one of these short fur affairs. Besides these jacquettes, there are numerous neckpieces and fur-trimmed coats and suits and scarcely any garment appears which is unfurtrimmed.

One is astonished at the popularity of the short jacquette this year. It seemed as though we overplayed our hand on short jacquettes during the past two Spring seasons, but they have bobbed into style again and are being worn by both matron and Miss. The 1924 jacquettes have earmarks of their own, however. First, the fur itself marks them as new models and the the length is new. The latest jacquettes come just a little below the hips and are made of natural golden muskrat, leopard cat and brown dyed caracul or sheared lamb. Lengths of 32 to 34 inch are considered ultra smart these days.

Among the popular types of jacquettes one finds the natural weasel, which is a taanish and white-toned fur. Another popular jacquette is made of white coney. This later type is worn mostly by young girls. Summer ermine, collared in natural blue fox, is a lovely combination which several well dressed women are choosing.

Brown carcaul is perhaps the most popular jacquette of the season, if one wishes to wear the most popular fur. Natural squirrel jacquettes are also coming into vogue again and these are popular with the young college Miss.

Racoon Coats.

Racoon coats of tomboy type are being sold in number to school girls. These sport coats are good looking, youthful, warm and particularly well suited to the flapper of today. They are quite inexpensive.

Another inexpensive coat which is new and very attractive is made of natural muskrat which is a golden brown fur. Long coats of this fur are trimmed with a longer and darker haired pelt and are most attractive. These will appeal to the woman of limited means who prefers a goodlooking fur coat to a model.

Brown dyed caracul is replacing seal this season, according to the furriers. Women are tiring of seal and want novelty furs. Some of these caraculs are trimmed at border and on collar and cuffs with fox or skunk or other long-haired furs. Sheared lamb is used in the same manner and is prettiest when dyed a brownish shade.

White ermine evening wraps will be as popular as they ever were. Furriers state that they can not make them up fast enough to supply the demand. This seasons' ermine is untrimmed by tails and depends upon the manipulation of the tiny skins for its chic. Wraps and capes are a bit smarter than coats for evening wear this year.

How to Wear Neckpieces

Every woman wears some sort of a neckpiece this Fall, if her garment itself is not fur-trimmed. There are several new ways of wearing the fur-piece which will give one a smart appearance. First, the one animal skin, such as the fox, is worn wrapped tight about the throat with the tail hanging down the back. Two-skinned neckpieces are worn, with one animal clasping tightly about the throat and the other animal hanging straight down the front. All furpieces are worn tight about the neck these days. Where a small animal is used, the furpiece clasps at the side with the tail extending down the back. The off-the-shoulder manner of wearing neckpieces is entirely out of style. Small animal pieces are much more in demand than larger ones this year. Fisher and fitch are furs which are seen repeatedly.

Odd Triming Notes

Summer ermine collared in badger is one of the new combinations.

Huge Hudson stoles which extend to the hem of the garment may be bordered all around with a narrow band of fitch, where one wishes to make odd bits of old fur into a 1924 model.

Hudson seal jacquettes collared and cuffed in weasel is also attractive and new in appearance.

One can combine almost any furs these days. We see brown furs trimmed in tan or gray. White furs trimmed in leopard, seal, mink, etc., and other combinations which were formerly unheard of.

DOUBT DISHONORS CHRIST.

To accept the call of Christ, and yet allow doubt, perplexity, to burden the heart in any matter of earthly conduct whatsoever, is surely to go against the very spirit of the Christian code.

In the life of a true follower of Christ there can be no dilemmas of action, nor even debatable alternatives of view. We have just to follow—that is all; and if there seems to be a doubt as to the path Christ would have us take in any practical human difficulty of the day's round, it can only be because we have let something contrary to the leading of Jesus come between us and our Guide.

For there is only one way of making sure we are followng Christ, and that is to follow close behind Him, treading in His very footsteps—get our Christianity STRAIGHT FROM THE FOUNTAIN HEAD, by making a loving, prayful study of the Gospels. All the problems and perils that now threaten Europe would vanish to-morrow if only the world would follow this one word of the Gospel Christ, "FOLLOW THOU ME."

AMERICAN COLLEGE OF SURGEONS

Approved List of Hospitals for the Year —Two Local Hospitals included

The annual official announcement of Approved Hospitals in the United States and Canada was made this morning at the Hospital Conference of the Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons, New York, by Franklin H. Martin, M.D., Director General.

The official list of hospitals meeting the minimum requirements of the American College of Surgeons presents the results of the seventh survey of hospitals of 100 beds and over the third survey of hospitals of 50-100 beds, and the preliinary survey of hospitals of 35-50 beds, making a total of 2366 hospitals surveyed, of which 1416 or 59 per cent meet the requirements.

The Director General in presenting the report said in part; "The program of the American College of Surgeons is definite, its requirements are reasonable; its methods of presentation are acceptable. The personal visits and the impartial manner in making the report appeals to the hospital as an unprejudiced effort to arrive at facts. The movement is now its own propagandist for it has proven its worth. The requirements are universally acceptable for they aim at focusing the hospitals attention directly on the care of the patient. This surely means much to the 12,000,000 patients passing through the hospitals of the United States and Canada annually.

This report is based on the findings of a detailed survey made through personal investigation, carried on by representatives from the College trained and qualified to do the work. A corps of such representatives cover the United States and Canada annually and "find the facts" about each of these hospitals as to their organization, supervision, facilities, procedures, and particularly as to how they control and check up the work of the institution.

"This movement," said Dr. M. T. MacEachern, Director of Hospital Activities, American College of Surgeons," aims directly at the elimination of deficiencies in hospital services to the patient and the establishing of closer supervision and check-up on the work of the institution. It has been rapid in its acceptance and accomplishment, because of the whole-hearted co-operation of the hospital people and public generally of the United States and Canada."

The total number of hospitals surveyed in Ontario was 56 of which 31 or 55.4 per cent. meet the requirements. This list of approved hospitals follows:

The asterisk indicates that certain hospitals have accepted the requirements which result in the best scientific care of the patient, but are not, for lack of time or other acceptable reasons, carrying them out to the fullest extent.

Disease Germs Doomed

Many have lost terrors for the Scientist

The progress of recent years in medical research is little short of marvellous. Daily, science kills germs by the million. Daily, new ones are being discovered, isolated and exterminated by the march of medicine.

Science is winning. What were once regarded as serious diseases are now laughed out of countenance by the doctors. Fearlessly they plunge naked hands into swarms of them, their only precaution being to rinse their hands afterwards with a reliable germicidal preparation. We are witnessing the birth of an era when the world will have little to fear from microbes.

Absorbine Jr., besides being the all-purpose liniment that removes pain and soreness, and hastens healing, is a powerful antiseptic that is death to the microbe world.

Absorbine Jr., is just what is needed in the house in case of accidents and to correct the many little household hurts that constantly occur. $1.25, at your druggist.

FUR POCKETS SMART

MacDONALD THREATENS TO CURB NEWSPAPERS

Premier Charges False Reports and Personal Slander.

LONDON, Oct. 25. — (Canadian Press).—In reply to a questioner at a political meeting at Taibach, Glamorganshire, Wales, yesterday, Premier Ramsay MacDonald intimated that if returned to power at the coming general election he will take steps to curb newspapers in their attitude to political opponents. He declared that the matter of false reports in the press had become very serious, especially when the great mass of the newspapers were owned, not by journalists, but simply by business men. After the election consideration must be given to the question of whether or not it is possible to stop personal slander which is malignantly manifested by persons sitting at their desks in London.

ROMANCE.

The sources of the Amazon and Orinoco rivers of South America, which thrilled you in youthful fiction, will be sought by another expedition.

Will they use canoes manned by natives, dodging alligators and giant snakes? No. The explorers will travel in airplanes, led by Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice.

Farewell, romance. Progress is dull, unthrilling. An explorer in an airplane is to the old-time adventurers like minnow fishing compared with New Bedford whaling voyages.

RUB WITH SALT

Rub egg stained spoons and other badly tarnished articles with salt before they are washed.

FABLES ON HEALTH

Anyone who can forage a little lumber can have a fresh air closet for foods, and this is an excellent method for keeping them fresh and at the same time keeping smell from the pantry.

All this is needed are a few lath some nails and a little wire gauze with a shelf or two stuck in. Almost anyone who can drive a nail should be able to make one.

Place it in a cool spot, within handy reach and, unless the weather is hot, this is a better place for food than any ice chest.

Clean earthen dishes should be used to hold the food and never in any sort of metal. Cheesecloth bags can easily be made and into these slip the plate and food. If ants should find the place put a coat of camphor around the box every two weeks or so.

About every six months take the box down and scald it thoroughly with boiling soda water.

DAWSON & JOHNSON

MUSICAL FESTIVAL AT GEORGE STREET

(By Jeannette).

The Inaugural Week, from Friday, October 24th, to Monday, November 3rd, of the Jubilee Year with which George Street Methodist Church is celebrating its half hundred years of service in the community, had a very auspicious beginning last evening in a Complimentary Musical Festival, when the big church was packed to capacity for the occasion. Nearly fifteen hundred people attended a concert which was of the highest order, and their appreciation of its excellence was evidenced by the fact that the concluding number received some of the heartiest applause and the longest encore of the evening. Every item was entertaining, the programme including numbers by the choir, which arranged the programme, under the direction of their leader, Mr. J. H. Renwick; readings by Mrs. Jessie Alexander, of Toronto; violin solos by Miss Mignon Telgmann, of Kingston, and vocal numbers by Mrs. J. H. Renwick, Mrs. M. H. Park and Mr. Maurice H. Park.

The programme opened with a few words of welcome by Rev. Mr. Young, followed by the first choral number, "Damascus," under direction of Mr. Renwick, with Mrs. W. H. Young at the piano and Miss Bessie Elcome, A.T.C.M., at the organ. Sullivan's "Say, Watchman, What of the Night?" was an unaccompanied chorus, sung in impressive, full-toned fashion by the aggregation of fine voices, and a chorus of male voices formed a background for a magnificent rendition of the lovely Miserere from "Il Trovatore," with soprano and tenor solos by Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Park. Mrs. Park's dramatic interpretation and beautiful tones were heard to wonderful advantage in this selection, with Mr. Park's fine tenor and the male voices' accompaniment. Renewed bursts of applause brought the singers back for a repetition of the final portion of the number.

Miss Alexander won her way instantly into the hearts of her audience. A consummate artist, she gives the impression of absolute ease, without any perceptible effort for the effects which she gets so easily. With a low, flexible voice that is capable of minute modulations and a lack of stiff gesticulation, she is a past mistress in the art of conveying impressions to her hearers. There was possibly not a person in the audience who saw the speaker as she talked. They saw, in turn, the little girl of the Christmas Story, the talkative Hebrew at the wedding, the two old Scots people interviewing the Prime Minister, and the voluble and hectic Mrs. 'Arris, harassing a bewildered photographer and an irritated telephone operator. Mrs. Alexander has dialect of various types at her tongue's tip. She is the sort of elocutionist who lives the characters she portrays at the moment, and her audience heard not one woman, but a variety of characters, as they listened to her varied selections.

The first reading was the pathetic little "Christmas Story" of the poor child who longed for a filled stocking at Noel time, and was enlivened by the humor of the charwoman who tells most of the tale. Its encore was the whimsical little "kiddie" piece, "The Middle One." The conversational Yiddish gentleman who went to a wedding was the hero of "Levinsky," and "The Land of Beginning Again," a little moralizing poem, followed the applause for this selection. Jean and Peter, from a tiny village in Scotland, went to interview the Prime Minister of England, taking with them, as an acknowledgment of kindness, "Willum," their pet turkey, in "A Present to the Prime Minister," followed by a definition of the word "Jubilee," and Mrs. Alexander's final appearance was in the role of the English lady, "Mrs. 'Arris," getting into difficulties with the photographer over her picture, and becoming involved in a bout with the telephone girl. The humor that abounded in all of Mrs. Alexander's selections was particularly prominent in these two numbers.

Miss Mignon Telgmann, of Kingston, a clever young violinist, delighted her audience with several beautifully-played selections. Possessor of a charming singing tone, a brilliant execution and sure, light fingering, her playing was one of the most attractive sections of a very attractive programme. Miss Telgmann's first selection was Hubay's "Hungarian Fantasy," followed by a gay, dainty encore, and she played later Rubenstein's graceful, difficult "Romance," and Godard's "Canzonetta."

Vocal solos by Mrs. J. H. Renwick and Mrs. M. H. Park were much appreciated, and met with hearty applause in both instances. Mrs. Renwick sang the charming "Piper of Dreams," by Wakefield, and gave with outstanding expressive sentiment the old favorite, "Annie Laurie," as an encore.

Mrs. M. H. Park sang with dramatic effect and clear tones the difficult "Shepherd's Song," by Elgar, and gave as an encore the lovely Scotch solo, "The Maid of Dundee."

A beautifully rendered arrangement for two pianos of the "Overture to William Tell" was given by Mrs. W. H. Young, Mrs. G. N. Moncrief, Miss Laura MacFarlane and Miss Bessie Elcome, under direction of Mr. Renwick. This exacting and massive selection, with its slow, detached opening measures quickening to swift tempo and hammered notes, was handled with ease by the quartette of skilled musicians.

Mrs. W. H. Young and Mr. J. H. Renwick made proficient accompanists for the vocal and violin numbers.

TURKEYS APPEAR AT FORTY CENTS

To-day's Market Found Butter at 40 Cents and Eggs at 50 Cents.

Already the coming event of Thanksgiving is casting its shadow before. Turkeys and geese, pumpkins and celery and sage, were on the farmers' market this morning. The noble birds that grace the Thanksgiving table were only 40 cents a pound, considerably lower than last season's opening price for turkeys. All the geese that came to market this morning were of the large variety. Two young specimens weighed 13¼ and 10 pounds respectively, and were priced at 25 cents a pound, the same quotation as obtained for smaller samples. Ducks were 28 cents and 25 cents a pound. Chickens were generally priced at 28 and 25 cents a pound, but one man had young birds at 20 cents a pound. There was a plethora of fowl in the basket section.

Butter was 40 cents a pound generally, eggs from 50 to 45 cents a dozen.

Downstairs at the entry, a crowd gathered to admire the two months' old Scotch collie pups that small boys were offering for $2 apiece. Another group of little lads had a year-old collie at the same price.

Potatoes were fairly plentiful on the open market this morning, and were selling at 80 and 90 cents a bag. Carrots were 75 cents a bag, parsnips 25 cents a peck, and white onions 40 cents. A small quantity of corn was selling at 15 cents a dozen, and small fruit tomatoes were 10 cents a quart. Hubbard squash were 10 cents apiece, and pumpkins 10 to 25 cents.

The fish man had Lake Ontario whitefish at 20 cents a pound.

Apples were much in evidence. Baxters at 25, 30 and 40 cents a peck, and $1 a bag, were having a quick sale, McIntosh Reds were 70 cents a peck, and pippens 25 cents a peck.

Grapes, green and blue, were 45 cents a basket. Green pears were 50 cents a peck. Wild grapes were 40 cents a basket.

A batch of pure-bred shining black Minorcas in a crated box were $1.50 each, and a couple of Rouen ducks were priced at $2.25 for the pair. Little Yorkshire pigs were $7 a pair.

Loads of cut hardwood were priced from $9 to $10.

Light amber honey on the open market was 17 cents a pound, or, in different quality, $1.75 for a ten-pound pail.

The auctioneer had a beautiful old chiffonier in solid walnut, with a big, round plate glass mirror that went for $13.50.

Mrs. E. Walter Clairmont (nee Mary Lonergan) held her post-nuptial reception last Thursday afternoon, 16th October, at her residence on Bay Street.

Mrs. Clairmont looked lovely in her wedding gown of ivory kittens' ear crepe, which was simply but effectively designed and held a bouquet of Ophelia roses.

Mrs. Joseph Clairmont, who received with her, wore black crepe meteor with a corsage bouquet of roses and lily of the valley.

Little Miss Margaret Mickle, in a dainty pink silk frock, acted most charmingly as 'sentinel' at the door.

The guests were shown, by Mrs. F. R. Mosbaugh, Huntsville, into the tea-room, which was very prettily decorated with roses and white and pink carnations.

Mrs. W. J. Moore of Huntsville and Mrs. F. Hornsby, who presided at the tea table, were assisted by Mrs. Armson, Miss F. Brennan, and the Misses Clairmont.

All indications point to existence of animal and vegetable life on Mars, says Professor Philip Fox of North-western University.

Tropical temperature on Mars at noon is only 10 above freezing, claims another celebrated astronomer, speaking for Carnegie Institution of Washington. He figures our thermometers never would register higher than 42 anywhere on Mars. The south polar tem up there is 95 below zero. You can imagine life existing under such conditions.

Here are two competent authorities seemingly irreconcilably far apart. It makes you wonder whether there is anything more uncertain than "exact science."

Karl Pearson, celebrated scientist, shatters the notion that children grow stronger with age. His studies convince him that "on the average the health of the child of four will not be sensibly modified as he grows older."

Those first four years are the most important, for health. Especially the first, babyhood.

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

by Shirley Sharon

O'Rossen, the famous French habit-maker, introduces the tailored note which has carried over from his classical tailleur into the bosom front, club collar and bound pocket of the tailored dress.

THE influence of the tailored note introduced by O'Rossen is being felt in the new fashions. The braid binding which O'Rossen uses on many of his tailored jackets, the tucked bosom of his blouses, his slit pockets and the general air of neat distinction that characterizes his models are reflected in many of the new coat frocks. These dresses must of course be made in fairly firm material, for the lines are extremely straight. Wool rep, wool crepe, cashmere, twills and heavy silk crepe are generally used for them.

So walked he from his birth,

HAMLIN. — In loving memory of our dear mother Mrs. J. E. Hamlin, who departed this life, 25th October, 1923.

Dear mother, on grief's weighted wing, one long year has passed by,
Since Jesus called you home, to dwell with Him in bliss on high;
From all your suffering, bravely borne, death brought a sweet release,
And in the Paradise of God, eternal rest and peace;
While loneliness and sorrow fills our hearts, and dull and drear
Our once bright home, without your smile to gladen and to cheer,
God grant us grace, to kiss the rod, nor selfishly complain
And mourn our loss, which proved to you, such great and glorious gain.
To sorrow not as rest of hope, though we can ne'er forget,
For oh, with you, our life's bright sun in darksome shadows set,
But we will strive to tread the path, which you with saintly patience trod,
'Twill lead us safely home, at last, to our dear mother and to God;
In those celestial mansions fair, upreared by His almighty hand,
Where blooms the Tree of Life, beside the river of Emmanuel's Land,
Where the inhabitant from pain and sickness is for ever free,
And tears are wiped from every eye, and death and parting ne'er can be.

"Not I. I'm here to help—why, Nancy, I was in bed, and I heard the telephone, and I heard our people talking about it—somebody was telling Dad the news—and I just hopped up and skittled into my togs, and ran over."

"I'll take you home, Dolly," and Kent rose.

"No, Orry, you don't understand. I've a bit of detective instinct. Nan, you needn't pretend you're sorry he's dead——"

"Dolly, be quiet!" Miss Mattie glared at her. "You're a wicked little thing, and I order you to go."

"But you're not mistress here, Miss Mattie."

She was an impertinent, forward child, yet something in her manner made Ezra Goddard feel that she might be of use, and he said:

"Let the child stay if she likes. No possible witness ought to be ignored. Did you hear the shot fired, Miss Fay?"

"Oh, no! If I had I'd have been over here at once. At what time did it happen?"

"A few minutes before seven," Goddard answered.

"Before seven? Then that's just when Orry and I stood on the little bridge—too far away to hear a shot—who did it?"

The girl's big eyes moved slowly from one to another.

Then she nodded her head. "A bad man from outside, of course. Did anybody see anything of him? I know who he was."

"You know who he was!" Detective Dobbins fairly jumped.

"Well—I can't say positively, of course, but—there's one way to look—you know whom I mean, Miss Mattie."

And the queer child refused to mention the person she had in mind, and Miss Raynor declared she had no knowledge of what Dolly meant.

"I attach little importance to this baby-talk," said Dobbins, grandly. "Mrs. Raynor, I must ask you a few personal questions. Would you prefer to see me alone—on the subject?"

"No," said Nan, faintly, and her hand slid into her brother's, while Dolly Fay, on her other side, patted her arm affectionately; "I will answer anything you ask—right here."

"Indeed, you will," put in Miss Mattie. "You're in a desperate position, Nancy—I want to hear what you have to say. For it is an open secret

"You are not being interrogated, Miss Raynor," Goddard interrupted her; "kindly be silent."

"Be silent yourself, Mr. Goddard. You are, I know, a friend of Mr. Finley, and you, of course, fear any disclosures that will involve him; but let me tell you those disclosures must be made—the affair of Nancy and Malcolm Finley must be made public, and then the motive for the doing away with my poor brother can no longer be a mystery."

"Oho!" and Dobbins looked enlightened, "that's how it is, is it? Now, Mrs. Raynor, since you are ready to answer me, just what were your personal relations with your late husband?? Amicable or—otherwise?"

"Amicable, certainly," and Nan's clear, cool voice came as a surprise to all who listened.

"Ah—certainly." The detective was at a loss just how to carry on his grilling process. "You held your husband, then, in high esteem?"

"Indeed, yes, Mr. Dobbins."

"Mrs. Raynor," the detective looked at her severely, "you have a different mental attitude now from that which you showed when I questioned you before. I may say you have a grip on yourself. I cannot, therefore, place entire confidence in your statements. I shall have to ask corroboration. Miss Raynor, do you assert that there was no jarring note in the marital attitude of Mr. and Mrs. Raynor?"

"I do not assert that, Mr. Dobbins, but the contrary. My brother and his wife were both uncongenial and unhappy. They had few, if any, tastes in common—there was constant friction, even quarrels."

Nancy Raynor looked at Miss Mattie with a cold scorn that would have withered a less belligerent nature.

And then the medical examiner came in from the other room.

"There are strange developments in this case," he said; "I suggest, Mr. Dobbins, that you defer your further questioning until morning. I must also inform you, Mrs. Raynor, that we have to take away your husband's body to-night. An autopsy is necessary. Dobbins, let everything remain as it is until to-morrow. The household may retire—nobody may leave the house—who is this child?"

"I'm Dolly Fay—a neighbor. I'm going to stay the night with Mrs. Raynor."

"But, Dolly, dear," Nan said, gently, "what will your mother think when she finds your room vacant?"

"Oh, that's all right. I pinned a note on my pillow, telling her I had come over here."

Fraser, the county examiner, gave a few more instructions to the detective and went away.

CHAPTER VI.
A Lot Yet To Be Told.

Dolly Fay slept in Douglas Raynor's room, and though she was asleep as soon as her head touched the pillow, Nan Raynor, in the adjoining room, was busily moving about for a long time. But when at last sheer exhaustion made Nan fall into troubled slumber as daylight began to dawn, Dolly awoke refreshed and alert.

She hopped out of bed and ran to look for Nan. Seeing her asleep, the girl tiptoed away, and her quick eyes caught sight of a bit of folded paper under the door.

She picked it up and without unfolding it, laid it on Nan's dressing-table. Then, reconsidering, she woke Nan up to tell her of it.

Wide awake at once, "Give it to me," the older woman said.

Sitting up in bed, she read these lines:

Dear Heart: At least, please be advised by me in this. Keep a quiet but gentle pose and answer questions straight forwardly, but admit nothing.—M. F.

Silently Nan meditated on this, until Dolly, tired of waiting for her to speak, leaned over her and read the missive too.

"What does he mean, Nan?" she asked.

"What he says, I suppose. It's good advice and I shall follow it. Dolly, you wormed yourself into this thing—you had no right to read this note——"

"Oh, don't you be afraid of me, Nancy. I won't tell a single thing you don't want me to."

"Oh, why are you here at all? I shouldn't have let you stay—but I was so dazed and troubled last night I scarcely realized that you were here."

"Now, Nan, I'm here to help you. Honest, I won't tell a thing you don't want me to—why, what have you been doing? Here's a whole heap of ashes in the fireplace! You been burning things?"

"It's chilly, isn't it? Let's start a little fire."

Hastily and rather nervously, Nan laid on some wood from a basket and Dolly ran for a match. Soon a fire was blazing and into it Nan thrust the note she had just read.

She sank into a low chair before the fire and asked Dolly to ring for her maid.

"We'll have tea here, Dolly, and then we'll dress and go down to breakfast."

NEW STRENGTH FOR WEAK STOMACHS

Indigestion Disappears When the Blood is Enriched.

The urgent need of all who suffer from indigestion is a tonic to enrich the blood. Pain and distress after eating is the way the stomach shows that it is too weak to perform the work of digesting the food taken. In this condition some people foolishly resort to purgatives, but these only further aggravate the trouble.

New strength is given weak stomachs by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills because these pills enrich and purify the blood. This is the natural process of giving strength and tone to the stomach, and it accounts for the speedy relief in stomach disorders that follow the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The appetite revives, food can be taken without discomfort and the burden and pains of indigestion are dispelled. Miss Mollie Averill, Clanwilliam, Man., proves the value of these pills in cases of this kind. She says: "Some years ago I had a terrible attack of stomach trouble. My stomach rejected all food and I could not even keep down a light custard. I tried some tablets recommended for dyspepsia, but they did not do me a particle of good. Then I got medicine from a doctor, but with no better results. By this time I had changed from a robust, healthy girl to a compelte skeleton, losing flesh daily. Then my parents asked me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I began their use. After taking them for a short time I began to feel better and continued the treatment until I was completely restored to health. Since, on rare occasions when I have felt the need of a tonic, I turn to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they never disappoint me. Most members of our family have at some time taken the pills with good results, so I now always recommend them to all in need of a reliable tonic."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PRINCE SAILED TO-DAY.

Small Crowd at Pennsylvania Gathered to see Him Off.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The Prince of Wales sailed away on the Olympic at one o'clock this morning.

The Prince sailed at an hour when most of the good citizens were in bed. There was very little formality to his going, only a few in the rotunda of Pennsylvania Station and outside the big doors of Pier 59, a retinue of police, a throng of newspapermen and a cluster of men. The evening hours the Prince spent aboard the Olympic with his personal staff.

A BONFIRE SETS FIRE TO A HOUSE

Two Omemee Families Driven From Their Home.

OMEMEE, October 25. — At ten o'clock this morning, a blaze which is supposed to have had its origin in a bonfire started to burn leaves, nearly decimated the large brick house on Sturgeon Street, owned by the estate of the late Mrs. Dornan, and occupied by two families, those of Mr. Charles Davis and Mr. A. Clement.

The bonfire is supposed to have ignited the first of a long string of sheds at the rear of the premises and to have crept unnoticed to the house.

The blaze was extinguished with difficulty, after the roof was demolished, the windows smashed, and a large portion of the house destroyed.

LOCAL OPTION IS NOT CONTEMPLATED

People Will Get What They Voted For as a Majority, Says Premier.

TORONTO, October 25. — Very little change in the standing of the vote on Ontario Temperance Act was apparent this morning. The majority for prohibition hovered around 40,000 with several hundred polls still to be heard from. It is not likely that any close estimate of the majority can be formed until the official count is announced.

Premier Ferguson was asked if the government would bring in a local option bill in view of the fact that most of the bigger centres of population had voted against prohibition. "The government cannot give any concessions to the wet cities," replied Mr. Ferguson. "The result of the vote is apparent, and the issue was one clearly defined and agreed upon by both parties beforehand."

This morning 6591 sub-divisions out of 7332 show the following:

For the Ontario Temperance Act, 542,196.

For Government control, 501,828.

Dry majority, 40,368.

CONTAGIOUS.

In reading medical news, keep in mind the difference between contagious and infectious.

An infectious disease is "caught" by direct contact with the diseased part. A contagious disease can be gotten indirectly, by germs carried through air or water, no direct contact with a diseased patient.

Cancer is infectious. It is not contagious, according to present medical opinion—which may change.

QUEBEC'S LOYALTY TO BRITAIN THEME OF ADDRESS BY R. R. HALL

Preserved Canada For British Empire Against Aggressions of American Colonies.

HISTORY'S RECORD.

Address at Open Meeting of Knights of Columbus—Plea For Unity.

Quebec's allegiance to the British Crown, her stewardship of British interests in North America against the solicitations and aggressions of the former English colonies along the Atlantic seaboard, and the special potential asset she offers Canada as an inspiration to encourage the teaching of both the French and the English languages so that Canadian trade might seek broader and farther markets, were the main divisions and arresting themes of a notable address delivered by Mr. R. R. Hall, K.C., on the subject, "A United Canada, its Past and Future," at an open meeting of the Knights of Columbus at their club rooms on Simcoe Street.

An extensive knowledge of Canadian history presented with dramatic arrangement of facts and a persuasive eloquence combined in this lecture, the first of the K. C. series this season, to set up a standard which the chairman, Mr. W. S. Merrell, declared would be difficult to maintain.

Canada in the first years of the British administration was of secondary importance to the English colonies to the South, Mr. Hall intimated, but the Union Jack dominated America in the brief period from the Treaty of Paris that ceded Canada to Britain to the American Revolution which severed the English colonies from their Motherland and left British interests in the custody of old Quebec, which a few years before had been New France.

With such striking contrasts Mr. Hall traced the early history of Canada for the purpose, he said, of stimulating interest in this country's beginnings and its progress to nationhood in order that Canadian conditions and problems may be fully understood, and that mutual respect and sympathy may prevail in Canada's domestic affairs.

Introductory to his main historical subject, Mr. Hall sketched a perspective of the old colony of New France, selecting some of the more vivid colours to illumine the broad background which he suggested for closer study. He turned back 300 years to the coming of Samuel de Champlain. Three centuries did not seem a long time in the history of Europe, but they were long in the history of North America. Only the North American Indians had preceded Champlain in his exploration of what is now the Province of Ontario. He had followed the Trent water course from Georgian Bay down the Severn River and the chain of lakes, through Cameron Lake, Fenelon Falls, Pigeon Lake, skirting the shores of what is now the Township of Ennismore, portaging down the Chemong Road to Peterborough two hundred years before the Peter Robinson immigration from England.

Canadian Martyrs.

Mr. Hall dwelt upon the missionary zeal of the first French colonists and paid tribute to the devotion and self-sacrifice of the Jesuits in their work of Christianising the Indians, and as an illustration of the hardship and suffering they endured, Mr. Hall referred effectively to the martyrdom of Lalement and Brebeouf, remarking that the last things in the lives of these priests told so much of what had gone before.

The great historian Parkman paid them the remarkable tribute that a fervent zeal more rare, a self-abnegation more complete, and a self-devotion more constant and enduring had seldom found its record on the pages of human history. The French-Canadians of Ontario, said Mr. Hall, have a century of glorious memories in the noble sacrifices of the Jesuit fathers, and in the discoveres of the great French explorers—Samuel de Champlain, La Salle, Marquette, and Joliet. French-Canadians should not be deprived of the inspiring advantage of reading of their noble achievements in the French tongue.

Take 2 Quebec

Allegiance Changed.

"The Canadian people rejoice that the names of those two valiant soldiers, Wolfe and Montcalm have been perpetuated together on the Plains of Abraham. The only apparent change which followed their deaths at Quebec was that French Canada changed its allegiance from France to Great Britain. In practically all other respects the French Canadian lived under the new regime as under the old, his religion, his language and civil rights preserved to him, living in the full enjoyment of personal liberty, probably to a greater extent than if he had remained under the crown of France."

The province of Quebec in those days extended through all the province of Ontario, reaching south of Lake Erie to the Ohio river, west to the Mississippi and north to Hudson Bay.

"Momentous events were rapidly developing in America at that time, events which have since vastly affected the whole world," Mr. Hall proceeded. "At that time the thirteen English colonies on the Atlantic coast were seething with rebellion. These colonies had sprung from the Motherland, whereas the only other British province in North America was that which a short time before had been new France, the old province of Quebec. And yet we have this amazing fact, these young colonies of Britain rose up against her and severed their allegiance to her, while the newly won French province of Quebec stood loyally by the British Crown.

Repulsed By Quebec.

Quebec had made her choice. Remember there were all sorts of temptations to her to throw in her lot with the rebellious British colonies on the Atlantic coast. These states even threatened her. Montgomery and Arnold came to the very gates of Quebec, but they were repulsed.

Remember, too, that France, then the greatest military power in Europe, was arrayed against Great Britain, and the colony which a few years before had been New France, might have been expected to take advantage of any opportunity to break away from her new sovereign. Quebec, however, stood true to Britain, to herself and to that greater Canada which was to grow up around her. Be it said to the French Canadian's credit that he preserved the northern half of this continent for Britain and for Canada, for the British institutions we uphold, and for the freedom which we as Canadians enjoy."

The War of 1812-1815.

That was a heritage of fidelity and glory enough, said Mr. Hall, but barely two generations later in the years of 1812-15, this country, then upper and lower Canada was put to a new test. Another civil commotion disturbed this continent. Great Britain was engaged in the great war with Napoleon. She had in fact been engaged for upwards of twenty years in a great war, equal in many respects to the recent war against Germany. Napoleon was swayed by the vain ambition of ruling the continent of Europe. The designs of Napoleon were fully known in America. Those thirteen colonies knew that Great Britain was then fighting for her very existence, that Napoleon had dreams of an overlordship of the world. When Great Britain was in the very throes of that struggle the United States declared war on Britain and attacked her through her Canadian colony.

The people of Quebec were well aware of the ascending power of France, of the military glories which Napoleon was winning in Europe, but their answer in that hour of the Empire's danger was a demonstration of Canadian unity which we of to-day should do our utmost to preserve.

The French Canadians again stood loyally by Great Britain and helped thrust back the enemy. They laid down their lives in holding the eastern part of the boundary while Upper Canada was holding the west. We look back with satisfaction and pride to the deeds of those years and the glorious chapters written into our history by Brock at Queenston Heights and de Salaberry at Chateguay. Those Canadians of one hundred years ago fought side by side in a glowing spirit of unity that held this country safe within the British family.

The U. E. Loyalists.

Mr. Hall referred in passing to the coming of the United Empire Loyalists, driven from the United States into Canada, suffering great hardships in their pioneer days in Ontario where they found shelter and sanctuary. Much as they have done for Canada, the French Canadians did more, and in many places it was the hospitality of the French settlers that provided the small comforts and cheer for the U. E. Loyalists coming as strangers into a land that was rough and strange but friendly. In many instances they shared the rude homes and simple fare of the French Canadians until they began preparing their own lands and homes where they established themselves and their families and flourished in this province.

"These are some of the events and circumstances of Canada's past which we, as true Canadians, should consider," said Mr. Hall.

Annexationist Movement.

"Coming down to a more recent time we touch upon an episode in our history which I shall simply gloss over, because it is a sore spot, an old but unforgotten wound. I refer to incidents of 1849. About the year 1840 there was a strong agitation in Britain for free trade with all parts of the world. Canada had enjoyed a preferential tariff with Great Britain and the special advantages it afforded, but with the free trade movement in the Mother Country many Canadians raised severe criticisms against her. A manifesto was drawn up and incidentally one of the objects set forth in that document was to settle the race question for ever by bringing to bear on French-Canadians the powerful assimilative forces of the republic of the United States. Such a commotion developed here that they said, "We'll throw off allegiance to Britain, and we'll join the United States." Right here in Ontario, also in Montreal, but not among its French-Canadians, this seditious disturbance was heard. For the third time, however, French-Canadians demonstrated that they were with Great Britain. Quebec turned her back on the annexationist movement of that time. She steadied and supported the true Canadian spirit, and proved again that she desired to remain a part of the British commonwealth of free nations, true and loyal to the British Crown and loyal to herself and to the young Dominion of Canada."

Mr. Hall commended to his audience the study of this country's history in order that the problems of the present and future might be faced and handled intelligently and with those broad sympathies that should conduce to goodwill and understanding among the people to a glowing, vital national spirit and a commanding place among the nations.

A Bilingual Asset.

Mr. Hall advanced the idea that Canada should make greater practical use of the French language in dealing with the world of business and commerce. There are to-day 250,000 French-Canadians in Ontario, four times as many as there were in Quebec when Wolfe and Montcalm met. One-seventh of the population of Quebec are English-speaking people, and one-twelfth of Ontario are of French ancestry.

"Many of the people of Ontario say they would not learn French," Mr. Hall continued. "Such people do not appreciate the fact that French is one of the great languages of the world, and a knowledge of it opens the doors of opportunities that are otherwise shut. It is the great neutral language of the civilized world."

One hundred and sixty million people speak the English language, Mr. Hall said, seventy million speak French and one hundred and twenty-five million speak kindred tongues, such as Italian and Spanish. Eighty per cent. of our foreign trade is with English-speaking people.

A Trade Disparity.

The total imports of France amount to $2,400,000,000, and of every $133 of that business Canada's share is one dollar, whereas with the United States Canada secures one dollar in every nine dollars of their trade, and one dollar in every thirteen dollars of Britain's imports. Why should there be such a disparity, Mr. Hall asked, between Canada's exports to Britain and the United States on the one hand, and to France on the other. We realize our natural assets of the mines, and forests, agriculture and fisheries, but in the realm of commerce we have neglected the asset of an additional language with which we could open up new avenues of trade for our products.

Even Great Britain before the war neglected to make use of the French language, Mr. Hall stated. Germans took advantage of this, a became employees of great Engli exporting houses, diverting Engli trade into German channels. Charles Wakefield, then Lord Ma of London, said that in future mutual study of the French a English languages should be a co pulsory part of the curriculum every English college.

Mr. Hall cited instances that ca within his own observation in whi business in the Argentine had be developed by sending to that count business men who could speak language. Encouragement of ed cation in both the French and En lish languages would equip Can dians to deal with and associate wi not only the English-speaking peop of the world, but the French-spea ing people also. Such Canadia would take their place in the va guard of the world, and Canadi business and trade would be capab represented wherever the English a French languages were spoken.

In conclusion, Mr. Hall dissociate himself from that ideal entertain by some who contemplated a natio composed of people as uniform nails turned out of a steel mill, eve nail like every other nail, the sam length and thickness, the same head the same material.

"It's not uniformity we want," d clared Mr. Hall, "it is diversity diversity of intellect, of thought, belief, and of independent mind These are the people who woul make a great and glorious race."

Quebec Individuality.

"We have noticed that rural Qu bec has been increasing while rur Ontario has been decreasing. W in Ontario are looking to the Unite States for our ideals and aspiration We copy anything that is American We read their newspapers, magazine and books, we go to their plays. I fact, when you travel from Toront to Buffalo the two communities ar so similar that you don't feel an difference of country or people. Bu when you go to Quebec you feel great difference. They have a dis tinct nationality, whereas we lack na tional individuality and aspirations It seems that the spirituality of thi part of Canada has been conquere and possessed by the influence of th United States. The Canadians o Quebec preserve their individuality Why should not we develop and solidify a distinct Canadian nation ality, diverse it may be, but our very own.

Mr. Hall declared that as nation are judged by their treatment of thei minorities Canada should keep tha thought perpetually in mind, remem bering her past glories, her seeds o unity and magnanimity, and in he progress to future greatness should be guided by the truth enunciated by the celebrated Lord Acton that "the most certain test by which we judge whether a country is really free is the amount of security enjoyed by its minorities."

We should ever remember in our provincial and national life that faith is better than force, that hope is better than fear, and love is better than hate. If we proceed on these broad lines the two great branches of the Canadian people shall march abreast in the vanguard of human progress, parents and guardians of freedom and justice, with mutual respect and toleration, wherever Canadian influence may stand and the Canadian tongue is spoken.

A standing vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Hall on a motion by Monsignor McColl, seconded by M. J. J. Duffus, both of whom, with Rev. J. V. McAuley, warmly congratulated the speaker on the substance and the manner of his address.

Several vocal solos were sung by Miss Ernestine McManus, accompanied by Miss Giroux.

The evening concluded with the singing of the National Anthem and a pleasant social intercourse.

BRITISH BASEBALL CROWD SAW THRILLING BATTLE IN SILENCE

Giants Defeat White Sox 3-2 With Ninth Inning Rally—Duke of York Meets McGraw and Players.

TRIPLE PLAY WAS FEATURE.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—The New York Giants and the Chicago White Sox, in their second exhibition game in England, Friday gave several thousand British "fans" a demonstration of big league baseball. The Giants won a most thrilling game by the score of 3 to 2 with a ninth inning rally.

Among the interested spectators were the Duke and Duchess of York, the son of King George was received by Ambassador Kellogg and introduced to John McGraw, the Giants' manager. In addition the Duke met the players and insisted on shaking hands with each of them.

The Giants, playing at their best, held on to a slim one run lead until the eight inning when the Sox drove two runs over the plate. But the apparent victors had their seeming triumph snatched away from them by the New York rally when two runs were scored. On the fielding side there was a rare bit of baseball excellence in the sixth inning when the Chicago infield evolved a triple play.

Now and then many of the British spectators were moved to an expression of their feelings. Ocasionally some of the natives even clapped their hands and a few followed the example of the Americans present by using their vocal cords somewhat strenuously, but they were the exceptions.

The field on which the game was played was soggy, from recent rains and some few hits were scratchy, as pitchers often slipped in fielding bunts. There were no home runs as it had been decided before the game that a hit into the stands would be good for only a two bagger. But Bancroft in the eighth laced a triple to right field, his ball bounding over Meusel's head. His drive scored Mostil and he himself came in on a single by Rice. Stangel twice got doubles into the bleachers and thus drove in all three Giant runs.

English newspaper men confers surprise at the appearance of the visitors and one of them writes:

"I bet you ten dollars to the cat's pajamas that they are utterly unlike anything England has ever expected a baseball outfit to resemble. I expected a gang of huskies, a bunch of toughs with a Bowery accent and an Apache slouch. Instead, I met eighteen clear-eyed American university graduates, shy as a bevy of school girls, and, between ourselves, one of the best-looking bands of athletes which have landed in England.

" 'Why are you like this?' I asked in disgust. 'You've ruined my report. England expects you to chew gum and talk like O. Henry. We think baseball professionals are champion thick-ear merchants and the last word in slugging.'

"I then learned that financially it is much better to be a first-class pitcher of the White Sox than Prime Minister of England and it is a much safer job, too. First-class baseball salaries average £3,500 a year. No wonder these lads bristle with gold cigarette cases and platinum watches

Are Diverted Intellectuals

"In short, modern professional baseballers are diverted lawyers, doctors and possibly Presidents of the United States, and over the Martinis to which like all good prohibitionists, they gravitated as if obeying a natural law, we were soon discussing Thomas Hardy, Shakespeare, Mussolini, President Coolidge and Ramsay MacDonald's Russian loan."

Another reporter writes: "When one realizes that all American baseball players are popularly supposed to be the least reserved and retiring the fact that I mistook one of them for a Sunday school teacher is all the more surprising. I found him uttering a mild rebuke to an able seaman who appeared to be incapable of washing the foredeck without throwing water over passengers. 'Be careful, Henry,' he was saying, 'you're wetting my feet.' "

Tom Webster has an amusing cartoon in The Daily Mail in which he essays to describe some of the personalities one sees at a baseball game. The umpire, we are told, wears a mattress and head shield and is thrown at principally by the visiting crowd. The catcher is a man who issues instructions to his pitcher and only speaks nicely when he is at home. The pitcher gets so much money that he would employ Rockefeller to put oil in his car. The batter has an allowance that sounds like the national debt. The duty of the rooter is to tell the other side their short comings as public entertainers.

"Needless to say," adds Webster, "a rooter has no soul." In proof of this, Webster gives a caricature of a rooter who is yelling, "Call yourself a pitcher! You've got a frozen arm, a glass elbow and your chewing gum is false."

STENROOS DEFEATED.

Olympic Victor Sixth In Helsingfors Road Race.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Albin Stenroos, 40-year-old Finnish victor in the Olympic Marathon last July at Paris, was decisively beaten recently in a modified Marathon on the streets of Helsingfors, capital of Finland, according to reports reaching here. He finished sixth in the race, but his poor showing was explained on the ground that he was handicapped by a foot injury. Because of his foot injury, Stenroos competed in this year's veterans' class and won, but was beaten by rivals in the free-for-all category.

LANDIS SILENT ON BRIBERY SCANDAL

Will Disclose Evidence When He Thinks It Is Needed.

CHICAGO, October 25 (Canadian Press). — Kenesaw M. Landis, baseball commissioner, said yesterday that the testimony of Cozy Dolan and Jimmy O'Connell, members of the New York Giants involved in the bribery scandal preliminary to the World Series, would be revealed whenever in his judgment, it would serve a useful purpose in clearing up the situation.

Answering the question whether Dolan and O'Connell had been banished for ever from organised baseball, the commissioner said they had been placed on the ineligible list.

He refused to amplify the statement. His original statement, issued at the time of his action against the two players, covered the situation, he said.

"Judge Landis does not intend to furnish ammunition to anybody interested in getting Dolan and O'Connell back into baseball," Leslie O'Conner, his secretary, said.

VAST RICHES OF BAKU FACE RUIN

Negligence is Letting Baku Oil Fields on Caspian Sea Go To Waste.

BAKU, Azerbaijan, Sept. 25. — (Associated Press).—No part of Russia seems to possess more attractions for the American capitalist and business man than the great Baku oil fields on the Caspian Sea. If properly developed these wells are capable of producing sufficient gasoline, kerosene, lubricating oil, vaseline and by-products to keep the entire world supplied, it is said. But in their present state the fields present a melancholy picture. Only a small percentage of them are in actual operation. The great wooden derricks and the pumps, compressors and drills on the remaining wells are fast falling into decay. It is as if a great storm had suddenly visited a primeval forest, stripping the trees of their limbs and roots, and leaving ruin and desolation in its wake.

At a distance the idle, decaying derricks, which cover an area of 60,000 acres, resemble a vast cemetery of conical tombstones. Scarcely a vapor of smoke issues from the blackened wells or the neighboring refineries to give the sombre picture any form of animation: Only here and there does one see a workman. The interminable rows of small wooden houses which in Czarist days housed the tens of thousands of employes, have degenerated into wretched hovels, for the most part deserted and ruined. The roads leading from the city are in a deplorable state, and it is a positive punishment to traverse them even in a cushioned automobile.

This stagnation is due to Soviet Russia's lack of capital, modern machinery and technical skill to develop the oil-fields, which were taken over by the state soon after the 1918 revolution. "We have not the means nor the necessary equipment to work these fields properly," said an Azerbaijan Soviet official frankly to the correspondent, "and we are anxious to have American capital and American engineering skill."

When asked upon what terms American oil promoters would be admitted to Baku, the Soviet official referred the correspondent to Moscow. It is obvious from this that no concessions or privileges in the oil fields can be granted by the Azerbaijan Government without the consent of the central Government at Moscow.

According to the Moscow Government, the Baku fields are now producing only slightly less than the output of pre-war days. But a visit to the fields failed to confirm such roseate figures. Only at the refinery of the Nobel brothers, now nationalized by the Soviet as Russian state property, was there anything like normal activity. Here the monthly production of oil and its by-products was said to be sufficient to take care of all of Russia's needs and to provide a considerable quantity for export abroad.

LAUDS U. S. CHAMPION

British Leader Admits Bobby Jones Is About Three Shots Better Than Rest of World.

ROGER WETHERED

From across the surging Atlantic comes one of the finest tributes ever paid to an American champion in sports. Roger Wethered, England's great amateur golfer, says Bobby Jones, former American open and present amateur champion, is about three shots better than any other golfer in the game to-day. This is to say, according to Wethered, that Jones can spot any golfer in the world three strokes at the start of a match and then finish even or better.

TOBACCO.

Time makes peculiar changes in economics. A faded old newspaper reminds us that Virginia in 1755 fixed the salary of a clergyman at 16,000 pounds of tobacco a year.

It's a rare clergyman who gets the equivalent today. An odd state of affairs, that the most important "calling" in life pays the least.

GLUTTON.

Discovered: the dairy of Rev. Woodforde, who died over a century ago. He describes a dinner he attended in 1774: "The first course was a large Cod, a Chine of Mutton, some Soup, a Chicken Pye, Puddings and Roots, etc. Second Course, Pidgeons and Asparagus, a Fillet of Veal with Mushrooms and High Sauce, roasted Sweetbreads, hot Lobster, Apricot Tart and in the middle a Pyramid of Syllabubs and Jellies. We had a Dessert of Fruit after Dinner, and Madeira, white Port and red to drink as wine."

Maybe he dug his grave with his teeth, but he lived past 60. Our generation isn't less gluttonous, it simply can't pay the bill.

IT WAS DAN O'LEARY WHO GAVE THE KIDS THIS GAME

DAN O'LEARY AND LITTLE GIRL PLAYING "ONE, TWO, THREE, O'LEARY."

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 24.—Ever see a little tike of the crowded district bouncing a ball over first one leg, then the other, chanting the while the little rhyme.

One, two, three, O'Leary,
I spy Dr. Seary,
Sitting on a bumboleary
Like a little fairy?

Of course you have. Almost every little girl in Canada and the United States plays the game and loves it.

But few of them know the man who originated it was none other than Dan O'Leary, 84-year-old champion pedestrian, who has won contests without number in the United States and Europe.

"Years ago when I was teaching school in Chicago," said old Dan, who is still engaging in walking contests, "I noticed that the children were trying to invent some game to play when they had really no space for the usual games.

"About all the little girls could do was to toss a ball up in the air and catch it. There wasn't any exercise in that.

"So I conceived the idea of having the ball bounced over each leg alternately. But that would be a humdrum affair without some accompaniment, so I began humming a rhyme to accompany the play. The first thing that came to me was 'one, two, three, O'Leary lilt.

"I taught the children of my school to play it. Now it is all over the continent."

O'Leary attributes his health to his routine of exercise, consisting chiefly of walking and leg exercises and the fact that he is careful with his diet. He seldom eats meat but is fond of butter. He puts it in his coffee, his soup, his breakfast food and on pies and other forms of pastry.

DE LAVAL LOSE TO QUAKERS IN BEST OF THREE

WIN FOR BELMONTS.

Club Men Hand Beating To Rotarians—Kiwanians Rout Triple Link.

The fastest game last night and one of the best games played this season, was staged between the De Laval and the Quaker Oats, the latter winning after nine close innings by the score of 6 to 3.

Frank Dyer was on the firing line for the losers and pitched a nice game, but a few minor slips by his team mates robbed him of a victory. Carruthers did the twirling for the winners and whiffed six of the Separator boys while the Quaker Oats whole team were always on their toes.

BELMONTS WIN.

The Rotary team, well strengthened with "ringers," was not quite strong enough to pull through with the victory over the Belmonts that they were counting on. It was a wild old game but the heavy hitters from the Belmont Club drove the ball too hard for some of the old lads to handle. Nevertheless, the Rotarians put up a game battle but the final count was 21 to 13 in the Belmonts' favor.

Holyman started for the winners, but was relieved by Stuart in the third innings, who finished the game. Matthews did the twirling for the losers.

TRIPLE LINK EASY.

The Triple Link were very weak both offensively and defensively, and the Kiwanis with a strengthened lineup walked all over the Oddfellows, and when the last man up had popped to the pitcher the score was 19 to 1 in favor of the Kiwanains. McLean pitched sterling ball for the winners, holding his opponents to 7 scattered hits, while Bob Mackey and the rest of the gang behind him were unbeatable.

Price on the mound for the Triple Link was hit hard and often but the score would have been much closer had his team mates given him any kind of support.

THE CALL OF THE NORTH WOODS

Never do the great American North Woods call so insistently, never are they so full of beauty as during this magic month of October, when the mornings are sparkling cool and clear, when the wild goose honks over the still lakes, when the trees are a symphony in crimson, green and gold, when the sun goes down like a ball of fire and all night long the quivering northern lights play across the sky.

Then it is that you long to leave the city's dust and din, the ticker, the telephone, the typewriter, the newspaper, stiff collars and razors all behind and answer the call of the northern wilds. You see the trail of the moose on the spongy moss. You hear the call of the wild things of the forest, the song of a bullet through the clean cool air and the crash of your lordly prey as it falls before your aim. But perhaps business is urgent and each day is filled to the brim and you feel you cannot go.

Still the north woods call, and one day you will be able to stand it no longer. You will get out your old rifle, sweaters and togs and go to the nearest Canadian National Railways office and ask for their publication "Hunting in Canada." In this booklet you will find listed the choicest spots and full information regarding accomodation and guides. Also ask for special train service pamphlet..

Commenting on the reports, the trade paper "Usine" (Factory), says: "We are able to state that there are no concerted negotiations pending between French and German manufacturers but we understand private individuals have exchanged views regarding such a combine."

The trade paper says no such entente is possible until an agreement is reached with Germany regarding deliveries of coke.

O.T.A. MEETING IN Y. MONDAY EVENING

Attitude For Future Enforcement of the Act Will be Discussed.

Since the result of the Plebiscite has become known, supporters of the O.T.A. in Peterboro, have been eagerly canvassing the situation in an effort to decide what attitude should be taken in regard to the future enforcement of the Act. A meeting of the executive committee will be held Monday evening in the Y.M.C.A. when it is expected that resolutions will be adopted expressing the views of the local O.T.A. supporters.

The suggestion from Toronto that, because of the large votes for government control cast in Toronto, Hamilton and Ottawa, such centres should be given local option, is vigorously opposed. Two strong arguments have been raised against such action:

The first is that if such centres were allowed to sell liquor, they would become distributing centres for large areas around them and thus defeat the desires of surrounding communities that in many cases voted by large majorities for the O.T.A. It is held that just as had the O.T.A. been defeated by a small majority although many municipalities voted dry, the Moderationists would have demanded the government to keep its pledges, so the Moderationists must abide by the decision of the province at large seeing that the decision has gone the other way.

The second reason urged against local option for the sale of liquor for the large centres, is that it would immediately annul the law preventing the importation of liquor into the province. The Dominion law which governs this matter provides that whatever liquors are sold by provincial enactment may be imported into the province. Thus one of the greatest safeguards of the O.T.A. would be done away with against the wishes of the majority of the people of the province.

There is a general feeling that vigorous action should be taken to ensure the thorough enforcement of the O.T.A. and that Premier Ferguson should be asked to implement his promises to strengthen the Act and to enforce it vigorously if sustained. It has been suggested that the Moderation League might be invited to cooperate with the local Plebiscite Committee in suggesting means of improving the act. It is understood that these matters will be discussed at the meeting of the executive of the Peterboro Plebiscite Committee to be held on Monday evening.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

The Capitol Theatre was crowded last evening for the sensational big picture, "The Signal Tower," starring Virginia Valli. The production, one of those "punchy" affairs that keeps its audience up on their respective toes and provides thrills for every reel, has a magnificent setting in the giant sequoias, the redwoods of Northern California, and is woven about the human interest of the family living in one of the remote signal towers of a line of steel running through a lonely forest.

Miss Valli has an exceptionally appealing role as Sally Tolliver, wife of the keeper of the tower, and is supported by an unusually capable cast, including Rockcliffe Fellows as Dave Tolliver, her husband, Frankie Darro as Sonny, the little boy who adds so much to the effect of the big picture, Wallace Beery in his popular role of the villain, Joe Standish, James O. Barrows as Old Bill, J. Farrell MacDonald as Pete, and Dot Farley as Gertie.

The human interest theme is emphasized in the story of the humble home in the forest, with the triangle developing when an assistant keeper of the tower arrives in the person of Jos. Standish, who falls in love with Sally Tolliver. The vital dramatic interval of the story is set in the swirling environment of a storm at night within a mighty forest. A train wreck comes to add its chaos to the tormented mind of a man who believes that by devotion to his task —that of saving the lives of those who ride by rail—he would wreck forever the happiness of his home life.

The train wreck, with its stirring denouement, is a wonderful piece of film-craft, and provides thrills galore.

The comedy is a laughable affair, with a guardian of the law becoming involved in a masked ball, and in a fight with the redoubtable plug-ugly, Spike McGann.

"SINNERS IN HEAVEN" WITH SUPERLATIVE CAST, COMING TO CAPITOL MONDAY.

The title of the new Paramount picture, "Sinners in Heaven," which is coming to the Capitol Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, has a distinctly paradoxical sound. It is safe to assume that the picture satisfactorily explains and justifies the title.

To those however who have read the story by Clive Arden from which the picture was adapted by James Creelman and produced by Alan Crosland, the title has an especial significance and it is certain that they will approve its retention in the screen play.

"Sinners in Heaven" tells the story of a man and a girl who are through fate wrecked on a tropical island off the coast of Africa. Try to imagine what would happen if you found yourself stranded on some remote corner of the earth apparently a million miles from any sign of civilization, and your only companion was a person whom you cordially disliked! This is the situation that confronts Barbara Stockley, the heroine; and you can readily understand the dynamic possibilities for rich drama when we tell you that the girl eventually falls in love with the man and marries him, there, in the heart of the African desert. How the marriage is performed and what happens after that, we will let you discover for yourself.

With a combination of such box office favorites as Bebe Daniels and Richard Dix, who portray the two leading roles, surrounded by such likeable and well known players as Holmes Herbert, Montague Love, Florence Billings, Effie Shannon, Betty Hilburn and Marcia Harris, the only fair thing to do is designate it as an all-star cast.

COLLEEN MOORE COMING TO CAPITOL IN HER LATEST PRODUCTION, "THE PERFECT FLAPPER."

Next Wednesday and Thursday will see Colleen Moore, famed as the star of "Flaming Youth," in her very latest production, "The Perfect Flapper."

REGINALD DENNY RETURNS IN FAST MOVING DRAMA, "THE RECKLESS AGE."

"The Reckless Age" is the title of Reginald Denny's new picture, in which he will appear at the Capitol Theatre next Friday and Saturday. This is a typical Denny production, being crammed with thrills and laughter. It is considered one of the best productions this star has ever appeared in.

LAST SHOWING TO-NIGHT OF "THE SIGNAL TOWER" FAST MOVING MELODRAMA.'

To-night sees the final showing of the fast moving railroad drama that has been drawing big houses at the Capitol. "The Signal Tower." Virginia Valli and Wallace Beery have the leading roles. Jack Dempsey, in one of "The Fight and Win" series is also on the bill.

AT THE ROYAL.

VIOLA DANA AND MILTON SILLS IN LIVELY CROOK COMEDY, "THE HEART BANDIT," AT ROYAL MONDAY.

An entertainment of rare quality is promised when Viola Dana's newest picture for Metro, "The Heart Bandit," comes to the Royal Theatre starting on Monday. The flapper star is said to make full use of her opportunities for comedy and pathos in this story which tells what happens when a girl bandit accidently breaks into the home of a kindly old lady and is forced, through many circumstances, to stay there.

The situations arising from the unusual association form the basis for many scenes of thrills and comedy, the girl getting into several scrapes that seem impossible of solution until a new element—love—enters in Milton Sills, the popular leading man of a host of big productions, appears opposite Miss Dana. Others in the cast include Wallace MacDonald, Gertrude Claire, Bertram Grassby and DeWitt Jennings. "The Heart Bandit" was directed by Oscar Apfel and photographed by John Arnold. Fred Kennedy Myton wrote the story, which was adapted for the screen by Tom J. Hopkins.

LARRY SEMON IN "THE SHOW" AT ROYAL MONDAY.

One of the most elaborate comedy successes ever made by Larry Semon is an added attraction at the Royal on Monday. "At the Show" is crowded with laughs and pretty Girls. A new story of the Leather Pusher Series is also on the same programme.

HAVE YOU A "COLLEEN MOORE GOWN?"

Popular Actress Wears it in "April Showers."

It is seldom that the girl who designs a calico gown for herself finds her judgment vindicated by business men who are willing to gamble $1,000,000 on it.

But that is exactly what Colleen Moore may boast of—should she care to wax boastful over the dainty calico dresses she wears in "April Showers," the Preferred Picture to be seen next Thursday at the Royal Theatre.

Colleen Picked it.

Before beginning work in this latest Tom Forman production, Miss Moore was told to select "a few gingham and calico dresses that might have been made by a working girl but look like a million."

And Miss Moore accomplished her purpose. She accomplished it so well that a dress designer who saw her on the screen in one of the love scenes with Kenneth Harlan immediately called in a group of business associates, arranged for a reshowing of the picture, and at once made plans for reproducing the gown in quantities.

Sold Everywhere.

The result is the "Colleen gown," which is being made in Los Angeles, and sold the world over.

AT THE GRAND.

GREAT ARTISTIC EVENT.

De Feo Grand Opera Coming Here

The music-lovers and art patrons of Peterboro, as well as the average theatre-goers, still remember with grateful admiration the De Feo Grand Opera Company who played here two years ago a short but very successful engagement.

Mr. De Feo and his stars are coming back to Peterboro for one day only, this time, on Saturday next, November 1.

If the excellence of the performances given two years ago should be taken as a standard, there is every assurance that the present company surpasses its predecessor in quality, judging from the enthusiastic accounts of the Montreal and Ottawa press.

There is a decided innovation in the presentation of grand opera during this tour. After many months of assiduous work by expert composers, Mr. De Feo has obtained a somewhat condensed version of the most popular masterpieces, which allows him to give two operas at each performance.

This new arrangement has been tried lately in Italy and Germany and has met with the greatest popular favor. It really makes opera more digestible and more readily assimilated by the general public.

One of the main purposes of this tour is to promote an educational campaign in favor of "better music for the people"; in conformity with this aim, the prices of admission have been established so low as to allow everybody to partake at this artistic feast.

There will be no excuse for anyone to miss this rare opportunity to hear the best in music at the lowest possible cost.

FABLES ON HEALTH

Psychoanalysis and new movements in psychiatry have been teaching those persons who have cared to keep in touch just how great an influence in after years incidents of childhood may have.

The "complexes", about which so much has been said, are being traced to almost forgotten events in child or adolescent life.

These were things about which Mr. and Mrs. Mann were not particularly well informed, and there are too few people everywhere who keep the proper watch on their own and their children's habits.

Thus, about examination time at school, Johnny or Mary develops a "headache," or a tummy ache, or something. Why? Because a child likes to escape unpleasant tasks, if possible.

Every parent knows how many schemes and stunts a child can invent to get out of all sorts of work.

But unless a future impress is to be left upon the habits and manners of the child, the parent should start early to teach the necessity of facing the realities; of bumping square upon a problem and facing it out whether the end be marked by success or failure.

Parents would do well to learn that it is better that a child fail at a task than that he run around the corner to escape it. It is the fear of failure and parental rebuke that too often starts a child in the habit of deceiving both parents in himself. And this is a habit that sticks.

COLDS

QUESTION—Every fall I have a siege of continued colds, which leave me in a run-down condition most of the winter. Can Chiropractic benefit me?

ANSWER—Chiropractic has proved effective in overcoming colds. A cold is an indication of an accumulation of poisons and waste material in your system, due to an inactivity of the organs of elimination. This inactivity is undoubtedly due to an interference with the nerves which supply one or more of the eliminative organs.

An examination will reveal the location of the existing nerve pressure, and Chiropractic spinal adjustments will tone up the organs of elimination so that the system will be cleansed of poisons and the "cold" will disappear.

ALLEGED BOLSHEVIST LETTER TO BRITISH COMMUNISTS DECLARED FALSE BY ZINOVIEFF IN PROTEST

Sharp Note From Moscow Repudiates Revolutionary Appeal to British Workers, Asks for an Apology and for a Commission to Pronounce Upon Authenticity of Letter Given to British Press.

CRUDE FABRICATION DESIGNED AS ELECTION MANOEUVRE, SAYS MOSCOW

Zinovieff Offers Co-operation in Investigation of Alleged Document—Labor Candidates Make Capital of Fearless Attitude Toward Russians.

MOSCOW, October 27 (Canadian Press). — Responding to the note of protest from the British Foreign Office concerning the alleged letter of M. Zinovieff, President of the Executive of the Communist International, urging propaganda for the overthrow of existing institutions in Great Britain, the Soviet Government, in a sharp note desptched late on Sunday, denies the authenticity of the letter.

The note seeks an apology for the subversive propaganda activities imputed to the Soviet Government and proposes the establishment of an arbitral commission to pass upon the merits of the so-called Zinovieff letter.

It has telegraphed Christian Rakovsky, the Russian Charge d'Affaires in London, repudiating the letter.

In repudating Zinovieff letter, the Soviet officials are indignant over the fact that the British note of protest, transmitted through the Soviet delegation in London last Friday night, was signed by J. B. Gregory who is described as an "Under-official" of the British Foreign Office, instead of Premier MacDonald, which they regarded as an affront to the Soviet Republic.

CRUDE FABRICATION.

Obvious Election Trick Is Assertion of Zinovieff to British Unions.

LONDON, October 27 (Canadian Press). — In a message forwarded to the British Trades Union Congress yesterday, M. Zinovieff declares that the document dated 15th August attributed to him is "a gross falsification."

The document in question is the letter received by the Central Committee of the British Communist Party signed by M. Zinovieff and given out for publication by the British Government on 24th October.

"There was not and could not be any such letter," says Zinovieff's message. "The fabrication is so crude that no one, not even a too literate official of the British Foreign Office, but could see its falsity.

"It seems that the laurels of Mr. Hughes are being divided by someone in England. It is absolutely manifest that we have in this case a too clear election manoeuvre."

M. Zinovieff then refers to an offer which he made to Secretary Hughes to establish the falsity of a certain document, which, he asserts, Mr. Hughes "ran away from, fearing disclosure of a forgery," and adds:

"We are prepared to offer to the Foreign Office even more than that, namely, to allow the general council of the Trades Union Congress, through a special commission or through its delegation appointed to visit the Soviet Union, to investigate immediately the question regarding the authenticity of the alleged document. The decision of this commission will be accepted by us as final."

DENIAL BY McMANUS.

Communist at Manchester Says He Would Be Jailed if Letter Authentic.

MANCHESTER, October 27 (Canadian Press). — Addressing a Communist meeting here last night, Arthur McManus, British representative in the International, who was named as one of the signatories of the Zinovieff letter, denied that he had anything to do with it, or had any knowledge of it.

"Those behind this document," he said, "know they are lying. If they believed for a moment that my signature was appended to it, I should now be in Brixton Jail. The fact is, those who engineered the document thought I was in Russia, and that by the time I heard about it the elections would be over.

"I challenge Birkenhead to have me arrested on the strength of this alleged signature."

LABOUR IS UNAFRAID.

Not Afraid to Show Russians That Intrigues Will Be Stopped.

LONDON, October 27 (Canadian Press). — The Zinovieff incident continues to be the principal theme of all the election speeches. Philip Snowden, John Robert Clynes, and other Ministers have publicly admitted that if the document is genuine and really represented the official Russian views, it would disable those trying to negotiate an Anglo-Russian treaty.

The Colonial Minister, J. H. Thomas, speaking at Manchester yesterday said he did not know whether the document was a forgery, but the action of the Government showed that the Labour Party was not afraid to take its stand and say to the Russians :"If this is your policy, we want to make it clear where we are."

Premier MacDonald spent Sunday studying the situation in close touch with the Foreign Office and the members of his Cabinet. He is expected to make the Zinovieff letter and its consequences the chief subject of his speech at Cardiff to day.

In the meantime Labour headquarters has issued another statement, denying current assertions that the alleged Zinovieff letter was discussed by the Cabinet or that it was intercepted in the post, photographed and delivered to the Communists in the ordinary way. The statement also denies that any instructions were sent to the Labour candidates not to discuss the Russian treaty.

"The Foreign Office," it adds, considers the document authentic. Charge d'Affaires Rakovsky says it is a forgery and obviously this issue cannot be finally settled one way or the other until after the elections."

Pointing out the singularity that the document was in the possession of the Daily Mail and Conservative headquarters before it was issued by the Foreign Office the Labour statement argues that the action of the Government proves it is not under the heel of the Communists, and it invites the Conservative leaders and the Daily Mail to be frank with the public and reveal how they came into possession of the document.

TRADE IMPROVES.

Canada Improves Trade Balance By Sum of $153,000,000.

OTTAWA, October 27. — In the twelve months ending September 30, Canada improved her trade balance with other countries by the remarkable sum of over $153,000,000, when the year's trade is compared with the previous year. There was a large decrease in imports and almost the same increase in exports.

During the year ended with September last the Dominion's imports amounted to $827,196,002, as compared with $902,993,825, or a decrease of $76,797,823; while the exports in twelve months ending with September last totalled $1,073,463,570, as against $997,197,587 in the previous year, or an increase of $76,265,983.

LIQUOR WORTH $100,000 SEIZED

Big Capture at Windsor of Beer and Whiskey For Export.

TORONTO'S ORDER.

WINDSOR, Oct. 27. — Whiskey and beer, valued at $100,000, bootleggers' prices, was seized at La Salle Saturday, following a raid instituted by M. N. Mousseau, Chief License Inspector for the County of Essex. This was carried out, he says, as the result of information which indicated that liquor and beer for export were being sold in the border cities and outlying districts.

Thursday, Inspector Mousseau captured $15,000 worth of liquor at La Salle and Ford. The huge shipments taken Saturday were located in freight cars and export sheds. One of the docks is operated under the name of John Mannor, according to the inspector, and the other dock is known as Benoit's. From these sheds and from the box cars 1,400 cases of assorted brands of choice whiskies, and 1,400 cases of Canadian beer, were taken. Piled upon motor trucks, the capture was carried into Windsor and stored away under lock and key.

Commenting upon the seizure, Inspector Mousseau denied that it was made as the result of orders from Toronto to "dry up the border," as a result of the plebiscite result. He explained, instead, that he was in possession of information that liquor and beer, consigned to La Salle, ostensibly for export purposes outside the province, was being sold for consumption along the border points.

It is understood that several nights ago, while members of the Provincial Police stood vigil at La Salle to obtain information in regard to these alleged illicit sales, a well-known bootlegger drove up to an export shed three times and turned away again when he learned of the presence of the police. Later, as they still kept watch, it is said that one officer was threatened if he still refused to leave the premises.

CHAINS AROUND SKELETON TOLD OF SLOW DEATH

American War Veteran, Deranged By Service, Padlocked Himself to Tree.

ENDURED HORRORS.

Son of Rich Family and Lover of Nature, Starved in Depth of Woods.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Oct. 27.—An elderly father, describing his son's dementia, abruptly halted investigation into the death of Henry Handy McHenry, 31 years old, of Armore, whose clothed skeleton was found on Thursday chained by the neck to a tree on the top of Green Mountain, near here.

McHenry was a Yale graduate and his father was a former vice-president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

Belief that a murder had been committed was swept aside when F. H. McHenry told the County Coroner he had been living in fear that his son would end his life in this manner. No inquest will be held.

Several weeks ago the country people of the section about Trout Run picked up a note about a mile and a half from where the body of the man who had chosen to die of hunger and thirst was found. It read:

"I have committed suicide. Try and find me."

McHenry left the service for his flag a nervous and mental wreck. For a time he was confined in Kirkbride's, a hospital for the treatment of mental diseases in Philadelphia, the same institution in which Harry Thaw was confined for years. With every comfort that the beloved son of a well-to-do cultivated man could command, it was thought that in time his mind would heal, that the spells of despondency would become less frequent and eventually cease.

A Lover of Nature.

McHenry loved the woods and was a botanist of no mean ability. He knew leaf and flower, tree, grass and soil, and loved them as Thoreau loved them. The music of the night life in the woods delighted him. The solitude of glen and glade lured him. Indoors, protected from weather, the lights bright, the bed soft, he was not at ease.

It was his custom to break away from these surroundings of civilization and plunge into the woods. All nature was a storehouse of treasure to him and wild things, birds and insects were his chosen friends.

It is probable that in all the history of human idiosyncracy there has never been the like of this suicide. On August 1 McHenry left home. He bought a ticket to this place and struck out up and into Green Mountain. Years ago the heaviest timber had been logged from the mountain. In its place was the new growth stretching for miles in one thicket. There were no paths.

The young man plunged into the thicket, lugging a heavy chain of great length and padlock. Where he got them nobody knows. No key to the padlock was found. He was two miles away from any habitation when he selected a great tree as his death stake.

Made Plans For Death.

Here on a bright midsummer's day amid pools and shadow and sunshine, the air throbbing with the voices of insect life, he wound the chain about the tree and then about his neck. The padlock was a heavy one, strong enough to defy any pair of human hands.

The strength of a Samson would be required to break the chain. He pulled the links of iron close to his throat and shut fast the padlock.

If he had regretted his determination to die thus by inches of hunger and thirst his voice would not be heard. It was far from the hunting season. There would be no game seekers nassing. He might cry out for help, but there would be none to hear his cry.

It was a long wait for death. A fair estimate is that a human body in good condition will feed itself for thirty days. The man at the end of the chain found it tedious. He had given himself about fifteen feet from the tree to the limit of his tether. He wore down the grass to the roots with his restless circuit of the death stake he had chosen.

When he lay down with the night he must have slept profoundly at first.

An examination of the grounds and of the chain showed that he had not repented this terrible manner of death for he had made no effort to smash padlock or link.

Tortured Self With Thirst.

Through the terrific heat of August his anguish of thirst must have been beyond human description. Not far away was Trout Run, making its exquisite music rippling over a rocky bed. Only a fiend could have thought of torturing a human being in this manner. Yet the war veteran had done this to himself.

With swollen lips and tongue and with the added agony of starvation, the suicide, his father and his friends hope, must have suddenly dropped in his tracks unconscious and have given up the ghost with only the faint sound of stirring leaves reaching his inner consciousness.

August and September passed and October came and was passing when Dr. John A Klump and Frederick Plankenhorn, of this town and Samuel Hyler, of Liberty, members of the Lycoming Hunting Club, started out to make an inspection of the hunting preserve. They came upon the body and notified the authorities. Identification was made through McHenry's cards in the Ardmore Country Club, the Y.M.C.A. of Philadelphia and Boy Scout credentials.

So wild is the country about the scene of the tragedy that the posse starting from here to recover the body had to keep in touch with each other by shouts and whistles constantly for fear of one of its members becoming lost.

McHenry was a graduate from Yale. There he made a specialty of botany, the science that eventually brought him to such a strange and terrible end.

FIRST HUNTING STORY

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Oct. 27.— (Canadian Press).— The Moose and deer hunting season opened Saturday. One of the stories coming to the city is that a few days ago a man snared a moose and waited until yesterday morning to shoot it but when he shot the bullet severed the rope and the animal got away.

BREWERIES TO BE WIPED OUT

People Are Behind the Leaders of Prohibition, Says Rev. T. A. Moore.

STRIKE AT SOURCE.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 27.—(Canadian Press).—In a sermon at Dundas Street Central Methodist Church Sunday Rev. T. Albert Moore, secretary of the temperance force, said that the victory won in Thursday's plebiscite would be followed by a campaign to wipe out the distilleries and breweries in the province and to put an end to unlawful importation of liquor.

"We not only have the people behind us but the government of the province, who say they will give a vigorous and efficient enforcement of the Act," said Mr. Moore, "but we have not finished our battle yet. Our organization will be kept alive. Information will be given to the people on our latest developments. Our ultimate aim is to wipe out the breweries and distilleries and to end unlawful importation. The breeding places of evil must be removed before the traffic can be wiped out."

GUN EXPLOSION KILLS HUNTER

Oshawa Young Man Fatally Injured While Duck Hunting.

OSHAWA, Oct. 25.— From wounds sustained in a shooting accident which occurred in the vicinity of Corbettsport late Friday, Wilfrid Frink, 26 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Frink, died in the Oshawa Hospital Saturday.

The victim was accompanied on a duck shooting expedition by George and William Harding when one of the guns which they were using accidentally discharged, the load entering Frink's abdomen. The party had set out the decoys along the section where they were shooting and Frink was holding the guns while this operation was in progress. He was in the act of returning a gun to one of the other members of the party when this member slipped off the knoll he was standing on, the weapon striking a rock and discharging. Frink was standing almost at the muzzle of the gun when it exploded and received the full force of the discharge.

Immediately the victim was carried with extreme difficulty to the car, which was stationed almost a mile away. Bleeding profusely, by the time he was admitted to the Oshawa hospital little hope was held out for his recovery. A large quantity of blood was transfused from a brother, Fred, in an effort to sustain life. Mr. Frink is a married man, and has been residing with his mother-in-law, Mrs. James Smith, of Oshawa. He joined the Canadian army when he was but seventeen years of age and saw active service at the front.

Coroner D. Sherg empanelled a jury to enquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of the victim. The other members of the party, George and William Harding, have been almost life-long friends of the deceased. Mr. Frink has been employed in the polishing room of the General Motors since his return from overseas.

WU MARCHES ON PEKING AGAINST FORCE OF FENG

Deposed Marshal of Chinese Federal Army Reaches Tientsin With Army.

"JUST MORE WORK."

Wu Aims to Drive Out Christian General Who Made Bid For Peace.

TIENTSIN, Oct. 27.—Wu Pei-Fu, the deposed Marshal of the Peking Government armies, is marching on the Capital with heavy forces to drive out his former subordinate, Feng Yu-Hsiang, who seized the city last Thursday and forced from office President Tsao Kun, after compelling the Executive to sign a mandate ordering cessation of hostitlities with Manchuria.

General Wu, reaching Tietsin Sunday morning from the Manchurian border, where part of his army is holding the front against Chang Tso Lin, left immediately for Langfang half way between Tientsin and Peking.

Strong reinforcements are believed to becoming up the Wukow railway to join him. Shensi Province troops, who came down from Peking to Langfang Saturday, withdrew toward Peking on the arrival of Chili soldeirs under Wu.

Wu left Chinwangtao, on the Manchurian border, Saturday evening and arried in Tientsin in a train of 38 cars packed with troops. When the train stopped, it immediately was surrounded by soldiers. Guards kept Japanese sway and treated them rudely but showed no hostility to British and Americans. After a short halt, the train proceeded in the direction of Langfang.

Foreigners who talked to the ousted Field Marshal said he received calmly the news of Feng Yu-Hsiang's coup, and remarked that it merely was what he had expected and would mean more work.

De Valera Is Arrested Second Time In Ulster

LONDONBERRY, Ireland, Oct. 27.—Eamon de Valera was arrested last night outside St. Columb's Hall, where it was his intention to deliver a speech.

When all hope of the coming of de Valera appeared to have been abandoned, a slim figure was observed approaching the side door of St. Columb's Hall. It proved to be the Republican leader, and a police officer immediately put him under arrest, and transferred him in a motor car to the Victoria police barracks almost before anybody in or outside the hall realized that the Republican Chief was again a prisoner.

De Valera came to the hall without disguise, although he had discarded his eyeglasses. He offered no resistance.

FREIGHT RATE ORDER APPEAL

Western Petitions to Premier Will be Referred to the Whole Cabinet.

URGE SUSPENSION.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 27.—(Canadian Press). — Quoting an opinion received from the Department of Justice, Premier Mackenzie King declared in a telegram to the Winnipeg Board of Trade, which had petitioned him to suspend the order of the Railway Commission cancelling the Crow's Nest freight rates agreement, that he thought the view expressed by Hon. G. P. Graham, as acting Prime Minister, was correct, and that "the Government would not interfere in this matter without opportunity of conference on the part of all the members of the Cabinet."

The Department of Justice had ruled that the commission had authority to put its order into effect immediately and that the operation of such an order was not stayed by an appeal to the Supreme Court. The Board of Trade has replied to Mr. King, urging him again to suspend operation of the commission's order until the case was heard further.

A similar message from the Prime Minister to Premier Bracken brought a reply from H. J. Symington, counsel for Manitoba, which also urged the Federal Government to suspend the order. At the same time Mr. Bracken telegraphed the Premiers of Saswatchewan and Alberta urging concerted and immediate action in an endeavor to prevent the order from becoming effective.

Root, who had a key to the bank, had been in the habit of opening up the office every day. After a preliminary session this morning the inquest was adjourned for one week.

CHASE OF BOND THIEVES FAILED AT PORT PERRY

Escaped in Fusilade of Shots When Police Appeared at Rendezvous.

WORK OF EXPERTS.

Arranged to Return $11,000 Bond Loot For $400 Cash at Appointed Place.

LINDSAY, Oct. 27.—Friday night was a field night for the Provincial Police of this section. They assisted in the search for the robbers who stole the bonds at Port Perry and also committed the many other burglaries in Victoria and Ontario counties. Provincial Officer Storey assisted in the search, which was full of thrills.

A message had been received by Mr. Lucas, of Port Perry, owner of the $11,000 worth of bonds, informing him that if he brought the sum of $400 to Manchester the bonds would be handed over. This information was given the authorities and a chase was at once instituted. A car with officers left Port Perry for Manchester, and was within a few feet of the Cadillac car in which the robbers were travelling, when the gas was applied to the big car and the men made their get-away. Shots were fired by the officers and it is believed some of them took effect in the Cadillac.

During the night the station master at Unionville was held up by the robbers and was relieved of a sum of money. The robbers are believed to be desperate men and the whole country side has been terrorized by their depredations.

It will be recalled that the safe in the office of Hogg and Lytle was opened and the bonds which have a value of $11,500 stolen. These were the personal property of Mr. Lucas, who is resident manager of Hogg and Lytles at Port Perry. Entrance to the office was gained by means of a window in the rear of the store and the fact that the safe was not damaged when it was opened seems to indicate that the job was done by expert crooks.

CONSULATES IN BRITAIN CLOSED

British and Mexican Commercial Interests Have Been Closed.

MEXICO CITY, October 27 (Canadian Press). — The alarm caused among Mexican and British commercial interests respecting the carrying on of Mexican export and import trade with Great Britain because of the Mexican Government's action in closing its Consulates at London, Liverpool, and Glasgow, has been dissipated by the Foreign Office's announcement of a way out of the difficulty.

This is to the effect that Mexican customs regulations provide that shipments of merchandise from countries in which Mexico has no Consulates are possible when exporters mail invoices to the collector of customs at the port of disembarkation at which duties are collectable.

The closing of the five Mexican Consulates in Canada and other British possessions has not yet been ordered, according to Foreign Secretary Aaron Saenz, but the Secretary added: "If it were necessary for the carrying out of the present policy, Mexico would have no other remedy."

With reference to British Consuls in Mexico, it was stated yesterday at the Foreign Office that the Government could not cancel their exequaters because since the severance of diplomatic relations these officials had been functioning as de facto, not de jure, officials.

Except for some new obstacles, which could easily be overcome, British ships engaged in the Mexican trade could continue sailing at the Mexican ports under certain limited conditions.

TRAMPLED TO DEATH.

John Green, Aged 75, Fatally Injured When Horses Ran Away.

HAMILTON, Oct. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Trampled beneath the hoofs of horses and crushed by the wheels of a heavy wagon when a frightened team ran away, John Green, well-known farmer of Saltfleet Township, succumbed to his injuries in the General Hospital yesterday. Mr. Green, who was 75 years of age, and a pioneer of Saltfleet, was hauling grapes at his son's farm on the Mountain, south of Stoney Creek. When turning into a lane the wagon upset. Mr. Green was thrown between the front wheels and the horses. He was badly trampled. When the horses bolted he was crushed under the wheels.

WATER ON GREASE.

When grease or gravy is spilled on the floor or table, pour cold water over it immediately, ice water if possible, to congeal the fat before it has time to penetrate the pores of the wood.

KILLED IN ACCIDENT.

Car Capsized and Rolled Down a 14 Foot Embankment.

MILTON, Oct. 27. — (Canadian Press).—A fatal automobile accident occurred at Drumquin, six miles east of Milton, last night, in which Robert Cleaves, a farmer of Hornby, lost his life.

Mr. Cleaves was driving a touring car accompanied by his wife and two children, Mrs. Walter Thompson and her two children, of Georgetown. While travelling north, Mr. Cleaves turned out to allow an approaching car with bright headlights to pass when his car capsized and rolled down a 14-foot embankment. He was instantly killed. The passing car stopped and several men lifted the wrecked car up and released the other occupants, who were practically uninjured.

KEEP FROM HEAT.

If a fur coat or a fur trimmed wrap has been rain-soaked it should be left to dry near an open window, but never subjected to heat.

CHEWING GUM BIG INDUSTRY IN U. S.

Enough Gum Chewed To Reach Around the Earth 210 Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—(United Press.) — Movie fans of the world—and others who like to give their jaws exercise—chewed enough gum last year, "if each stick were placed end to end, to circle the earth 210 times."

This bit of figuring by John D. Shea, an expert statistician, was based on the announcement of the Department of Commerce that chewing gum worth $40,324,409 was manufactured in the United States in 1923.

"And further," said Shea, "assuming that each of the 120,000,000,000 sticks, estimated as the production on the basis of the department valuation, was chewed for a half hour, we have 372,000 billion jaw motions for consumption of the year's output. We figure each stick is masticated at the rate of 104 crunches per minute."

While officials of the Bureau of Statistics denied they had been asked to estimate the amount of "lost energy" in connection with all this gum chewed, others figured the wasted effort was enough to move the earth 10 feet from its orbit and disturb the mental balance of most of its citizens.

That chewing gum is profitable to manufacture was shown by the department's figures for the year. Salaroies and awges to the 2,554 persons employed in its manufacture in 45 plants amounted to $3,173,736. The costs of all materials, including fuel and containers, was $15,487,188. The difference in the producing cost and the value, listed under the caption, "value added by manufacture," was $25,383,726.

Of the 45 establishments reporting for 1923, eight were located in New York, five each in Illinois and New Jersey, four in California, three each in Massachusetts and Ohio, two each in Delaware, Missouri, Pennsylvania and Tennessee, and one each in Indiana, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Nebraska, Rhode Island, Texas, and Virginia.

American chewing gum has taken a firm hold on Europe where U. S. soldiers introduced it during the World War. The five per cent. increase in production value last year over that of 1922 was attributed to the export demand.

One of the most approved trimmings of this season is the long tassel, which is decorative and intriguing but does not suggest ornateness.

MATTHEWS ON TRIAL.

Case Started This Morning in Assize Court.

TORONTO, Oct. 27.—(Canadian Press).—C. A. Matthews, Jr., former assistant Provincial Treasurer, appeared in the Assize Court this morning, before Mr. Justice Mowat, charged with conspiracy to defraud, fraud and fraudulent participation in the sale of certain bonds of the Province of Ontario. He pleaded not guilty. The jury was then selected, the defence challenging 12 and the Crown 16 before twelve men were selected. It is alleged that Matthews conspired with L. C. Mason, G. M. Hart and Alex. Ross to defraud the Province by taking money on sale of bonds. L. C. Mason, who is a son-in-law of Matthews, was in court. This afternoon W. N. Tilley, Crown prosecutor, will review the case, and the taking of the evidence will be proceeded with. Seymour Corley, K.C., is counsel for the defence. During his trial, Matthews bail is continued.

Y.W.C.A. WEEK'S ACTIVITIES

Hallowe'en Parties, Life Saving Examinations New Classes.—Finance Campaign.

At the Y.W.C.A. this week there are four events of special interest, on Friday night there is the jolly Hallowe'en party for all senior members and friends. The Y.W.C.A. halls, club rooms and gymnasium will be changed into witches caves and goblins and ghosts will be in charge of an evening of thrills and fun. All who have ever attended a "Y" Hallowe'en party in former years have voted it the best party of the year and the very jolliest place to spend Hallowe'en. All members and friends of the Association are invited to come. There will be prizes for the best costumes, games, fortunes and a trip through the subterranean caves of the spirits of Hallowe'en and then refreshments.

On Saturday morning the junior members and their friends will have their Hallowe'en Party starting at 10 o'clock.

A service of the Y.W.C.A. to the community which is much appreciated, is the life saving work, taught in the swimming pool. No one can estimate the good this has done and will do in the future. On Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock this year's pupils will try their examinations and the people of Peterboro are invited to attend. The little tots are trying for the elementary and proficiency awards of Royal Life Saving Society and the seniors for the bronze and silver medallions.

In view of the examinations three special classes will be held this week and all pupils who are trying the examinations are requested to be present.

Tuesday, 4.15—Junior Life Saving Class.

Wednesday 7.00—Senior Life Saving Class.

Friday 2.15—Life Saving class.

Special swimming meet Tuesday afternoon 4.45 for all swimmers juniors and seniors.

Three new classes start this week at the Y.W.C.A.

Monday 7.00— Ukulele, for beginners and advanced.

Tuesday, 7.30—Basketry class.

Tuesday, 4.00 &00—Elocution lessons.

The gymnasium classes and clubs will be held according to the regular schedule with one exception. The Intermediate dancing class will meet on Thursday at 7.00 with the Senior class.

Each year the Y.W.C.A. needs $1500 from the citizens of Peterboro to enable it to carry on the work. The Association is 96% self supporting and in comparison with other cities this 4% is a very small amount to ask.

It has been said that one thing at a time is all a city can hope to accomplish at once, but in the Y.W.C.A. with its all round program physical, intellectual, religious, social and service, we have a chance, by all uniting and giving our support to accomplish many things all in one centre and at one time. The dates of the Finance Campaign for this year have been set for October 27 to November 8 and the help of everyone is earnestly asked. The board will gratefully appreciate any subscriptions sent in to the office. A check for our work prevents a check to it. 1d 100 4051

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

O.T.A. MAJORITY SLIGHTLY LOWER

Full Returns Expected This Week—Figure Now Is 39,803 For Prohibition.

TORONTO, Oct. 27.— (Canadian Press).—Additional returns for the Liquor Plebiscite received over the week end from 75 more polling subdivisions show a small reduction in the majority in favor of the Ontario Temperance Act. It now stands at 39,803. Some days must necessarily elapse, however, before all returns are complete.

A majority of 2,803 was accorded government control in Lincoln where some confusion had occurred partly due to one of the deputy returning officers in his return reversing the total number of votes cast in his sub-division on each question, the Ontario Temperance Act receiving 4,138 and Government Control 6,941 votes.

It is expected that the Chief Electorate Office here will receive returns from all returning officers throughout the province and make his report during the present week.

In the evening moving pictures were shown in the town hall and every half hour the latest bulletin was flashed on the screen. A large crowd was present, watching the returns. At first the Government sale supporters were jubilant, but after half past nine, as each report showed a change of thousands in the majority and the wet majority diminished feelings ran high. At last at 11.30 the final report showed a dry majority of over 17,000, and some results not in.

The final result is being watched for with keen interest.

Stanley Baldwin Will Be the Bridegroom and Asquith the Bride on Wednesday.

LONDON, Oct. 27. — (Canadian Press).—John Joseph Jones, Labor member of Parliament for Westham, in a speech here to-day, gave his version of the approaching elections.

Jones said the banns already were up and that on Wednesday the principals would march down the aisle, arm in arm, Stanley Baldwin being the bridegroom and H. H. Asquith the bride. Lord Birkenhead and Winston Spencer Churchill would be the best men, with Lady Astor and Lady Bonham Carter as the bridesmaids.

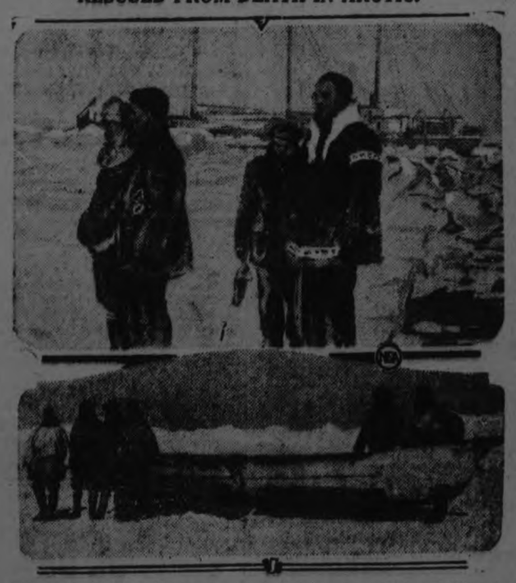
"In due course of time," Jones added, "twins will be delivered—namely, landlordism and capitalism."

PRINCE IS RECUPERATING.

Spends Most of Time Aboard Olympic in His Suite—Attended Church.

ON BOARD THE STEAMER, OLYMPIC AT SEA, Oct. 27.—(Canadian Press).— The Prince of Wales, tired out after his strenuous holiday, is taking a well-earned rest on board the Olympic as it speeds homeward from New York. Most of the time the Prince remains in the seclusion of his suite, only occasionally being seen on deck. The Royal passenger, however, dined in the public saloon. He attended divine service aboard the ship on Sunday morning.

RESCUED FROM DEATH IN ARCTIC.



These are the first pictures to reach this country of the thrilling but losing fight the Hudson's Bay Co's motor schooner Lady Kindersley made against the Arctic ice, after she was caught in a jam in the far north. The crew narrowly escaped death, but the boat and its million-dollar cargo are believed to have gone down after those on board had been rescued. These photographs were taken by Wireless Operator Newton, the only one on board possessing a camera. The one at the top is the last one ever taken of the boat. Members of the crew are seen starting for the U.S. cutter Boxer. At the bottom is seen the skin canoe in which the survivors crossed the open spaces of the ice field toward the Boxer.

Two Hundred Women Answered 50 Cent Ad For a Wife.

LONDON, Oct. 27. — (Canadian Press).—Two hundred wives for 50 cents.

John Coleman, of Tisbury, Wiltshire, built and furnished a little bungalow complete with a legacy he received.

Then he advertised at the cost of two shillings for a wife to share it with him and in less than two weeks he had 200 answers. He narrowed his choice to two between whom he still wavers. John's daily rejections became of so much interest that London dailies published them under the heading, "The matrimony stakes." A girl from Harlesden and one from Fulham, both London suburbs, have survived the semi-finals, and Harlesden is favorite.

EARLIER ELECTIONS.

The Local Council of Women has under consideration the question of a change in the municipal election date, representation having been made as to the unsuitability for several reasons of holding the elections early in January.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the number of Ontario cities adopting an earlier date for civic elections is increasing, Brantford being the latest to fall in line.

Throughout Western Canada and in many cities in this Province the municipal polling takes place early in December, or in some centres in November, thus having civic problems settled and the governing bodies for the following year elected before the advent of the holiday season.

The Brantford Expositor, referring to the Telephone City's adoption of the first Monday in December, says: "The change ought to make for better civic government."

It at any rate should make it possible to secure a larger expression of public opinion, as the campaign will neither interfere with or be interfered with by the Christmas rush.

The plan offers several advantages that are well worth consideration.

THE USUAL CONFUSION.

The usual confusion in regard to the Armistice Day celebration threatens to bob up again this year because of the attempt to combine Thanksgiving Day with the observance of the anniversary of the end of the Great War.

The combined holiday is to be held on Monday, November 10th.

Ottawa, however, has announced that the usual two-minute silence in memory of the Empire's dead will be observed at 11 a.m. on November 11th, which is, of course, the actual anniversary of the signing of the Armistice.

It is unfortunate that this double holiday arrangement was ever authorized.

It merely complicates the celebration of what should ever be a most important anniversary by splitting, as it does, the observance of the event over two days.

A much better plan would be to have Thanksgiving Day celebrated as it formerly was early in October when weather conditions are usually more auspicious and to have Armistice Day observed always on the actual anniversary, November 11th.

This date need not be set apart as a holiday, but at least every community in Canada should mark the occasion by some public function that would keep the historical significance of the anniversary always green in memory.

Under the present arrangement some centres arrange their Armistice Day exercises for the dual holiday, while others adhere to the actual date.

There is no necessity for such a mix-up, which could easily be avoided by the change suggested in this article.

A BIG TASK.

People who say the Ontario Temperance Act will be more difficult to enforce by reason of the large vote polled against the measure in the larger centres are being criticized—yet the Examiner must confess to be among those who recognize the stiffness of the problem with which Attorney-General Nickle is confronted.

It is all very well to say that the Ontario Temperance Act is the law of the land, and that every citizen should respect that law and co-operate in enforcing it.

In spite of that the fact remains that a large percentage of the people of Ontario refuse to regard the question of drinking liquor as a moral issue, and therefore are of no help in detecting or preventing violation of the Act.

The situation is rendered the more difficult because the large centres are the logical field for illegal operations, and with "wet" majorities rolled up in such places there is not the weight of public opinion behind the measure that is desirable.

In the rural sections where the people voted almost solidly for the Ontario Temperance Act there is, of course, some moonshine manufacturing, but bootlegging is not done on a large scale.

That means that in the districts where the officers entrusted with the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act must necessarily do most of their work they are handicapped by the opposition of a large proportion of the people to the measure, while the approval of the country sections, while valuable in deciding the issue, is of no potency in enforcement.

Attorney-General Nickle has a big job on his hands in seeking to carry out the pledge of his Premier that the Ontario Temperance Act will be effectively and vigorously enforced.

TOO MUCH OF THIS KIND OF THING.

The parading of Ottawa and Belleville school children in support of the O. T. A. on the eve of the Ontario plebiscite caused considerable complaint not only in the two cities particularly affected but generally, and the question has been raised as to the legality of such an action on the part of the school authorities.

Now that the campaign is over the matter may be dropped, but in order to prevent a repetition of this trouble on a future occasion, the Examiner believes that the question should be thoroughly ventilated.

The right of school teachers to use their pupils for propaganda purposes without any attempt to secure the consent or ascertain the views of the parents of the children is decidedly open to question.

Leaving out of the argument all consideration of the relative merit of the two policies, what authority is there to parade school children as a campaign manoeuvre on behalf of a cause to which the parents of many of the marchers may be opposed?

There was too much of that kind of thing in the recent campaign.

School boards who passed resolutions supporting the O. T. A., for example, were, in the opinion of many people, going outside of their jurisdiction altogether.

The members of such boards were elected to superintend and control the educational facilities of the community, not to attempt to guide their fellow-citizens in deciding a liquor policy.

As individuals they were justified in expressing their views, as a board of education they were injudicious, to say the least, in taking side as a body in a question over which the ratepayers who elected them were split into two camps.

AN OTTAWA OPINION.

The voting revealed a notable change in the public sentiment. The vast prohibition majorities of 1919 and 1922 were greatly reduced; the cities went pronouncedly "wet"; even rural districts that were formerly O. T. A. gave verdicts for control. But the change, striking though it was, was not enough.

* * * *

Many things brought opposition to the O. T. A. Chief among them was belief—sincerely held by thousands of the best citizens who were friends of temperance—that in many walks of life the O. T. A. actually produced what it was designed to destroy. It was held—and there seemed to be evidence behind the contention—that under the O.T.A. secret drinking, drinking among young people, drinking in social life and among and in the presence of women, had increased: that what was formerly taboo in respectable society was accepted as adding new zest, a new, piquant atmosphere, to social gatherings, and that, in consequence, the habit of drinking was getting a hold where its harm was the most potent, its effect the very worst. Older people, people who while not prohibitionists were either teetotalers or very moderate drinkers, witnessed an undoubted change in social habits in respect of liquor. They saw the cocktail invade the home where, in the old days of the bar, when drinking was considered disreputable, it would be looked upon with horror. They saw amateur distillers producing home brew that too often had distressing effect; saw faultless young gentlemen who regarded a silver flash as more necessary than a jackknife; saw motor-car parties through the countryside that had no marks of sobriety. They witnessed such things—and blamed the O.T.A. They did not stop to reason that the war had brought a change; that half a million Canadians had been to Europe, where most people drink—if they don't get drunk—and had perhaps changed their views on temperance; that, in any case, this was a period of rapid change in all of our social customs. They simply saw that in some respects—some of them vital—prohibition wasn't prohibiting—and became hostile.

* * * *

There were other things. One of them—more applicable to the cities—was belief by the masses that the O. T. A. was class legislation. The people saw drinking among the well-to-do. They knew that people more prosperous than themselves had well-stored cellars. They heard of the sons and daughters of their employers indulging in parties where cocktails were mobilized to cheer. They even saw, or were told about, legislators who had framed the O.T.A. flagrantly violating its spirit. And seeing and hearing such things—the exact measure of their truth did not much matter—they became convinced that this was a law which favored the rich as against the poor, and that it should go.

* * * *

Defenders of the O. T. A. pointed to declining figures of liquor consumption as evidence of its efficacy. But its opponents were not impressed. They retorted that there was a vast difference between consumption of liquor and liquor intemperance; that what they were actually concerned about was not the actual consumption of liquor itself, or the reduction of the consumption, but the manner of its use: the people who were consuming it, the people who were procuring it, and the circumstances attending its consumption. To those who pointed to decreasing arrests for drunkenness, they replied—rightly or wrongly—that policemen are not frequenters of clubs, homes, limousines.

* * * *

Finally, there was the belief that a law which was placed upon the statute books by an actual minority of the people, and which was so openly and flagrantly violated, created disrespect for all law. Law upholds morals; morals sustain law. But the view increased that the use or non-use of liquor was not a moral question, and that, because a large proportion of the population did not regard violation of the O.T.A. as they regarded ordinary lawlessness, and could not be induced to help suppress violation of it, as they would help suppress violation of most other laws, its retention had the effect of creating disrespect for all law, for all authority. Many, very many votes, were cast on that single ground.

* * * *

The case for the O. T. A. rested on one main ground. It rested on the main ground that the O. T. A. made liquor harder to get, and ,that when it was harder to get liquor it was harder to get drunk. "We admit," said Prohibitionists in effect, "that the O.T.A. is not perfect; we admit that there is bootlegging. But bootlegging is not the exclusive product nor the monopoly of the O.T.A. It goes on under Government control. Moreover, there is not enough liquor under bootlegging to go round; and it is absurd to argue that you are going to make people drink less by making it easier to get drink." They pointed to decrease in arrests for drunkenness; to alleged economic benefits of prohibition in the United States; to reported adverse conditions under Government control, and to other things, as evidencing that the O.T.A., at worst, was better than open liquor sale. They rested their case on both moral and economic grounds.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

In one polling subdivision in Belmont and Methuen only six out of a total of 83 voted for Government control. That sounds like moonshine.

J. A. McCausland, M.P.P., wants to know what is going to be done about Toronto. And the only answer he has obtained so far is "nothing."

It is a lucky thing the British campaign is short, for it is making up in violence what it lacks in length.

The Ontario Temperance Act cannot truthfully be described as popular in Toronto.

At all events Ontario showed a much smaller percentage of slackers than usual.

The only rules they seem to be using in the British election campaign are those laid down for football by a musical comedy comedian, "Use no hooks and

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, October 27 (Canadian Press). — Owing to the excited state of the market there was very little demand from foreign buyers for grain here on Saturday, and the export business was dull.

There was further change in prices for Ontario coarse grains, but the demand for all grades was limited with car lots of No. 3 extra malting barley quoted at $1.08, No. 3 grade at $1.07, No. 2 white oats at 60 cents, No. 2 white at 58 cents, and No. 4 white at 57 cents per bushel, ex-track, Canadian Western oats were 1 cent per bushel lower.

The feature of the flour trade was the announcement made by spring wheat millers of another decline of 20 cents per barrel in prices for all grades, due to the continued weakness in the Winnipeg cash wheat market. Prices were easier for winter wheat flour, but no actual change took place.

The volume of business in most lines of millfeed was moderate sized and the trend was steady. The market for rolled oats was firm.

No change of any importance occurred in the egg situation, prices for storage and fresh grades being unchanged at the recent advances noted. Little business was transacted in the butter market on Saturday, and in consequence the prices ruled steady.

Owing to the increased demand from British importers for September cheese, the prices continued firm in this direction at the recent advances noted.

The demand for new crop beans was good and prices were quoted at $2.55 per bushel for the one-pound pickers.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, October 27 (Canadian Press). Sterling exchange rates were quoted here on Saturday as follows:

Demand $4.48 7-8

Cables $4.49 1-4

WINNIPEG LIVE STOCK.

WINNIPEG, October 27 (Canadian Press). — Live stock receipts on Saturday: 400 cattle, 300 hogs, and 120 sheep and lambs.

Trading on the cattle market was quiet, with all classes selling steady.

The hog market weakened slightly, with thick smooths selling at $9.25.

Sheep and lambs sold steady, with best lambs up to $12.50.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, October 27 (Canadian Press). — General liquidation continued on the wheat market on Saturday, with the price changes still on the downward trend. The close showed a net loss of 17-8 cents for October, 5-8 cents for November and December, and 14 cent for May.

Holders of October and December wheat were switching to May in a large way. Around the opening, which was a little lower, considerable "short" covering was in evidence, while exporters were fairly active on all price recessions, the volume of business handled being much larger than during the past few days.

Saturday's bearish factors included weaker Liverpool cables, which came 2 3-8 to 2 5-8 cents lower, continued fine weather throughout the West and larger receipts with some hedging sales. Favourable weather in the Argentine also had its influence here, a break of 10 cents in wheat values indicating a big improvement in conditions there following recent rains.

Future oats and barley were under pressure most of the morning, with a fairly large volume of trade worked. Rye held fairly firm, the decline ranging from unchanged to 1 cent lower; oats lost 1-4 to 17-8 cents, and barley 3-4 to 15-8 cents.

Flax was showing an easy tendency on a small trade with scattered liquidations, closing prices being 1 1-4 to 4 3-8 cents lower.

A good export trade was transacted in No. 4 cash wheat, the lower grades with spreads improving 1 to 3 cents. The high grades were not wanted, and continued to go through the clearing house in large quantities.

A fair demand came out for the lower grades of cash oats, with spreads about 1 1-4 cents lower. A large trade was worked in barley, with rapid fluctuations, the close being about 2 cents lower.

There was nothing much doing in rye and flax.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, October 27 (Canadian Press). — Faced by 3 1-4 to 5 1-2 cents break in quotations at Buenos Ayres on Saturday, the wheat market here failed to hold an advance of nearly 2 cents which had largely been brought about by a reduction in estimates of the Argentine exportable surplus.

Late advices told of good rains in Argentina.

Closing prices were nervous at the same as Friday's finish for wheat to 3-8 cent lower, December $1.41 1-4 to $1.41 1-2 and May $1.46 to $1.46 1-8, with corn 1-8 to 5-8 cent up, oats varying from 1-4 cent decline to an equal advance, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents down.

At first, the wheat market here showed weakness in sympathy with a decline at Liverpool, due to expected liberal world shipments. The offerings ,though, were much scarcer than had been looked for, and with the demand rapidly becoming broader, a sudden advance ensued, estimates meanwhile being current that the maximum exportable surplus from the new Argentine crop would be only 136,000,000 bushels, whereas exports from last year's crop have already exceeded 158,000,000 bushels with ten weeks yet to go.

Estimates from Rome were also to

CONFESSION TO MURDER BARRED IN HIGH COURT

Grants New Trial to Chinese Student Convicted to Triple Slaying.

FIGHT FOR YOUTH.

Submitted Brief For Poor Alien, Challenging Alleged Use of 'Third Degree.'

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—A fight of more than four years to save the life of a young Chinese student convicted of a triple murder, in which John W. Davis played an important part, appeared to the youth's friends here to have been won when they received word that the United States Supreme Court had ordered a new trial. The court held that the confession of the Chinese, Ziang Sung Wan, was inadmissible, because after Wan was arrested in New York and taken to Washington, where the crime was committed, he was "third-degreed" for seven days.

Wan, who had been a student at Columbia University, confessed to having killed Dr. Ben Sen Wu, Under Secretary of the Chinese Educational Mission, and his two secretaries, Dr. C. H. Hsie and Dr. Theodore T. Wong, who were found shot to death in the cellar of the mission on Jan. 21, 1919. It was so largely on the basis of that confession that he was convicted and sentenced to be hanged that men in New York who, believing in his innocence, have waged an unremitting fight in his behalf. They declared that he probably never would be tried again, and that, if he were, he would be acquitted.

An interesting phase of the case was that efforts in Wans behalf have never ceased in all the years he has lain in jail, although he was penniless and no material sum ever was raised in his behalf. The Chinese Government is said to have spent a considerable sum to aid in prosecuting him, because the murder victims were members of its official Government family. They are even said to have gone so far as to confiscate his widowed mother's small property in Shanghai. Wan's American friends raised among themselves the money necessary for court fees, spinting and the like, and resolved to appeal only for services. It was on that basis that an appeal was made to Mr. Davis to interest himself in the young alien's behalf. One of those instrumental in getting Mr. Davis's services said that the lawyer showed great interest when all the queer circumstances of the case, and the helpless situation of the convicted man were presented to him. He consented to act, even though things looked black after the Court of Appeals had upheld the local court, provided an examination of the records should convince him that Wan had not had a fair trial.

Mr. Davis Did Not Forget.

The records were sent to Mr. Davis's office, according to the story told last night, he became satisfied that there was strong ground for taking the question of the admissibility of he confession to the highest tribunal, and then Mr. Davis sailed for Europe.

One of Wan's most active friends lost heart then, particularly when he read that John W. Davis was being entertained by the King and Queen of England. But the very first thing Mr. Davis did when he returned to New York was to sign a brief and submit it to the Supreme Court. The case was argued before that body by William C. Dennis and Charles H. Fahy, and in an opinion rendered by Associate-Justice Brandies a new trial was ordered for Wan on the ground that both his alleged oral admission of guilt to the police and the confession they induced him to sign should have been excluded as a matter of law since in that respect "there was no issue upon which the jury could properly have been required or been permitted to pass."

Aside from the interest in the case created by the strange web of circumstance in which Wan became entangled, and the outcome of the unflagging fight to save him, it was regarded by lawyers and police authorities as having an important bearing on the admissibility of confessions obtained by the police in capital cases under methods that might be interpreted as duress. James A. O'Shea, arguing against the admissibility of the confession at the original trial, reasoned that had a man signed a will under such conditions as those under which the confession admittedly was extorted from the suspect, no court in the land would have held that was valid. The highest court, in agreeing that such evidence, so obtained, is inadmissible, recites, in one detail, the experience which Wan underwent after he had been arrested in New York as he was in the act of writing a telegram of condolence on reading in the newspapers that Dr. Wu and his assistants had been murdered. Dr. Wu was an old family friend, had taken an interest in Wan since the youth was a child, and had befriended him only a day or two before the murder.

The Story of the Confession.

Wan was arrested on information of a Chinese who lived near the mission, who told hat he had gone there, apparently after the murders had been committed and had been admitted by Wan and by him informed that Dr. Wu and his secretaries were out. After he was taken to Washington he was placed in the Dewey Hotel and kept under an almost constant fire of police questioning. In reviewing the means of obtaining the confession, Mr. Justice Brandeis says that on the eighth day:

"The Superintendent of Police re-

DOCTORS MAY CUT 'BAD' FROM BANDIT ROY GARDNER AT WIFE'S REQUEST

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Oct. 27—Mrs. Dolly Gardner both loves and hates her husband, Roy Gardner, America's "slipperiest bandit."

She loves his real self, she says, but loathes that dual personality that drives him to crime.

And loving his real self as she does, she is appealing to medical science to exterminate that other hated side of his nature.

The government may answer her plea.

A portion of Roy's skull, Mrs. Gardner declares, is pressing down upon the tissues of his brain.

This condition, the "Houdini of hold-ups," now serving a 25-year term in the federal penitentiary here, himself says, is due to an injury sustained in boyhood by a fall from a horse.

Dr. A. F. Yohe, prison physician, insists an operation would be useless.

But Mrs. Gardner went to Washington and laid her case before Heber W. Votaw, superintendent of the board of prisons, and other officials of the Department of Justice. There resulted an order from Attorney General Harlan F. Stone for a new examination.

He Was Once a Home Man.

That was the first victory Mrs. Gardner had won in her three-year fight in her husband's behalf.

Major Edgar King and other army surgeons from Fort Leavenworth will make the tests and report direct to the attorney general as to whether the operation is advisable. X-ray photos will accompany their findings.

Mrs. Gardner contends the notorious mail train robber never would have entered a career of crime if the bad side of his nature had not got the better of him.

"He was a loving husband, a home-lover and we were in comfortable circumstances," she says. "We had saved up a thousand dollars when he went out and committed his first robbery.

"It was his diseased brain that drove him to it. If his brain were given a chance, his mind would make him a good citizen and make him want to live quietly with me and Jean, our 7-year-old daughter.

But Cure Must Be Certain.

"But I never want him freed as he is. I would rather he stay where he is than get out only to find himself robbing another train or committing some other crime.

And Gardner himself agrees with her.

Meanwhile he is in solitary confinement for threatening violence to doctors who several months ago, after an examiantion upon order of former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, reported back that an operation wold make no difference in his mentality.

"Crime," says Gardner himself, "is a disease, just as smallpox, influenza or any other ailment.

"The fact that I am a criminal is no fault of my own. If some brain specialist will come to me, take me as the subject of a serious scientific investigation, probe deep into the diseased tissues of my brain and cut them out, I am positive Roy Gardner, the bandit, immediately would be transformed into an honest, upright man."

ROY GARDNER'S RECORD

April, 1920—Robbed mail truck at San Diego of $87,000.

June, 1920—Convicted of robbing the mails, sentenced to 25 years at McNeil's Island penitentiary near Tacoma, Wash.

June 7, 1920—Escaped with Tom Wing, Chinese prisoner, from W. E. Kavanaugh at East Portland, Ore.

May 19, 1921—Returned to California through Mexico to give himself up.

May 11, 1921— Found officers knew he was back, intended to capture him, so he left home armed to escape arrest.

May 20, 1921— Robbed Pacific Limited at Newcastle, Calif., of $120,000 in bonds.

Dec. 15, 1921—Arrived at penitentiary to begin serving term.

VICTORY IN SIGHT

MRS. DOLLY GARDNER (ABOVE) WHO HAS SUCCEEDED IN OBTAINING AN ORDER FROM THE ATTORNEY GENERAL FOR AN EXAMINATION TO DETERMINE WHETHER HER HUSBAND, ROY GARDNER (BELOW), MAIL TRAIN ROBBER, CAN BE CURED OF HIS CRIMINAL TENDENCIES THROUGH AN OPERATION UPON HIS BRAIN.

first Street. Mr. O'Donnell found the youth friendly and honest, but shy, sensitive and superstitious.

Frightened at Cat's Eye Pin.

Mr. O'Donnell had not had his Chinese valet very long when, one night, he took from his tie a cat's eye pin which had been given to him by a baseball player who brought it from the South Sea Islands. The boy began to shake and tremble, and with evident anxiety asked his employer if the stone were a real cat's eye. Mr. O'Donnell supposed so, but didn't know, whereupon Wan informed him that he could tell by putting a drop of water on it. If it were real the drop would roll on whole; if not, it would break and spread. The experiment was conducted, the stone proved to be genuine, and Mr. O'Donnell, because of the youth's obviously genuine agitation, asked for an explanation.

Wan said the stone was the petrified eye of one of the gods of his ancestors who had gone into the mountains to die; that for him to have handled it at all was a terrible sacrilege, and that some awful misfortune surely would overtake him.

The American tried to make light of the youth's fears, but had no great success. When he reached his home the next night, he found a note, but no valet. Wan had put the cat's eye away in a drawer, left directions where to find it, and departed. Mr. O'Donnell sent for him and tried to coax him back. Wan would not come.

The next time Mr. O'Donnell heard from Wan he was in jail in Washington, charged with murder. The circumstances which put him there are seldom equalled by those fictionists who rejoice in plunging their young heroes into an inextricable maze of misfortune. Wan went to Washington to visit Dr. Wu, he and the brother having cemented their early friendship when they crossed the Pacific on the same ship. Wan suffered a recurrence of stomach trouble, which had prostrated him before, left the mission because it was short-handed and he needed nursing, went to a small hotel and wired to his brother to come and take care of him.

T. Li Van visited his brother and left the hotel to buy fruit. According to his own story, "I meet a tall and short Chinese who made 'fuss' over me, seeming to know all about me. I never saw them before and could not understand them, as they came from such extreme part China. We all had to speak broken English to understand each other. They want me to go somewhere with them; I said I had to return to sick brother."

Presented Check at Bank.

The next day the brothers went to the Union Station preparatory to returning to New York, where they had a room. T. Li went to buy the tickets and encountered the two strangers once more, this time in the smoking-room. "They call me over and again made 'fuss' over me, at same time stating they want me to do them favor by cashing check for them at a bank." Having at times found himself in a similar predicament, T. Li finally consented to go to the Riggs National Bank and rode there in a taxicab with the tall Chinese. At the door the stranger handed him an envelope, told him to enter and get cash for the check inside, and, if there was any question about its validity, to tell the cashier to telephone to the Chinese Educational Mission. T. Li maintained that he never saw the check, having handed it in the window in the original envelope and offered the telephone suggestion as he had been directed.

He was kept at the bank for forty minutes while efforts were made to communicate the mission, a paying teller having doubted the signature of Dr. Wu, whose name was signed to the check, which was for $5,000. At that time Wu and his two secretaries lay dead in the mission, their bodies still undiscovered. At last the bank, being doubtful, T. Li was politely asked to come back another day, and the envelope with the check in it was returned to him.

The big Chinese grabbed the envelope when T. Li re-entered the taxicab. They drove a little way and the short Chinese appeared. The big fellow got out, the pair disappeared, and T. Li rejoined his brother at the station.

It was that incident, plus the visit of Wan to the mission, the door of which he found open, while the murdered man lay in the basement, and the chance that a Chinese neighbor called at the mission and found him there led to the conviction. The two strange Chinese and the forged check were never seen or heard of afterward.

CHURCH UNION IN PETERBORO

Anti-Union Meeting Held Recently In Hastings Was a Huge Success.

The members of the Peterborough Branch of the Presbyterian Church Association are pleased with the success of th anti-Union meeting held recently in Hastings, which was attended by representatives from every congregation in the district excepting Keene.

An indication of the strength of the anti-Union sentiment is found in the fact that a delegation from the congregation at Warkworth motored all the way to Peterborough to attend the meeting held in Peterborough recently, and the following night returned with two or three additional loads to attend the meeting at Hastings.

Speaking at the Hastings meeting, Rev. H. R. Horne, of Toronto, made reference to the pastoral letter issued recently by some nineteen ministers in the Peterborough Presbytery, and published recently in The Examiner, in which they expressed their intention to enter the United Church.

He stated it was a valuable revelation to the members of the congregations concerned and helped to clarify the air by showing where these ministers stand. He also pointed out that now that these ministers have claimed their right to say what they are going to do, there could be no objection to the people in their congregations claiming the same right. This, he stated, they intend to do by taking full advantage of the vote which Parliament has given them the power to claim.

No More Neutrality.

Some ministers, who have claimed that they were neutral on the Church Union question, in the past have sought to prevent the people of their congregations from expressing their views on this subject of even holding meetings to discuss it. In some cases they have given as their reason that they did not want to see a division among their members.

Now that the ministers of the Peterborough Presbytery have shown where they stand, it is held that it will not be possible for any of them to take this stand in future, and that the air has been cleared to that extent.

Votes taken in several congregation have clearly indicated that the congregations of a number of these ministers do not intend to follow them into the new United Church.

A Disputed Claim.

In some quarters an effort has been made by ministers to lead members of their congregations to belice that it would be dishonourable now to reconsider the Church Union question ,on the ground that this was settled when the last vote was taken in 1915 and by the recent action of Parliament.

This claim is being strongly opposed. In reply, it is pointed out that from the very inception of the Church Union movement it was made clear that the two votes held years ago were held merely for the purpose of ascertaining the attitude of the people towards the principle of Church Union.

It was carefully explained that the congregations would not be definitely committed to Church Union until after the Bill had been drafted and they had been given an opportunity to vote on it. So clearly was this understood that no question to the contrary was raised when the Church Union Bill was before Parliament. Parliament gave congregations the right to conduct a vote to decide whether or not they would enter the new United Church.

It is felt that any effort now to tell people that taking advantage of such a vote would be dishonourable does not represent the facts of the case.

Numerous Convocations.

Word received in the city from the Central Office of the Presbyterian Church Association states that a whole ... ies of convocations of Presbyterians will be held within the next few weeks. On Friday of this week a meeting was held at Lindsay.

Next week meetings will be held at St. Catharines, Ridgetown, Chatham, London and Sarnia, and the following week at Woodridge, Newmarket, Belleville, and Kingston. Arrangements for other meetings are being made.

It is becoming increasingly clear that many congregations are going to insist on their right to vote on this question, and it is stated that these are for the most part he largest congregations in their respective districts.

GAVE LECTURE EGYPTIAN LIFE

Prof. Cornish Addressed a Large Audience at Marmora Meeting.

MARMORA, October 27.—"Egypt in the Time of King Tutankhamen" was the subject of a most fascinating lecture by Professor Cornish of Toronto University, delivered in the Town Hall on Friday evening, 24th October. Through a misunderstanding, the audience had anticipated for this second of the University Extension Series another lecture by the same Professor on "Mesopotamia and Palestine." As the lecturer proceeded with his topic and further illustrated the second portion with interesting lantern slides, not the slightest disappointment was felt at the change.

The chairman for the occasion was the rector of St. Paul's, who, in briefly introducing the speaker and subject, said he was convinced that a treat was in store.

Professor Cornish described Egypt as one of the strangest countries of the world, with the River Nile running like a serpent from north to south. Nestled in tis valley has the world's oldest civilisation lain for 7,000 years, its oldest rival being found on the banks of the Tigris. At first Egypt was not one. There was the upper and lower Egypt. It was a hard country to manage.

Other countries have been similarly divided. It is only in the last 70 years that Italy has become a country. In Canada we have the ideals of the east, the central and the west different, making the country that much harder to manage. The first capital of Egypt was Memphis, at the northern end. The original Egyptians were a peaceful people. They worshioped their gods, they tilled their lands, and buried their kings in pyramids. In course of time a strange people styled the shepherd kings came down from Palestine or Syria and conquered them. This enslavement the Egyptians resented.

Before the invasion of the shepherd kings, there were no horses or wheeled vehicles in Egypt. These the shepherd kings introduced, with the result that the Egyptians learned the art of war and became a military people. Spreading out on each side, they formed the first great military empire of the world. At this time Egypt reached the golden age. The kings became great generals, carrying on seventeen campaigns in one of which a great army was led over thousands of miles of desert till Mesoootamia was captured. Thebes now became the capital. The riches of the civilised world poured into Egypt so that it became exceedingly wealthy. A great deal of wealth was used for religious purposes. They built handsome temples and established a powerful priesthood. Then there arose a king who cared nothing about war. He was a thinker or rather a philosopher. He came to the conclusion that his race should have a purer and nobler form of worship. He determined to stamp out state religion and to establish a religion in which the god of the sun would be worshipped. He resolved to destroy old temples and to remove his capital to the desert. He is the first king of Egypt which we have any knowledge of, Rameses II. He had seven daughters.

In Egypt the inheritance passed through the oldest daughter instead of through the oldest son. When the king died, the husband of the oldest daughter would acquire the throne. The oldest daughter therefore was most sought after. The sons of the king not desirous of seeing the throne pass to strangers would prevent it by distasteful actions. The sons of Egyptian kings magried their sisters. Such marriages went on for numbers of generations. The great military geniuses were products of such marriages. The argument of feeble-mindedness as a result of the marrying of blood relations seems to lose weight against this Egyptian fact.

Tutankhamen married one of the seven daughters of that Egyptian king that has been mentioned. He was a mere boy when he came to the throne and a mere boy when he died.

At this point of the lecture, the illustrations were used, including that of the Rosetta stone discovered by Napoleon. Another illustration was the picture of Campolian, the brilliant French scholar, who has done so much for the world through his interpretation of Egyptian hieroglyphics. Views of Luxor and its sister town and also of sections of King Tut's tomb, created great interest.

"Yet," said the lecturer in conclusion, "not one half of the riches of the tomb have been revealed by Howard Carter and his men to the world."

Rev. D. R. Clare moved the vote of thanks to Professor Cornish, which was seconded by Mr. E. C. Prentice.

Mr. F. S. Pearce also added a few words of appreciation.

Rev. P. Caiger Watson announced the third lecture to be given by Dr. H. A. Innis, of Toronto University, on 7th November the topic being "The Mackenzie River."

Marmora Orchestra again rendered their services and the singing of the National Anthem terminated a profitably spent evening on the part of all present.

In the course of the afternoon, with characteristic generosity, Prof. Cornish delighted the punils of the Marmora High School with an address both interesting and brilliant.

TRENT VALLEY POWER DEVELOPMENT

The Commission is at the present time developing the power sites at Dams No. 8 and No. 9 on the Trent Valley canal system. These are located respectively six and four miles down stream from Campbellford, and are thus only a few miles from Ranney Falls, the new generating station on this system, which was placed in service in 1922. The development at Dam No. 8 is nearing completion, the first unit having been started up on September 13, and the second on September 16, 1924. The station at Dam No. 9 will be ready early in 1925.

An interesting feature of these two developments from the standpoint of engineering and operation, as well as economics, is the making of them automatic, with remote supervisory control. This is the first installation of this character to be made by the Commission, the first in Canada for Hydraulic Generating Station; it is believed to be the largest combined development under automatic control on the continent, and its operation will doubtless be watched with interest.

Although the application in these instances of the supervisory control equipment has been made to new stations, it is possible to apply it to existing stations by supplying certain control features. In any application a detailed study of its pecularities will be required in order that suitable equipment may be chosen.

At each development there are three units, those at Dam No. 8 have their turbines rated at 2,200 h.p. and generators at 2,000 kv-a. at 80 per cent. power factor, 6,600 volts, 3-phase, 60-cycle at 150 revs. per min.; those at Dam No. 9 have their turbines rated at 1,600 h.p. and the generators at 1,400 kv-a. at 80 per cent. power factor, 6,600 volts, 3-phase, 60-cycle at 180 revs. per min. At both stations the units are vertical with direct connected exciters.

The stations are both located alongside of the dams of the Trent Valley canal system. The sub-structure of each station is of re-inforced concrete construction while the superstructure at Dam No. 8 is of native limestone and that at Dam No. 9 of concrete. The superstructures house the generators only, the transformers and 44,000-volt switching equipment being placed outdoors with the steel structure.

The control for both stations will be located in Ranney Falls generating station. It will be possible for the operator at this point by pressing ordinary telephone switch keys to—

(1) Start and stop any unit in either plant; (2) to increase or lower the load on any unit; (3) to raise or lower the power factor of either station; (4) to place either one or both stations on full automatic control, being controlled by a water level float which is located in the respective station, due to the fluctuation of the water level in the forebay.

The metering equipment will be installed at Ranney Falls and will indicate the kilowatts and integrate the watthour load output of each station. Separate meters will indicate the reactive volt amperes carried, and graphic instruments will record the varia in water level in the forebay at each of these remote stations, and rows of ten lights indicate the gate opening of each unit.

All these signals are transmitted similarly to the method used in automatic telephony, and in event of any automatic functioning of the equipment at either of these stations the operator at Ranney Falls will immediately be warned of this operation by a Klaxon horn sounding, and should he be at the control board at the time he could actually note what operation has been performed automatically by the signal lamps changing on the board. Another Klaxon horn, located at the remote stations, is also energized for a short period to call the station attendant. Provisiou has been made in the equipment whereby the operator can check the position of all the equipment at either of the remote stations by pressing a special telephone key for this purpose, which will start a sequence of signals, which will entirely check the location of alt breakers, the signal lamps at Ranney Falls either remaining as they were or changing if some operation had occurred and not been signalled through previously.

A unique feature at both stations is that any of the generators can, under normal control, be started and placed on the line and be carrying full load in less than one minute from the time the operator operates the key switch to start the unit, most of this time being taken in the machine speeding up.

Each generator on starting is brought up to approximately 93 per cent. full speed when the breaker is closed automatically placing the generator on the line without field excitation, the field switch is then immediately closed automatically and the generator pulls into step and is at once under governor control. The design of the generators—at Dam No. 8 having solid field poles and those at Dam No. 9 being equipped with a special pole face or amortisseur winding—gives them the necessary inherent high pull-in torque which permits this manner of operation. The governors on each unit are specially equipped with a bye-pass valve which, on starting, permits the gates to open a small way quickly and then allows them to continue opening very slowly. The governors are driven by synchronous motors rather than the former standard belt-drive.

Normally a unit is shut down by the governor closing to its no load full speed position when a contact is made which opens this unit breaker. By this method, the load formerly carried by the unit is gradually transferred to the other units which are operating on the system before it is cut clear of the line, thus avoiding surging. In cases of trouble, however, the unit is promptly cleared from the line by relays provided for that purpose. The brakes are automatically applied by a mechanical attachment on the governor, the governor oil pressure being used for the operation of the brakes.

The lubrication for each generator is self-contained. At Dam No. 8 the thrust bearing operates in an oil bath and is water-cooled, receiving water from the supply pipes to the turbines, by syphoning it through; the guide bearings are fed with oil from a gear-driven pump located in the lower guide bearing pan. At Dam No. 9 the oil for each unit is cooled by a cooling oile located in the water supply pipes to the turbines, and the oil pump located in the lower guide bearing pan circulates the oil of each unit to all its bearings.

The turbines at both stations have been supplied by the Allis Chalmers Limited, the ones at Dam No. 8 being of the "Francis" type, while those at Dam No. 9 are the "Propeller" type. Woodward governors are being installed at both stations. The generators at Dam No. 8 are being supplied by the Swedish General Electric Co., and those at Dam No. 9 by the Canadian Westinghouse Company. The complete switching equipment for both stations is being supplied by the Canadian Westinghouse Company. The step-up transformers at Dam No. 8 were supplied by the Packard Electric Company while the service transformers at this station and all those at Dam No. 9 are supplied by the Moloney Electric Company.

Each generator and its step-up transformer is considered a unit, there being no low voltage oil switches; however, by means of disconnecting switch and a transfer bus, it is possible to connect any generator with any transformer. Protection and control can also be interchanged by operating corresponding sets of knife switches in the protective devices and control circuits.

The output of both stations will be fed into the Central Ontario system on one of the circuits between Ranney Falls and Trenton. An emergency connection is provided from Dam No. 9 to the second circuit between Ranney Falls and Trenton.

In addition to the customary protective devices which are installed by the Commission, each generator has the following:—

(a) Thermal relays, these function only if a pre-determined load on each unit is exceeded for a given length of time, and they cause the unit to shut down only temporarily until they, and also the generator, has cooled down.

(b) Thermostats on all bearings, when these function due to excessive heating they operate a lockout relay on the particular unit in trouble, immediatey shutting it down and preventing the starting of the unit until the lockout has been reset by hand.

(c) An over generator voltage relay, this functions as (b).

(d) A field failure relay, this also functions as (b).

The step-up transformers are e with contact making thermo-meters which function like the thermostats on the generator bearings.

Each station is equipped with a switchboard on which is mounted the customary metering equipment, the contactors for the automatic control of the station and, in addition to this, the special equipment for remote indication. The indication and integration of the output of each station in kilowatts and watthours is accomplished by what is known as the "Impulse" method whereas the indication of the reactive volt amperes and the graphic record of the variations in the forebay water level is accomplished by the "Series" method of metering. The switchboard is equipped with push-buttons, which permit the station to be manually controlled in an automatic manner.

The supervisory control equipment, portions of which are installed at Ranney Falls and at each of the remote stations, is similar to the automatic tel phone system installed in the Commission's office building. Ten wires are required between each remote station and Ranney Falls for the control and indications.

By the use of this control it is possible to reduce to a minimum the attendance at the remote stations. This further means a considerable saving in accommodation for the operator, as the generating stations are located away from the town. This saving is partly off-set by the additional cost of the supervisory control and its maintenance and supervision.

Voltage regulators are being installed in each station which controls the voltage of the station rather than each unit. Special inter-locking devices have been provided whereby only one generator controls the regulator at any one time.

Use is being made of the present battery at Ranney Falls to provide 48 volts d.c. for operation of the supervisory control equipment at that point. At each of the remote stations a 48-volt battery is being installed, which has sufficient capacity for the ating of the 44,000-volt line oil wi ches, and it is also used for operation of the automatic and supervisory control ment located in these stations. The battery is charged from the exciters, interlocking equipment being provided so that only the exciter on the first unit started will do the charging. The battery charging equipment is controlled by a contact making ampere hour meter, which automatically controls the charge taken by the battery.

MENUS FOR A FAMILY.

Breakfast — Halves of grapefruit, soft boiled egg, buttered whole wheat toast, fried green tomatoes with cream gravy, milk, coffee.

Luncheon— Cream of lettuce soup, croutons, stewed tomatoes, gingerbread, milk, tea.

Dinner — Boiled mutton, plain boiled potatoes, creamed turnips, hearts of lettuce, fruit dessert, milk, coffee, brown bread and butter.

Two tablespoons grapefruit juice slightly sweetened should be served to a four-year-old child about half an before he eats his breakfast. He will not eat the fried green tomatoes and sauce.

Serve one or two tablespoons of the fruit dessert without the whipped cream to a child under six.

Fried Green Tomatoes.

Wash green tomatoes and cut a slice from stem end. Cut tomatoes in slices about 3-8 inch thick. Sprinkle with salt and let stand with a weight over them for half an hour. Drain. Dip in fine cracker crumbs, egg slightly beaten, and again in crumbs, and fry in butter. Brown first on one side and then on the other. Stir one or two tablespoons flour into the butter left in the pan, slowly add one or two cups of milk, stirring constantly, and serve sauce with tomatoes.

The tomatoes should be very green, not even half ripe.

Cream of Lettuce Soup.

Two heads of lettuce, half cup of coarse celery, 2 sprigs parsley, 1 small onion, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 3 cups water, 2 cups milk.

Use outer leaves of lettuce and tht solid stalk, saving the tender leaves for the dinner salad. Wash lettuce through several waters.

Melt two tablespoons butter in kettle, add lettuce and simmer 10 minutes. Add onion peeled and sliced, celery cut in dice, and water and cook for 20 minutes. Add salt and cook 10 minutes longer. Rub through a puree strainer. Melt remaining butter, stir in flour, and slowly add milk, stirring constantly, and bring to the boiling point but do not let boil. Add vegetable stock and reheat. Serve with a spoonful of whipped cream topping each plate.

Combine diced peaches, apples, pears and white grapes with sugar and serve in sherbet glasses. Garnish with sweetened whipped cream. The fruit should be mixed and chilled for an hour before serving. This is an excellent quick dessert, using bits of fruit that might otherwise go begging.

The hearts of lettuce should be dressed with oil and lemon juice, seasoned with salt and pepper and a bit of sugar. Lemon juice is preferable to vinegar. Vinegar retards digestion and has no food value, while lemon juice is rich in vitamines, and has a tonic effect.

PUBLIC GUESSING.

MacDonald's Opponents Are Making Capital Out of Russian Letter.

LONDON, Oct. 27.— (Canadian Press.)— Unless or until Premier MacDonald tells the country more than it knows at present, everybody is being kept guessing as to how and why the alleged letter from Zinovieff to British Communists and London Government's protest against the communication came to be published on the eve of election when disclosures seemed likely to affect adversely the Government's chances at the polls.

Labor's opponents are indignant that the letter was not published earlier as they declare it was in the government's possession before parliament was dissolved and they are making all possible political capital of this part of the incident. Some of MacDonald's friends assert that he is not convinced of the authenticity of the letter, which, if true, only adds to the public's inability to understand why it was published. Eight cabinet ministers over the week end referred to the letter.

The public is looking eagerly for Mr. MacDonald to make things clear. Meanwhile anti-Government press declares that the incident has killed the chances of Laborites being returned to power in Wednesday's election.

Her Wonderful Teeth

Remove the dingy film that's clouding yours and you'll be surprised that your teeth are just as white and charming as any one's—make this unique test.

HERE is a simple test that proves the truth that most of us have pretty teeth without ever knowing we have, or ever revealing it.

This is the reason:

Run your tongue across your teeth, and you will feel a film. A film which absorbs discolorations and hides the natural color of your teeth.

Remove it and your teeth take on a new beauty. Maybe you have really beautiful teeth without realizing it.

Film is charged too with most tooth troubles. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. Germs breed in it. And they, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

So, besides loss of tooth beauty, film is a serious danger to healthy teeth. You must remove and constantly combat it. It is ever present, ever forming.

Old-time dentifrices were unable to combat it successfully. And tooth troubles were a serious problem.

Now modern science has discovered a new way. A new-type tooth paste called Pepsodent that acts to curdle film, then harmlessly to remove it. No soap or chalk, no harsh grit dangerous to enamel.

"Jack died at the wrong time—

I had lunch with him only the other day and he seemed in the best of health. Now Edith wants me to administer his estate. But there is no estate."

"Why, surely Jack left her something. He always seemed to have plenty of money."

"Yes, he had a good income; but he also was a good spender. His business was prospering and in a few years they would have been well off."

"Poor Edith! Whatever will she do?"

"I'm sure I don't know. But she will have to find some way of earning her living alone."

Would this be the wrong time for you to die? Then ask for our booklet about Monthly Income Policies. It explains how a few dollars a year will provide a regular monthly income to care for your family should death call you early.

WARSAW, Oct. 25.—The benefit entertainment given last Friday evening in the Town Hall, Warsaw, by some of the Douro young people was a decided success in every way. It was hoped $100.00 would be realized and the receipts was $98.50. There were three playettes all amusing and well done. "Rosebrook Farm" in four acts, by about fifteen young people mostly from S.S. No. 5 hinged on scientific farming and ended in several happy engagements, with a few misunderstandings thrown in. "Larry" by eight young people, mostly from S. S. No. 4, was amusing. Larry an hotel clerk, straightened out three pairs of lover's disputes and himself became engaged to the landlady, all thanks to Larry.

"Sudden Bethrothal," portrayed a bachelor who came to a village of old maids, and was fearful they would want to marry him. He was determined none of them would. Despite the terrific cold on Mars, at least two forms of earth life could exist there. One is "evergreen" vegetation. The other is the salmon trout, which always lives in water at a temperature of 40 degrees.

Furthermore, nature adapts all life to fit its environment. Or life adapts itself, if you prefer. Vanity suggests otherwise, but there may be special forms of life on Mars that couldn't exist under similar conditions on earth.

MURDEROUS.

A lot of auto drivers still are indifferent about the safety of pedestrians. This is shown when they fail to apply brakes with excessive caution—let the walker "look out for himself." An occasional driver even swerves his car to make pedestrians jump back to the curb—and laughs.

These people are murderers at heart, without the courage to kill. They vent their maliciousness or high nervous tension at the risk of the lives of people afoot. Assured of not being punished, many of them would run down a pedestrian with glee.

BY CAROLYN WELLS

"Yes, dear," and Dolly fluttered around her with loving little attentions and drew a low table to her side.

Dolly adored Nan, and always endeavored to imitate her ways. So now she, too, was quiet and composed.

"Listen, Dolly," Nan said, after they had had their tea; "I can trust you, can't I?"

"To the end!" said Dolly.

"Then, dear, I'll tell you, that I am in deep trouble. Don't ask me any questions, don't tell anybody anything about me, but help me all you can—won't you, Dolly?"

"Indeed, I will."

"Then this is what you can do, dear. Take this little parcel and hide it somewhere among your own things until I ask you for it again. Have you some place—where nobody can get at it?"

"Oh, yes; I have a drawer in my desk that I always keep locked."

"And can you get it over home without attracting attention?"

"Don't worry, Nan, darling—trust all to me. Why, it's a small parcel. I can get it in my coat pocket—it's a big pocket, you know."

"Very well, dear. Do that—and never say a word of it to any one—not even your mother."

"Oh, I won't. What else can I do for you?"

"Nothing now. Be true and faithful to me, won't you, Dolly?"

Nan looked utterly despairing, and Dolly put her arms round her as she reassured her of her love and loyalty.

"All right, dear," and Nan suddenly straightened up and looked brave and strong again. "Now, dress, and we'll go downstairs."

Nancy Raynor dressed herself with care, choosing a plain black gown, and massing her dark hair in a soft coil.

Downstairs, Dolly found a peremptory message from her mother to come home at once, and she had to go.

Nancy Raynor presided at the breakfast table, and at first no one was there with her but Ezra Goddard.

"Excuse me, if I speak abruptly," he said in a low voice, as the butler left the room for a moment, "but, Mrs. Raynor, if you want any help or advice that I can give, command me. Or get a lawyer—but don't ask Malcolm Finley to help you."

"Why?"

"I think you know why"—he spoke very gently—"but much will depend on to-day's disclosures. And remember, I'll be glad to help in any way I can."

"Good for you, Goddard," Orville Kent said, as he came into the room, "we'll want help, I'm thinking, Nancy, dear, be careful what you say."

With that, Kent lapsed into silence and devoted himself to his breakfast, paying little attention as the others of the household drifted in and took their places at the table.

Malcolm Finley, beyond formal greetings, said almost nothing, and Miss Turner was equally taciturn.

Only Miss Mattie Raynor was loquacious.

"Do you know what I tink?" she asked. "I think old Grim Gannon had something to do with Douglas' death. You know Gannon is a queer dick."

But nobody commented on this statement, or responded in any way to Miss Mattie's opinion.

"Come for a walk in the gardens," Finley whispered to Nan as they left the dining-room.

"I daren't," she returned, lifting piteous eyes to his.

"Come with me, Nancy," Kent said, peremptorily. And as she obeyed, he admonished her. "Are you crazy, Nan? For heaven's sake keep away from Finley at least until after the funeral!"

"Yes, Orry," she said, docilely.

"Stay by me, or Miss Mattie, all the time. You can't be too careful, Nan."

"Of course, I'll do all that—I know my duty——" and Nan once more regained the poise that was natural to her.

Dr. Fraser and Detective Dobbins arrived and called the household together in the great living-room.

It was clear to be seen that they were possessed of new and important information, and Dobbins seemed scarcely able to control his own excitement as the medical examiner began his inquiries.

"We have found strange conditions," Fraser began, addressing himself principally to Nan, but taking in the rest in his roving glance. "Of course, Mr. Raynor was killed by a pistol shot. It was fired at short range, the bullet entering his heart, and death was practically instantaneous. But an autopsy has revealed the fact that Mr. Raynor was also the victim of poisoning."

He paused and looked at one after another of the silent group.

Only Miss Mattie showed excitement.

"Yes," Fraser went on, "an examination of the contents of the stomach shows the presence of arsenic, taken very lately.

"As may not be known to you laymen, the symptoms of cumulative arsenical poisoning are anemia, shortness of breath, occasional prostration, pallor, and excessive thirst. All these things were present in Mr. Raynor's case, and I'm sure you can remember them."

"I do," Miss Mattie cried. "Oh, my poor Douglas! Yes, he was so thirsty at luncheon yesterday, he called for one glass of water after another. Posioned! Oh, my God!"

The elderly spinster hid her face in her hands.

"This," Fraser went on, "opens up a new field of inquiry. We must assume that someone administered the arsenic from day to day——"

"Unless it was suicide," put in Ezra Goddard.

"There is that possibility," Fraser admitted, "but it is highly improbable. To resume, this process of arsenical poisoning of Mr. Raynor must have been going on for at least a fortnight or so, and had he not been shot, and had the poisoning continued, the man must have died from its effects in the course of another fortnight."

The alert eyes of Detective Dobbins scrutinized the faces before him.

But save for the contorted and agonized countenance of Miss Mattie, they were all stonily devoid of expression.

Nancy Raynor looked like a statue cut in marble. Her face was colorless, even her lips were almost white, and her great dark eyes were piercingly fastened on the face of Doctor Fraser.

"Can any one present," Fraser went on, "suggest any explanation of this poisoning process?"

As no one replied, he questioned each in turn.

"Certainly not," Nancy Raynor said, her voice and manner perfectly composed. her voice and manner perfectly composed. "I cannot imagine who would attempt to poison my husband, and I am most certainly sure he never thought of doing such a thing himself."

"The thing is almost incredible," Orville Kent said, in turn. "Why, if somebody was successful poisoning a man, would he also shoot him?"

"That is a question easy to ask and difficult to answer," Dobbins declared.

"Miss Turner," Fraser said, "as nurse and dietition to Mr. Raynor, did you not notice the symptoms I have described?"

"Not to think of them as symptoms of poisoning," Eva Turner answered. "I noticed that Mr. Raynor was pale, was anemic, and that at times he showed shortness of breath, but these things I was trying to correct by changes in his diet. As you know, Doctor Fraser, those symptoms you mention are not exclusively the effect of arsenical poisoning."

"No, of course not. You couldn't be expected to realize their cause. But now, having discovered the presence of arsenic in his system and in his stomach, we know—we know that Mr. Raynor was being purposely and systematically dozed with arsenic."

He paused and glanced around.

"She did it!" Miss Mattie broke out, between her sobs. "Nan did it—I saw her slip a tablet——"

"Hush!" Orville Kent fairly thundered at her. "I insist that Miss Raynor shall not be allowed to talk. She is beside herself with nervous excitement and is not responsible for what she says."

Kent was white-faced and stern.

"Mr. Kent," Fraser said, "you must not defeat the ends of justice—"

"I don't want to," Kent stormed back; "but I refuse to sit here and let my sister be slandered and wickedly accused by a woman who would willingly perjure herself to convict my sister of a crime she is incapable of committing. You have no right, Dr. Fraser, to listen to the ravings of a mad woman——"

"There, there, Mr. Kent," Dobbins broke in, "you do harm rather than good to your sister's cause by such a violent outburst. This investigation must be made. We must ask questions of those present, as they are the ones most likely to know the facts. Miss Raynor, do you accuse——"

"No," and Mattie Raynor sat bolt upright, and controlled herself sufficiently to speak quietly. "No, I accuse nobody. I spoke impulsively, and I retract anything I said—or suggested."

Nan looked at her with a sort of dumb gratitude.

Then Ezra Goddard spoke.

"It is a strange case," he said; "but I should say, Doctor Fraser, that as the poisoner did not succeed in his efforts and the person who shot Mr. Raynor did carry out his fatal intention, that the poisoning matter sinks into insignificance beside the matter of the shooting."

"Not at all, Mr. Goddard. The poisoner is quite as much a criminal in intent as the one who fired the pistol. Moreover, it is my theory that they are one and the same. We must admit the desire to kill Mr. Raynor on the part of somebody. The situation suggests that this would-be murderer tried the poison process, and finding that too slow, or too inefficacious, resorted to the quicker and surer means of shooting."

"Well," said Orville Kent, shortly, "get busy then, and find out who it was. But go about it by inquiry and evidence and not by the imbecile methods of accusing an entirely unsuspectable person!"

"The situation is narrowing itself down," Doctor Fraser said slowly. "While I regret the necessity, I must, Mrs. Raynor, ask you for a frank statement of your attitude toward your late husband."

"My attitude?" Nan said, her head held erect and her dark eyes blazing with indignation. "That is a strange question, sir. I can only say that my attitude toward my husband was that of respect, honor and admiration."

"And love—Mrs. Raynor?"

"I don't know just how to answer that." The beautiful brow knitted. "I assume I must answer, however, so I will say that while there was comradeship and harmony between my husband and myself, there was not what might be called deep affection."

"Why did you marry him?"

"For reasons of my own—quite apart from affection or——"

"A matter of expediency, then?"

"Exactly." Nan seemed pleased with the word.

"And the reason for that expedience?"

"That I cannot tell you. If you can persuade me that it is necessary I may do so—but otherwise, I shall not answer that question."

Fraser paid no attention to the anger of her brother, but continued to question Mrs. Raynor.

"Had you noticed the symptoms I described as being those of poison?"

"I had noticed that my husband did not seem very well, but I ascribed it to the changing diet he was eternally trying."

"Meaning that Miss Turner experimented on him?" said Fraser quickly.

"Only in the pursuit of her duty. I know that my husband was a faddist as to his diet, and I know that Miss Turner, as well as other dietitians he has employed, did her best to please him."

Instead of seeming gratified at this vindication of herself, Eva Turner looked curiously at the speaker.

"I thank you," she said, at last, nodding her head in Nan's direction, "but I am in no need of your championship, Mrs. Raynor. Nor am I especially interested in the matter of poisoning. I should say, Doctor Fraser, that the shot that killed Mr. Raynor was far more important than poison that didn't kill him! And I will ask you to remember, that I was the one who turned on the lights just in time to see two people in the room with the dead man—either of whom——" she paused, and then went on firmly, "both of whom are secretly glad of Orville Kent turned on her in a fury of passion, but Ezra Goddard laid a restraining hand on his arm.

"Keep quiet, Kent, he said. "Miss Turner, you are making a grave statement."

"I am," she responded, her face white and set, "but you can determine the truth of it for yourself. As the principal witness, as the one who first turned the light on a deed done in the dark, I hold that my testimony is of utmost importance and should be considered first of all."

"You are right, Miss Turner," Dobbins said; "if you saw the dead man and those two people in the room, there can be no doubt that one of them fired the fatal shot. The question is, which one?"

"That ought to be easy for a detective to discover," Miss Turner said, carelessly.

The woman's face was almost distorted by fury.

Goddard looked at her curiously. Why should she be so wrought up over the matter? Why so bitter toward Nancy Raynor, and, inferentially, toward Finley? Was she in love with the dead man? Or with Finley?

And then Miss Mattie broke in again.

"Oh, Nan," she cried, in a wailing tone; "oh, Nancy, why did you do it? I saw you—I saw you drop pellets in Douglas' teacup—twice I saw you—"

"Did you do that, Mrs. Raynor?" Fraser fired at her, suddenly.

"Yes," faltered Nan, "yes—I did."

ARTICLE No. 3

The following hand is an interesting test of your skill in drawing inferences:

Hearts — Q
Clubs — 7, 5, 4
Diamonds — 6, 4, 3
Spades — Q, 10, 8, 5, 4, 3

	Hearts — 5, 2
	Y
A		B
	Z
	Clubs — A, J, 6, 3
	Diamonds — K, 10, 5, 2
	Spades — A, K, J

Score: Rubber game, A-B, 10; Y-Z, 12. B dealt and bid one no-trump, Z two hearts, A doubled and Y passed. B now bid two no-trump, Z three hearts which A promptly doubled and all passed. A opened the nine of spades and the first two tricks are — First trick: A plays the nine of spades, Y the ten, B the jack and Z the six. Second trick: A plays the deuce of spades, Y the four, B the king and Z trumped with the trey of hearts. From these facts the readers are asked to infer the remaining cards held by A and Z, the play of the hand and the final result. The whole question hinges on the double by A and the subsequent re-bid by Z. A's double of two hearts should show at least two sure heart tricks and one outside trick. Z's re-bid in the face of A's double and B's bid of two no-trump should show an unusually strong hand and one that should come very close to making the contract. The writer is of the opinion that on the bidding, A should either hold the ace king and one or more hearts or the king jack and one or more hearts and one outside trick. Z should hold at least six, possibly seven hearts, headed by the king jack ten or the jack ten nine and at least three outside tricks. If A holds the ace king and other hearts, he probably hasn't any outside trick. This probably is his real holding as Z must have the outside tricks to justify his bid while A's double would be justified if he held only the ace king and one heart. In that case place both the ace queen of diamonds and the king queen ten of clubs in Z's hand. From these inferences and the play of the first two tricks, the hands of all four players would be about as follows: (The X represents a card under a ten spot.)

	Hearts — Q Clubs — 7, 5, 4 Diamonds — 6, 4, 3 Spades — Q, 10, 8, 5, 4, 3
Hearts — A, K, X Clubs — X, X, X Diamonds — J, X, X, X Spades — 9, X, 2	Y	Hearts — 5, 2 Clubs — A, J, 6, 3 Diamonds — K, 10, 5, 2 Spades — A, K, J
	A B
	Z
	Hearts — J, 10, 9, 8, X, X, 3 Clubs — K, Q, 10 Diamonds — A, Q Spades — 6

Z's best play of the hand would be to lead trumps at trick three. A's best defense would be to play the ace king of trumps and throw Z in the lead with a small trump at trick five. Z should now lead two rounds of trumps and then the king of clubs. B can win this and force Z to trump by leading a spade. Z should now lead the queen and ten of clubs, forcing B in the lead at trick eleven. B must now lead diamonds and Z wins the remaining tricks. If this inferential distribution is correct, Z only loses his contract by one trick. It is an excellent hand to try out your knowledge of the bidding and the proper inferences to be drawn from it. The play of the hand is also interesting and should be carefully studied.

One point about these inferences that all players must note is that they are the result of straight thinking. It is something that cannot be learned through a correspondence school or by reading a series of articles. You must play the game and keep your eyes open every minute. Have you ever been trained to think? Have you ever had the acid test applied to you to discover whether or not you had imagination? If not, it is a good time to commence if you expect to become a successful auction player. You must learn to ask yourself these questions: "What is he doing it on? What cards does he hold to justify his bid?" These are the questions that should be threshed out in your mind after every bid and every double. In no other way can you ever hope to get the proper inferences.

Food Science shows that meat has 598 food units to the pound (See Life, Its Mysteries & Miracles, BY J. H. It is the most nourishing and strength-building food sold; especially valuable for children from the 10th month and for nursing and expectant mothers, because of its sound body building properties; also for the dyspeptic and constipated.

In May, 1924, Dr. Jackson easily won a 1,300 mile bicycle contest in 19 days, living largely upon Roman Meal and milk and without tasting meat, against a man 30 years younger and 50 pounds lighter, who lived largely upon meat. HUNTERS ALREADY OUT.

Parties Trek to Far North Where Season Opens Earlier.

Hunters of the big game are already setting out for the haunts of moose, deer and caribou in the northern parts of Ontario where the season opens earlier than in the district usually patronized by Peterborough sportsmen.

White's Cycles and Sports Store on Saturday issued a license for hunting in the section in Ontario north and west of the French and Mattewa rivers, where the open season is from October 25 to November 30. Saturday also saw a party captained by J. C. Largely set off for this section with the possibly of continuing north of the main line of the Canadian Government Railway where the moose season opened on September 15 and closes on November 15.

It is said by parties that have prospected the hunting area north of Peterborough, that traces of deer are numerous and clear and that the prospects for a good season are excellent.

The partridge season is open from October 15 to November 20th., both days inclusive.

A JUBILEE WEEK AT GEORGE STREET

Special Services Yesterday By Rev. R. W. Sockman, of New York.

The Jubilee Inaugural Week of the year which commemorates the golden anniversary of the erection of George Street Methodist Church in Peterboro was marked by Sunday services of exceptional interest yesterday. There were large and attentive congregations at both morning and evening services, when the special speaker was Rev. Ralph W. Sockman, M.A., Ph.D., of Madison Avenue Church, New York City. The music for the day was extremely good, including several solos by Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park and Mrs. J. H. Renwick.

Rev. Dr. Sockman, a speaker whose easy, polished flow of language is marked by earnest, impressive thought, spoke at the morning service from a portion of the 8th verse of the 42nd chapter of Psalms: "Deep calleth unto deep," likening the imagery of the Psalmist to the experiences of life, when deep calls to deep. Speaking of the life of William Cowper, with its dominant note of melancholy, conceived because of the conviction formed by Cowper in early life that he had committed the unpardonable sin and was accordingly damned to hell for eternity, and deploring such an attitude, the preacher said: "But it is as great a pity when a man does not have great experience in his life, when great moments fail to stir him to a great response. There is no help for a man who has reached a point where nothing within him calls to deep experiences outside of him."

The various strata of existence were described as being those of the bodily level, on which the sensuous type of person lives and moves and has his being, occupied almost solely with thoughts and plans for good living and clothing and entertainment, the level of the intellect, in which those who dwell thereon become absorbed in business or mental pursuits, and the level of the spirit, the plane on which deep human sympathy reaches out to suffering fellow-creatures, "deep calling to deep."

The tragic loneliness of the numbed and bruised soul, seeking for spiritual consolation, was likened to the spirit suffering of "the incomparably sensitive Jesus," the speaker characterizing the physical tortures of Christ as being little when compared to the spiritual hurt of that moment when He knew that the friends whom He had asked to watch with Him were not equal to the effort and had gone to sleep while He watched and prayed in Gethsemane.

"This power of meeting the need of the soul for spiritual understanding can be lost very easily," said Dr. Sockman, referring to the types of parents in "This Freedom," the clever man and woman so absorbed in their own interests that they neglected their own offspring. "I always have a little fear about those parents who are eager that their children should have religious instruction and yet are too busy themselves to pray or meditate."

"The face is the dial that registers pretty accurately whether the owner of it is living on the bodily, or the intellectual, or the spiritual plane."

"This town of yours is phenomenal in the effort it spends proportionately on its church life. When I come here from New York, I stand in humility before you, but even here in Peterboro, you probably have many who are not giving their firstlings to the church, but only the fragments of their time, the fag ends of their energy, their snap judgments."

"You can only get into real touch with God on the spirit level. We are told that 75 per cent. of the male population of America are out of vital touch with the church and that 50 per cent. of those who come to church have no vital experience of God's existence. Who is to blame? I, as a minister, am willing to assume a portion of the responsibility, and to admit that ministers have often been feeble messengers of God's Gospel, but the pulpit cannot shoulder the entire responsibility. Religion is not a vital thing to men to-day because men have forgotten spiritual concerns and allowed the shallower matters of life to engulf their higher aspirations. You must adjust your radio to the wave length of any broadcasting station to receive the messages from that station and it is the same way with spiritual messages. It is up to you to tune in with the Infinite. In these crowded schedules of ours, when he have no business or pleasure engagements, we drop into the church, and, failing to catch a glimpse of the God-capped summits, go out and speak contemptuously of religion. But God waits. When calamity and trouble overtake us, then we too, like Oscar Wilde, are ready to write our 'De Profundis,' and God hears and forgives. Shall we allow this power of getting in touch with God to lie unused until we get to the brink of calamity? Some people use their power of prayer only to send out S.O.S. messages and police calls and firm alarms. All that God asks is that we be as fair with Him as with our broadcasting instruments and that when we become adjusted to His wave length, that we stand by."

Whiter, cleaner, safer teeth have only to fight the film

Accept this offer of a new way of teeth cleaning. It is delighting millions. It is bringing them the prettier teeth you see everywhere today.

It means vast benefits which your home should enjoy. Let this test show them to you.

You leave film

You feel on your teeth a viscous film. No ordinary tooth paste effectively combats it, so much of it clings and stays.

Soon the film discolors, forming dingy coats. Then pearly teeth grow cloudy.

Film is the great destroyer. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Those who escaped such troubles have been few indeed.

Two new methods

Dental science has in late years found two ways to fight that film. One disintegrates the film at all stages of formation. One removes it without harmful scouring.

These methods have proved themselves exceedingly effective. A new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

Leading dentists everywhere began to advise it. Now this tooth paste is in world-wide use. To careful people of some 50 nations it has brought a new dental era.

Every user knows

Every user gains at once new benefits, new delights.

Pepsodent multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. It multiplies the starch digestant in saliva. These are Nature's agents for combating acids and starch deposits. These combined effects will bring you new conceptions of clean teeth.

Present the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

Then decide by what you see and feel. Cut out coupon now.

Protect the Enamel
Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

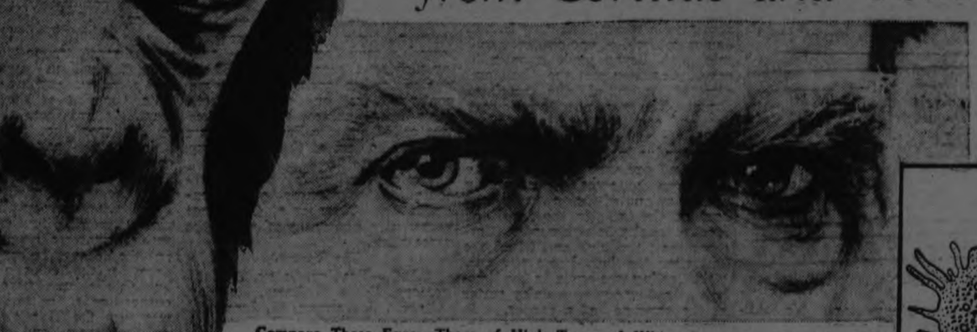
Now Science Puts THREE Monkeys at the Top of Man's Family Tree

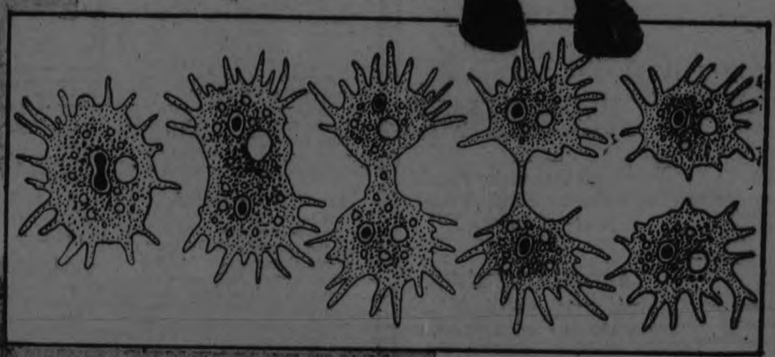
Why the Famous Dr. Crookshank Thinks the White Race Sprang from the Chimpanzee, the Blacks from Gorillas and Yellow People from the Orang-Outang!

An Orang-Outang With "Almond" Eyes, Astonishingly Like the Chinese Child at Right.

Closeup of a Chimpanzee, Showing the Beetling Brows, Intelligent Eyes and Other Facial Characteristics Which Suggest, According to Dr. Crookshank, He Is the Great-Great-Granddaddy of White Men.



Compare These Eyes—Those of High Types of White Caucasian (Above)—With the Eyes of the Chimpanzee at Left.



According to the Evolutionists, This Amoeba, Life's Simplest Cell-Form, Is the Ancestor of All Living Creatures. The Drawing Illustrates, From Left to Right, How the Amoeba Perpetuates Its Kind by Dividing Itself Into Two Complete New Organisms.

THE anti-evolutionists and fundamentalists—including the Rev. John Roach Straton and Mr. Bryan—will either grin or groan when they hear this:

Science has just decided that man is not descended from one ape, but from three!

Yes, instead of the single "superior anthropoid" which used to adorn the anthropologies, a superb trio of monkeys now perch and cavort among the branches of man's family tree.

Dr. F. G. Crookshank, Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians and member of ninety-seven learned societies, has discovered, or believes he has, that Mr. Bryan, Dr. Straton, and all other members of the so-called white race, are own cousins to the chimpanzee.

Harry Wills, the able negro boxer who tamed the Wild Bull of the Pampas, can point with pride to the great gorilla as his arboreal ancestor, according to the Crookshank theory.

And by the same token the President of China is intimately related to the orang-outang!

This is something new, and will be as great a surprise to Professor Osborne and the American Museum experts in New York City as it is to the anti-evolutionists.

The theory which Dr. Crookshank advances, backed by an impressive array of biological data and supported by some extremely amusing observations of his own concerning the habits of modern men and monkeys, is substantially as follows:

There are three irreducible stocks in the human race—the white, black and yellow.

These are offshoots from three different stocks of primates, or apes, which correspond to the three different types of now-existing great apes—the chimpanzee, the gorilla and the orang-outang.

The white race corresponds to and is descended from the same stock as the chimpanzee; the black race and the gorilla are from the same stock; and the yellow race is blood-cousin to the orang-outang.

The chimpanzee white stock is the highest in the scale of development; the gorilla-black stock is the lowest, and the orang-outang-yellow is intermediary.

The chimpanzee-white stock includes the Semitic races, the Indo-Aryans and the Caucasians.

The gorilla-black stock includes the negroes, bushmen and Hottentots.

The orang-outang yellow stock includes the Chinese peoples, Siberians, Japanese, Eskimos, Malays and Southern Mongols and the North and South American Indians.

Dr. Crookshank finds actual physical resemblances, though these do not constitute his chief argument.

The chimpanzee, for instance, has a face that is decidedly more like that of an Irishman or Englishman than it is like a Chinese or negro. Its eyes, particularly, are like those of a white man; its beetling, overhanging brow is still characteristic of many highly developed white Europeans and Americans. Its coloring while not "white," is nearer white than either the gorilla or orang, which are quite definitely black and yellow, respectively.

The gorilla has certain resemblances to the negro, coloring and great physical strength are perhaps the most marked.

In the case of the orang and the yellow man, even a child, placing a picture of an orang and a Chinese boy side by side, would be struck by certain resemblances—the dome-shaped forehead, the slightly "almond" eyes, the drooping eyelids.

More important than any physical resemblance, however, Dr. Crookshank believes, is a similarity of postures which he thinks he has discovered.

The Chimpanzee, Supposed Ancestor of the White Man, and Which Sits by Preference On a Chair.

Africans Who Squat On Their Haunches, With Legs Drawn Up to Their Chins, Just as Gorillas Sit, and Who Still Live in Tree-Tops, Like the Great Apes.

The Mongolians in sitting down naturally arrange their lower limbs horizontally, or on a plane with the earth or floor, in the attitude of statues of Budda, one hand on the thigh and the other in the lap. The orang-outangs—alone among apes—naturally place themselves in this position, and none other.

The members of the black division of humanity arrange their lower limbs vertically, with knees coming up toward the chin and spine curved, with the arms either resting on or clasped around the knees.

Ancient Statue of Buddha Sitting in an Asiatic Attitude With Legs Horizontally Placed, Which Is the Way Orang-Outangs Sit, Dr. Crookshank Declares.

The only difference between the black and white divisions of humanity in the natural adoption of these postures, is that the blacks rest their seats upon the ground, while the whites (still seen in Polynesia and Egypt where there are still branches of the white race which habitually do not use chairs) do not, but merely squant on the heels. In civilized countries, the white man "squants" now on a chair.

The gorilla commonly adopts the black variant of this posture, sitting solidly on the ground. The chimpanzee, in a natural stage, sits on his haunches or on a log, and when he is in a cage, if he is given a bench or chair or stool, he accomodates himself to it naturally and by preference, just like the members of the white race.

A feature of Dr. Crookshank's book which will excite just as much interest as his "triple ape origin" of mankind is his startling arraingment of the Lothrop-Stoddard theory of the inherent superiority of the "blond Nordic" race.

One might think that Dr. Crookshank, beginning with the premise that white men descended from the chimpanzee, most intelligent of apes, would have something good to say about the "blonde Nordics." Not at all. He evidently believes that the phrase itself is a misleading fiction.

According to Dr. Crookshank, the very qualities which Stoddard and Grant point to with pride in their blond Nordics—the smooth, dry white or sallow skin, straight hair and egg-shaped skulls—are in the first place not true white characteristics at all, but throw-backs to the Mongolian or orang type, and in the second place stigmata of inferiority and even imbecility when they do occur in the white man!

He calls these types "Mongoloids," and says they are very numerous in England. "Roughly speaking," he continues, there is a high and a low grade. The low-grade individuals, who have almost always some Simian stigmata, rank among life's failures.

"A criminal doctor, a bankrupt parson or a more than commonly knavish lawyer is not infrequently of this class. The woman of it are ineffectual, even in vice. Superficially attractive when young, they soon lose their attractiveness."

"Mongoloids" of the higher type, according to Dr. Crookshank, sometimes achieve marked success, on the stage, in professions and even in statecraft. But they remain, in a very real sense, a race apart.

In searching for an example of a "Mongoloid" of this higher type—that is, a white man with atavistic, far-back inherited tendencies which connect him with Mongolians and orang-outangs — Dr. Crookshank has very amusingly hit upon Clemenceau, the "Tiger of France."

He says Clemenceau was very accurately nicknamed "the Old Tartar," and points to the fact that on his retirement from political life recently he sat down cross-legged and began to write Buddhistic plays!

Dr. Crookshank does not think that the three types are unmixed. He says one can find all three among native Londoners (and by implication native New Yorkers or inhabitants of any other civilized white city.)

"And then we can see them again at the zoo, the white man caricatured by the noisy, mischievous and busy chimpanzee; the Mongolian by the dignified, philosophic and self-sufficient orang-outang; the black man by the slow, cunning and powerful gorilla."

If Dr. Straton and Mr. Bryan wish aid or comfort from Dr. Crookshank's book, they will get it, not so much from what lies between its covers, as from the fact that his fellow-scientists will now begin chewing it to pieces, and constructing still newer theories from its remains.

P.C.I. WIN IN OSHAWA-QUEEN'S DEFEAT McGILL 13-8-M.A.A.A. EASY FOR TIGERS BY 20-1-WOOLLENS WIN TROPHY

COLLEGIATE SCORED TOUCH ON OSHAWA IN FIRST FIVE MINUTES

Held Possession From Kick-Off and Carried Ball Across Goal Line.

P.C.I. WON BY 16-2

Rye, Bookout and Pogue Played Fine Rugby, With Whole Team on Edge.

Coach Browne's P.C.I. squad trimmed the Oshawa High School team 16 to 2, at Alexandra Park, Oshawa, in the first game of a home and home series in the Central group of the Interscholastic O.R.F.U. on Saturday.

P.C.I. broke the spirit of the Oshawa team when they went right down to score a touchdown for five points in the first three minutes of the game before Oshawa had even had possession of the pigskin. This was Coach Browne's plan of campaign and it succeeded splendidly.

Although Oshawa worked hard and improved vastly, getting their stride as the game progressed, they never seemed to get over the morale effect of that early touchdown. It might almost be said that the first touch won the game for the garnet and grey.

The day was ideal for Rugby with a gentle breeze blowing diagonally across the field, which died out entirely during half time. P.C.I. chose the end giving the slight wind advantage and Hart kicked off for Oshawa High. The kick was short and just went over the P.C.I. first line. Pogue got the ball on the bound and ran it back to centre. On P.C.I. first down Rye tore through the Oshawa line for twenty yards. Bookhout went through for fifteen more, and Cheu went around the end for the same distance. Rye carried the ball over the line on a buck and set it between the posts for five points for P.C.I.

The Oshawas had hardly had time to become aware of the fact that they were in a Rugby game before this touch was on the score board.

The P.C.I. line was working perfectly and tore big holes in the Oshawa front to let the plays go through. The whole line was hitting the dirt and clipping all in reach. Pogue failed to convert.

Kicked for Point.

The P.C.I. followed the same tactics and worked the ball down to within thirty yards of the Oshawa line. There they were held in their tracks for two downs and Bookhout kicked a touch in goal, giving P.C.I. another point.

Oshawa was held on downs but P.C.I. lost the ball on a forward pass. Oshawa gained their first yards on a nicely executed on-side kick, but were then held for downs and forced to kick. Play continued in midfield with both teams sending kicks through for small gains for the remainder of the first quarter.

Rye Scores Again.

P.C.I. made a big gain when Bookhout got away for a long run and Rye followed immediately after with Peterboro's second touchdown, which Pogue failed to convert. Oshawa's bucks were meeting with better success and they gained yards repeatedly. Hart, their left half, got away as an extend for a nice gain. Oshawa was now in position to try a field goal and Kohen called for it, but it went wide of the standards and Pogue ran it out. Oshawa gained the ball on a forward pass and Hart kicked over a rouge, gaining Oshawa's first point.

Peterboro made big gains and were within eight yards of the Oshawa touch line with two downs to make it in when the whistle blew, ending the first half.

The score stood, P.C.I., 11; Oshawa, 1.

Third Quarter.

Oshawa came back strong after the rest and played with determination and pep. During this period the ball see-sawed from side, and the ball never moved far. Yelland kicked off for P.C.I. with a beautiful boot that sent the ball well over the line, but Williams ran it out thirty feet before the Petes' first tackler met him. Oshawa gained yards on five bucks by Johnston and Henry and were then held for downs. P.C.I. lost the ball on a forward pass. Oshawa held a little the better of the play, and near the close of the period Hart kicked over a rouge for their second point.

P.C.I. worked the ball up to centre, but lost it on a forward pass. Hart made a big gain on a shift play when he speeded around the short end, Oshawa sent through three bucks in a row and were within three yards of the P.C.I. touchline when Kohen fumbled the ball on an extended play.

Pogue Crossed Line.

From then until the end P.C.I. controlled the play and they moved up the field on well mixed plays. Bookhout made a big run through a host of Oshawa tacklers and was only stopped within nine yards of Oshawa's touch line. Rye went through for five yards and then Pogue pulled off one of the choicest features of the game when he scored a touch through centre where the Oshawa players were the thickest, by vaulting on their backs and calling held when he was in the air and about half a yard over the line. He failed to convert, and immediately after time was called.

For P.C.I. Rye and Bookhout were the chief gainers, and they were called upon frequently. Haney and Wood made fine touches and they were always down on Bookhout's high kicks to down Hart in his tracks. Cheu made good tackles and made some splendid gains around the end. At quarter back Gordie Pogue was a shrewd helmsman and his running was the best, and A. Yelland at Centre snapped the ball perfectly, and was through to break up many Oshawa plays. The whole P.C.I. line combined well and their interference showed great improvement and really won the game.

Hart the kicker and fast running half, and Kohen the quarter back, stood out for Oshawa. Hart caught faultlessly all Bookhouts' spirals and was their chief gainer when Oshawa's extends got away. The middle wings, Johnston and Henry, used their weight well and made many fine gains.

COLUMBIA WON OVER WILLIAMS

New York University Provided Saturday Football Surprise—Review of Games.

YALE BEAT BROWN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Pennsylvania, Lafayette and Syracuse, the only prominent Eastern elevens neither beaten nor tied, stand out as the big three of Eastern football during the current season.

Syracuse had the hardest fight to remain immaculate and emerged as a 10-to-6 victor over Penn State by grace of a fumble in the first period that permitted a touchdown.

Lafayette continued to impress as one of the really great elevens of the season by completely outplaying W. & J., and winning 20-to-6. The Presidentes' lone touchdown, made in the final minutes, was the first scored on Layaette this season. Gebhardt and Berry starred for the Easton team.

Pennsylvania won its sixth straight game by beating Virginia 27-to-0, using an aerial attack to do it. Rutgers and Lehigh remained unbeaten by struggling through a 13-13 tie.

Dartmouth played errorless ball and defeated by 6 to 0 a rugged but ragged Harvard squad.

Notre Dame also made it two straight over Princeton with a 12-to-0 victory over the Tigers.

Yale prevented the big three from dropping into total eclipse by scoring two touchdowns in the final four minutes of play and turning an apparent 3-to-0 victory for Brown into a 13-to-3 Eli triumph.

Columbia sounded a warning that the Haughton system may have bored its way to a firm foundation by overcoming Williams, conqueror of Cornell, 27-to-3, in the biggest surprise of the day.

Glance at West

CHICAGO, Oct. 27. — With the cross roads reached in the Western Conference gridiron champion race, Illinois has a firmer grip on the title as a result of Saturday's games which eliminated Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Fleet feet and field goals played important parts in yesterday's games, which, with one or two exceptions, ran true to form. A drop kick, delivered in a pinch, saved Chicago from a 3-to-0 defeat at Ohio State.

Michigan smarting under the defeat at Illinois, literally stampeded their way to a 21-to-0 triumph over Wisconsin.

Iowa kept in the race by vanquishing the powerful Minnesota team 13 to 0, at Iowa City, in a game in which field goals played an important part.

Illinois, with "Red" Grange and four other regulars on the sidelines, ran rough shod over Depauw, piling up a 45-to-0 score.

NEW MOTOR RECORD

Tommy Milton Averaged 118.17 Miles An Hour On Board Track.

CHARLOTTE, N.C., Oct. 27.—Spinning around the next Charlotte speedway at the fastest gait man has ever travelled around a mile and a quarter board track, Tommy Milton, Saturday afternoon won the inaugural 250-mile race. He was declared the winner at one o'clock Sunday morning after a check of timing tape showed that he had finished virtually two minutes ahead of Earl Cooper who had been flagged and announced as first.

Milton made the 200 laps of the track in 2.06.56.02 or at an average of 118.17 miles an hour. The previous record of 116.2 miles an hour was made by Harlan Fengler at Los Angeles, on Feb. 27, 1924.

QUEEN'S ATTACK WON AT M'GILL

Kingston Champions Were Held Till Third Quarter—Leadley Broke Through.

SCORE WAS 13-8

MONTREAL, Oct. 27.— Queen's University colors float still proudly in the breeze while McGill continues to travel the rocky road to defeat. Playing in a scheduled intercollegiate fixture at the Percival Molson Memorial Stadium Saturday, the Dominion champions defeated McGill 13 to 8, the visitors thus advancing a step nearer their coveted goal of a third consecutive Canadian title.

Experienced football by several brilliant stars, around whom Coach Hughes had built strong protection, as opposed to the pluck of an inexperienced McGill team, tells the tale of the encounter. The open field work of the Leadley-Batstore combination, the kicking of Leadley and the timely knifing thrusts of "Red" McKelvey, furnished the offensive that brought Queens' the laurels.

McGill showed a remarkable defensive strength and fought gallantly Time and again the red and white nailed the famed tri-color backs in their tracks and in the first half, especially, held them down, the result being that the champions started the second half but two points in front.

Leadley Broke Through

But the third quarter was not long under way before big "Red" McKelvey, the colussus of the Queen's line, ripped through the McGill opposition at centre field; speeded 25 yards with the ball to draw McGill safety half-back, and then passed over to the fast-following captain "Pep" Leadley, who gathered in the pigskin and raced the remaining distance to just make the corner of the goal line touch-down.

It was the turning point. The McGill bulwark, staggered by the suddenness of the reverse, gave ground and before the forces could be rallied in the final quarter, Leadley had added three more points with his second field goal of the game.

Faced with a ten-point deficit, the red and white for the first time in the game broke away from the line smashing game at which they had failed to gain, and opened up the play.

Three sequential onside kicks, the latter two of which were lucky recoveries after scrambles, left McGill in possession on Queen's ten-yard line——a net gain of 75 yards.

Capt. "Bones" Little punched through for seven yards and on the final down Eddie Hanna took advantage of a splendid opening in Queens' right wing to dive over the line.

Missed a Chance

It was in the second quarter the local collegians missed their best opportunity and one which might have materially changed the whole complexion of the battle. McGill carried the play to Queen's ten yard line. Two attempts did nothing but send play to a side of the field, leaving McGill at an angle for a drop kick. Then came a surprising move. Hughes was signalled to boot for a rouge. An attempted drop or an onside kick would at least have gone for one point and the chances were even that McGill would count a five or a three and take the lead which at that time might have done wonders for the local team. But the opportunity was missed and the McGill's best chance of victory went with it, charged up to the inexperience of the squad.

TIGERS TROUNCE MONTREAL TEAM

Errors by M. A. A. A. Contributed to Their Defeat of 20 to 1 at Hamilton.

BENGALS UNBEATEN

HAMILTON, Oct. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Tigers have to win but one of their two remaining games in the Interprovincial Union in order to land the championship. Both of the games they have yet to play are with Argos who have already met with one defeat. Tigers won the only Big Four game scheduled for Saturday when they defeated Montreal by a score of 20 to 1 in a battle which offered more excitement than the score would indicate.

While the Bengals always appeared to have an edge, the visitors took all kinds of chances and fumbles proved costly to them. The Tiger half backs again caught faultlessly but were lucky to recover some balls which had been misjudged owing to the strong sun shining in their eyes in the first and third quarters.

The Tigers gained two touchdowns during the game, one of which was converted, and the other points came singly, rouges and kicks to the dead line being responsible. Jeff Russell did noble work for the visitors playing on the wing line, back division, or any place that he could be useful.

The Tigers showed a promising half back in Raynor, a youngster who replaced Crocker on the back division in the last quarter and who brought the crowd to its feet by his great punting. He outkicked the Montreal half backs and was responsible for Tiger's second try.

C.P.C. JUNIORS DEFEAT NORTH DUMMER IN COUNTY FINAL FOR THE BRADBURN CUP

Score at King Edward Park Was 4-1 — Packers First Winners of Cup and Gordon Medals—Gardiner as Substitute Scored Three Goals.

The final for the Bradburn County Cup and the Gordon medals was played on King Edward Park on Saturday afternoon, the contesting teams being the C.P.C. juniors and North Dummer, and after a very keen and evenly contested game, the C.P.C. won out by 4 goals to 1. The Packers were minus two of their team, W. Chambers and M. Strudley, both having left the country. Their places were taken by Eddie Williams, the well known hockey player and Harold Gardiner, the London school boy. Both played an excellent game, Gardiner scoring three beautiful goals.

The Packers won the toss and had the advantage of the sun and a strong wind in their favour, and went away with a rush. Eddie Williams just missed the object in the first minute. From the goal kick H. Jory kicked well up the field. H. Darling got possession and from his centre G. Little sent over the bar. T. Montgomery was prominent with some well-timed returns. Gardiner passed to Foster, whose final effort just went wide. A. Jory took the goal kick and sent to R. Payne, who made a dashing run and sent to H. Darling, who beat Bradley with a splendid shot.

From the centre kick Foster made another invasion and sent in a well directed shot which Bryan saved at the expense of a corner. Downer took the kick and placed nicely to Mitchell, whose shot just grazed the bar. The Packers were playing a nice, combined game, Gardiner feeding his wings with nice passes. James got hold of one and sent well into goal. Bryan made a splendid save. Gardiner met the ball and directed it out of the reach of Bryan. The game now became very fast and exciting, both teams playing in their best form. The Packers were gradually gaining the upper hand and pressure was brought to bear upon the township goal, and in the melee one of the township men handled the ball in the forbidden area, a penalty being awarded. Gardiner took the kick and lifted the ball over the bar. From the goal kick, Darling was again in the limelight, Bradley saving a daisy cutter at the expense of a corner. R. Payne took the kick. F. Bell experienced the hardest of luck in not scoring from the goal kick. T. Montgomery sent Downer away and from his centre, W. James put the Packers one ahead by a nice cross shot.

The township men were now on their mettle and they were very dangerous, Halliday coming to the rescue by heading out of goal when a score seemed certain. Half time arrived with the score standing 2 to 1 in favour of the Packers.

Second Half.

Upon resuming the Packers went away with a nice combined movement, Foster testing Bryan, who gave a corner which Downer took and Gardiner sent just wide of the post. The township men were playing a defensive game and from a foul which Halliday placed well, Gardiner again beat Bryan with a surprise shot. From the centre kick the township men went at it with great energy and Bradley was called upon to save a splendid drive from H. Darling, fisting out in great style. The Packers' half-backs were in their best form, Mitchell keeping a watchful eye on Darling and feeding the forwards with ground passes. They were a source of trouble to the township defense. The brothers Jory were having all their work cut out to keep Gardiner and Co. at bay. R. Payne made a great run on the right, sending in a terrific shot, which Bradley turned around the post. Darling took the kick and sent just wide. From the goal kick Gardiner fastened on to the ball, and beating all opposition, scored the last goal of the game. The township men were not discouraged and became very dangerous. H. Jory was brought forward to force the game and it took the Packers' defence all their time to keep the township men from scoring, Bradley playing a great game. There was no further scoring. The game continued fast and exciting, both goals having narrow escapes. Time was called and the Packers became the first holders of the County cup by 4 goals to 1.

The cup and medals will be presented to the winners by the donors in the Chamber of Commerce rooms at a general meeting of the association.

The Teams.

VARSITY FOUND OTTAWA STRONG

Toronto Students Beat Big Four Team by 11 to 8 in Exhibition.

PLAY WAS OPEN

OTTAWA, Oct. 27.—(By Canadian Press).—Ottawa's Big Four rugby team went down to defeat for the fourth consecutive time this season when they were defeated by a score of 11 to 8. The game was, from the spectator's standpoint, one of the best of the season, and was marked by some very fine displays of open football by both teams.

While there was nothing at stake both teams set out to make it a real contest and spectacular rugby was in order from the start. Varsity took an early lead, via Warren Snyder, who booted a point and then raised the Blue total to seven by converting his own touchdown. One point each was the second period allotment and while Ottawa secured one in the third session, Snyder's boot gave Varsity three more with a drop goal from 25 yards out.

Ottawas started the fourth period in spectacular fashion. Ottawa was given the ball on the first play for no yards, and on their first down Miller skipped through from the 40 yard line for a touch, which Connell converted, bringing the score to 11 to 8. From here on it was a mighty battle, both sides strove for the advantage, but full time fund the score unchanged.

The intercollegiate style of open football appealed strongly to the Big Four crew, who delighted in the running and passing game that characterized the Varsity play. The locals were not slow in copying this effective system and the daring series of passing bouts that took place on the rearguards was a real treat. On the line, Ottawa more than held their own. Repeatedly they ripped the Blue line asunder for good gains and in turn held the Varsity plungers powerless.

Until Snyder was hurt in the last period and forced out of the game, he was the most conspicuous player on the field. Coupled with Pequegnat he afforded Varsity a great defensive and offensive combination. The outside wings, Capell, Duncan, Reid and Soanes all played cleverly and tackled well. Campbell's feat of capturing Mill's onside kick and making Varsity's touchdown possible was an outstanding one. Webber was strong at snap and King and Merritt played well.

Miller's 40 yard dash for Ottawa touch put him in the limelight more so than his consistent good work throughout the game would have done. He played a splendid game and was perhaps the best of the locals. Tubman was effective and kicked well, while Connell also scintillated. Mulrooney, a junior player, gives promise of being a real one, and improved every minute he was on.

BIRMINGHAM IS LEAGUE LEADER

Dethroned Huddersfield Town in Brilliant Victory on Loser's Field.

SOCCER SURVEY

LONDON, Oct. 27. — (Canadian Press). — Huddersfield town were dethroned from league leadership on Saturday by Birmingham, who themselves become promoted to the top of the standing, when they took the town into camp by a one goal margin. The game was played on Huddersfield's own ground. Birmingham's victory was brilliant, if unexpected. Huddersfield lacked the services of their international goalkeeper, Taylor, but otherwise both sides were at full strength. Despite the visitors' wonderful defence, their goal had several narrow escapes in the closing stages.

Sixty thousand people saw Manchester City divide the points with Bolton Wanderers. The result of the game had no effect upon the city's position in the league.

Aston Villa secured their first home win when they scraped through in the contest with West Bromwich by the only goal scored. The Albion's defeat was due to the cramped play of their forwards.

Newcastle Defeated

Newcastle United went down to Cardiff City on the Tynesider's ground by two to one. The Northumbrians missed many chances through hesitancy, but a draw would have represented the form of the game much better than a win for either team.

Arsenal deserved their victory over the "Spurs in a fast, exciting encounter which was more like cup-tie football than the brand served up in league tourneys.

Second Division

In the second division, Blackpool's unconvincing methods in almost every department of play was responsible for their defeat at the hands of Crystal Palace. A curious error on the part of the referee stopped the game between Fulham and Stockport County five minutes ahead of time. The nature of the play was aptly reflected in the cynic's remarks that the referee couldn't stand it any longer.

Derby County retained their position at the head of the second division and completely outclassed Clapton Orient. The latter have to thank their goal-keeper, Wood, that the result was no worse.

In the Third Division, southern section, the Bristol's game attracted a gate of 30,000. Attendance at league games in all divisions on Saturday totalled 670,000.

WOOLLENS WON PECK CUP FINAL FROM THISTLES

Ross Kicked Through His Own Goal—Williams Equalized a Few Seconds Later.

CLEAN AND FAST GAME.

Joe Gaskill Again Got the Winning Goal This Year in the Peck Final.

For the second year in succession the Canadian Woollens have won the Peck Cup. Last year they defeated the Thistle 2 goals to one at Nicholls Oval before a large attendance of spectators. The Thistle put up a sterling exhibition of soccer, in spite of the fact that the winning goal was scored by their own player, and had the ball in the rilt twice with offside decisions against them. Joe Gaskill scored the winning goal last year and again he had the honor with a similar goal Saturday. The spectators who attended witnessed a clean and fast game.

Game Described.

The Woollens raided the Thistle territory at the start but Rae cleared The came right back again to cause the Thistle defense great anxiety to clear the ball from danger zone which ultimately fell upon Carmichael In a series of give-and-take movements, Burgess broke away on the wing to beat Cridland on the tackle and without hesitation crossed into goal when Chambers punted clear.

Bishop Unfortunate.

Monkman trapped quickly and gave Mitchell an opportunity to lead a serious attack that was frustrated by Rae at the critical moment. It was from a parting shot by Hodgson that compelled the Thistle right-back to go hors de combat as the ball hit him on the face. 'Twas no sooner started again when he was winded for a time. From the throw-up Hutton beat along the wing to the other end, amidst great excitement, as he drew out the defense to send a left foot drive for the inside of the upright but his shot was turned around the corner for a fruitless corner. It was now the Thistle's turn to put on the screws and although their attack showed little of their usual activity around Hillman's citadel because he was easy many a time in his clearance. A few seconds later the Woollens' keeper could not complain of want of work for he had to fling himself in all directions after all kinds of shots from the Thistle forwards. Then fate dealt a tragic blow upon them when Richmond headed into the net but the refree adjudged him. Taking up the running again Thistle bore down upon their opponent's goal to find themesves again in that pernicious position—offside—as Williams landed the ball in the net, amidst protests.

Ross' Unlucky Play.

Howeevr, first blood fell to the Woollens. Jack Chambers nullified their goal work by sending Mitchell away on an individual effort to gain the benefit of the arguments as he went straight through but Ross came across to relieve the pressure by punting away the ball and witness it take a peculiar swerve into the net.

Equalized in 30 Seconds.

With seven minutes to go of the first half, Richmond from the centre, travelled in company with his left wing until close upon the ball and tapping the sphere to Williams' foot, the latter landed it inside the upright far out of the goalies' reach. An exciting five minutes followed in the vicinity of the Thistle's goal and on several occasions the ball was banged goalwards, only to have its progress barred by one defender or another. Up to half time there was little between the two sides. Interval—One goal each.

HALF TIME

After the usual rest, both teams were refreshed and it was through Hotston at right half that Hillman found testing him from long distance. Richmond headed back in again and the players claiming a handled ball which the the referee did not see, thereby, Monkman going away down the field, as they awaited a decision that might have proven costly as Hodgson outwitted the full-back defence but Carmichael popped up in the nick of time to prevent disaster and give away an unsuccessful corner kick by Rae. This sudden attack awakened up the Thistle's play and on several occasions they seemed likely to score, but the passing of the forwards was deplorable and good chances wasted.

Woollen's Defence Unbeatable.

While Carmichael at centre half was the mainstay of the Thistle defence, likewsie Chambers and Cridland were to their team. They wasted no time in clearing their lines at any time and at any cost, as no doubt two styles of play was in evidence. The Jags would play nice combination and tried to get too close within shooting distance which was nullified with the long punting kicks of the full-backs.

Play Fast and Clean

The Woollen's halves never hesitated to kick clear at first time and Mitchell as pivot never hung on to the ball as he found his opponent was keeping him in close check and his method was distributing the play to the wings. 'Twas nice to view the sportsmanship shown on the field of play by the whole twenty-two players with the creditable reputation they have obtained in every encounter in past years. While the Jags forwards played nice football all the time, it did not get goals and in this respect Richmond's splendid tries were worthy of better results, although some spectators' caustic remarks were uncalled for because the centre-forward gives his best at all times and is the penalty of being an excellent sport and pivotman.

Gaskill's Winning Goal.

Mitchell next provided the interest but his attempt was fooled by Carmichael who carried the ball into Woollen's territory. He passed forward to Hutton who was intercepted by Chambers. The full-back lifted forward to his forwards away up the field. Hodgson trapped the dropping ball to send Jackson down the wing and to everybodys' surprise the outside left sent a slow ball into goal where it was slammed into the net by Gaskill as the Thistle defence stood astonished. With only twelve minutes to go both teams altered their style of play. The Woollens went right on the defensive as the Thistle became more aggressive around the goal. "Wag" Hotston, at right half showed his old C.G.E. form as he tricked three opponents rapidly to finally make Hillman clutch the ball on the goal line. The remaining minutes were of thrills all the tie as the Thistle peppered the Woollen's goal without any success. Just as the whistle sounded Burgess sent in a shot from the touch line that hit the inside of the crossbar and land in the net but the game was finished as he kicked the ball. Woollens 2, Thistle 1.

The teams:

Thistle—Curtis, goal Bishop and Rae, full backs; Hotston, Carmichael and Ross, half-backs; Young, Hutton, Richmond, Williams and Burgess, forwards.

Woollens—Hillman, goal; Cridland and Chambers, full-backs; Sayers, Monkman and Read, half-backs; Roberts, Gaskill, Mitchell, Hodgson and Jackson, forwards.

Referee—Jack Clark.

Cup Presented.

After the game the cup was presented to the Canadian Woollens by Mr. Scott, the Quaker Oats player, in place of the absence of the Trades and Labour Council representative. He complimented the team on winning the trophy and handed it over to Captain Chambers amidst three cheers which was followed by the same to the Thistle team.

The cup was won in 1912 by the C.G.E., Owls 1922, Woollens 1923 and Woollens this year again.

MISS HELEN O'SHEA, DE FEO GRAND OPERA STAR, AT THE GRAND NEXT SATURDAY.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

NEW STAR A PARADOX WON'T TALK TO HIMSELF.

Edmund Lowe, Appearing in William Fox Picture, 'Honor Among Men,' Was Stage Favorite Before Entering the "Movies."

Edmund Lowe is a paradox. He is a motion picture actor who refuses to talk about himself.

A sterling actor, Mr. Lowe has had a career on stage and screen that the average Thespian would never cease to talk about, and, although he has reached the point of stardom, he is still reticent about himself. With the completion of "Honor Among Men," the screen adaptation of Richard Harding Davis' novel, "The King's Jackal," which is now playing at the Regent Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and which marks Low's entrance into the cinematic constellation, it was believed that an interview with the actor was apropo. So the writer sought him out in his dressing room at the William Fox West Coast Studios. The result was not all that was to be expected.

"Well," Lowe asked, "what is it you want to know?"

"About your career — the things you've done."

"I haven't done much," he replied casually.

"But," we insisted, "you're a star. You must have many interesting things to tell. Didn't you play in 'Julius Caesar' in New York?"

"Yes, I played Cassius." Lowe's face lit up and we became hopeful. "Did you see it?" he pursued. "Too bad; Tyrone Powers was wonderful as Brutus." And with that Lowe launched into a lengthy eulogy of the other members of the company.

"What was your first leading part on the stage?" we persisted, hoping to get the star on the subject of himself.

"Well, I played the juvenile lead in 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine' at the old Burbank Theatre in Los Angeles. I was terrible!"

This wasn't getting along so well. Lowe was hesitant to talk of the trivial facts that he had played opposite Lenore Ulrich in "The Sun-Daughter" and was co-starred with Jeanne Eagels in 'The Night Watch.' The task of the interviewer was an arduous one.

"You used to be a college professor, or something, didn't you, Mr. Lowe? No?"

Mr. Lowe, it seems, was graduated from Santa Clara University, studied practical pedagogy, and completed the course after having acted as instructor in English literature for a year—a requirement of the University.

H studied law, but deserted that to become a "super" at the Alcazar Theatre, Los Angeles, and celebrated his first performance by entering as captain of the guard and falling down in exactly centre-stage.

As luck would have it, Lowe is a Latin enthusiast, and a friend of his with the same weakness entered at this moment. The result was that the "interview" was delayed while the star entered into a discussion with his friend over the two schools of pronunciation of the language. The opponent wound up by telling Lowe that he had a profile like a Greek coin mashed by a Roman chariot.

"Quite true," Lowe agreed. "An artist told me once I would have a Greek profile if I only would have my nose fixed. But, so would Bull Montana."

We thought we'd let well enough alone and bowed ourself out.

AT THE ROYAL.

"THE HEART BANDIT" IS BEST OF DANA PICTURES

Newest Release of Tiny Metro Star Promises Great Entertainment—She plays a Thief—Comedienne Portrays Girl Robber who Wanders into Home of Refinement.

Viola Dana, the diminutive Metro star is due in Peterboro again today when she begins a three day engagement at the Royal Theatre in her newest picture, "The Heart Bandit." Miss Dana's latest production is reported to be a combination of comedy and drama that makes it the most successful of her Metro series. The star is given the opportunity for both character and straight work, the story affording a wide variety of atmosphere and action, and she is said to have made it her most appealing role.

Milton Sills, who takes rank as one of the most popular leading men in the films, appears opposite Miss Dana in "The Heart Bandit," being seen in a Dana picture for the first time since "Dangerous to Men," several years ago.

The story of "The Heart Bandit" which was written by Fred Kennedy Myton, concerns a girl bandit of New York's Bowery. Molly O'Hara is called "Angel Face" by her cronies in Spike Malone's gang of stick-up men because she looks so innocent and incapable of robbing anyone. As a matter of fact she is a thief only because she has never learned to be anything else.

As Spike's declared fiancee, Molly goes with him on a trip to hold up a truck outside the city limits. It is a trap and the two are forced to flee separately.

"The Heart Bandit" offers Miss Dana one of the most dramatic roles she has ever had, while on the other hand the picture is also brimful of merry moments in which she romps with her accustomed ease.

Included in the cast are Wallace MacDonald as Spike Malone, Gertrude Claire as an invalid old lady, Bertram Grassby as a sauve villain, and DeWitt Jennings as a hard-boiled detective. Oscar Apfel, who has directed all of Miss Dana's recent efforts, has officiated again.

Tom J. Hopkins did the adaptation and continuity, while John Arnold was the photographer.

LARRY SEMON IN THE SHOW."

An elaborately produced comedy, with a big cast of especially trained chorus girls, is on the bill at the Royal to-night. "The Show" is said to be one of Larry's best.

LEATHER PUSHERS TO-NIGHT.

Billy Sullivan, in another of the popular Leather Pushers series, "BigBoy Blue" is one of the Royal attractions now playing.

ALL-IRISH CAST.

An Irish play with an Irish cast, appealing Irish humor, and filled with "lovin' and fightin'" is the way Colleen Moore describes Tom Forman's "April Showers" soon to be shown at the Royal Theatre . Colleen, who with Kenneth Harlan, plays a leading role in the production says that no one but an Irishman could have directed it, which is the reason Tom Forman was selected for the task.

AT THE CAPITOL.

LILIAN GISH COMES TO CAPITOL IN "THE WHITE SISTER" NEXT MONDAY.

Lilian Gish, star of many of the greatest screen productions, comes to the Capitol next Monday Tuesday and Wednesday in her latest offering, "The White Sister." This is a picturisation of the celebrated novel by F. Marion Crawford and is considered Miss Gish's best picture. By special arrangement this picture will be shown three days; it will be recalled that the Capitol usually shows pictures for only two days. "The White Sister" is proving so popular with theatre-goers that the Capitol management have secured it for a three-day showing, however.

"SINNERS IN HEAVEN," AT CAPITOL, WAS MADE UNDER GREAT DIFFICULTIES!

The average film fan, who sits midst comfort and ease in a well-ventilated, excellently - appointed theatre and watches the silent shadows flit across the silver sheet, little dreams of the time and effort and energy that goes into the making of a motion picture. It is difficult to convince him or her (as the case may be) that the few thousand feet of film which takes about an hour to unwind upon the screen took many months of heartbreaking work—work sometimes accomplished under tremendous difficulties.

"Sinners in Heaven" is a case in point. This Paramount picture, which is showing to-day and Tuesday at the Capitol, was filmed almost entirely in the Bahama Islands. When you see this photoplay you will be amazed at the marvelous south-sea atmosphere and the pictorial beauty of the tropical backgrounds but you will know nothing of the hardships that every member of the company experienced in making the picture.

"The sun was 120 degrees in the shade and there was no shade," said Richard Dix, one of the featured players.

"Can you imagine," chimed in Bebe Daniels, who also has a leading role in the picture. "I had a chill and lost ten pounds."

In checking up the casualties of the location trip, it was discovered that Miss Daniels ran a rusty nail into her foot; Dix splintered his elbow in the fight he had with Montague Love, who played the native chief; Victor DeLinsky, who was one of the natives, suffered a badly sprained ankle while carrying Miss Daniels over slippery palm leaves for a scene in the picture; and everybody in the company came back to New York tanned and thin from the excessive heat of the tropics and marked by hundreds of mosquito bites. Oh Art, what sacrifices are made in thy name!

"Sinners in Heaven" was produced by Alan Crosland from an adaptation by James Creelman of the famous prize-winning novel of the same name by Clive Arden. It depicts the romance of a man and girl cast away on a desert island.

Besides Bebe Daniels and Richard Dix, the cast includes Holmes Herbert, Montague Love, Florence Billings, Effie Shannon, Betty Hilburn and Marcia Harris.

RICHARD DIX,

AT THE GRAND.

THE BEST IN MUSIC.

Opera at the Grand Next Saturday.

Jazz music has invaded our homes and our theatres during the last few years. It has been claimed in many quarters that its influence has been disastrous. Jazz music is not inspiring, nor elevating.

Our fathers and grandfathers have been used to another class of music.

A serious campaign has been started all over Europe and the United States to educate the people to love better music. There is no doubt that by listening to the works of the great masters we find ourselves lifted to a higher level of thought and inspiration; we purify our soul to a certain extent.

One does not have to be a scholar in music to love and appreciate pure melody; the immortal compositions of the past century have become justly popular because they appeal to the soul of every man and woman.

The De Feo Opera that is coming next Saturday to the Grand Opera House carries with it a great message to the people; it also has a great educational purpose in spreading the love of better music among all classes of people.

The cost of outfitting a travelling opera company is so large that there is hardly any great profit in it. The singers of the De Feo Company are all highly paid artistes, who won their laurels on the principal stages of Europe and America.

In spite of that Mr. De Feo insisted in his arrangements with the Theatrical Enterprises, Ltd. that the prices of admission should be popular prices so as to allow everybody to partake of this feast of real music.

The occasion cannot well be missed by anyone without bringing deep regret afterwards. The Grand Opera House should be filled to capacity on next Saturday evening, as a proof of the great interest the people of Peterborough have for the better and higher manifestations of art.

The De Feo Opera Company will give the best of music, interpreted by the best artistes at the lowest possible prices.

Who can deny himself such a rare and highly educational treat?

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Dear Mr. Editor,—Mr. Burnham objects to being called an agent of the Brewers' Association and wishes me to apologize. It is not my nature to take unfair advantage of any one and I would be most sorry to do so. Mr. Burnham has insulted me as a prohibitionist and has not been choice in his language. The Ministerial body, whom most non-Christians even respect, were shamelessly abused, because they stood for all that was pure and good in the land, as they see it. Their motives were for the public good and their influence for good no sane man will deny and, as Mr. Burnham left no stone unturned and turned many that I am convinced were not there to turn, to impress all people with the idea that God made alcohol, and, therefore, there should be no restraint on our personal liberty to drink as much as anyone might desire, notwithstanding its well known poisonous nature and, as this false propaganda is exactly what the Brewers tell us, I naturally came to the conclusion the Brewers coud not have a more persistent or consistent agent (one who acts for another(but if my conclusions were wrong, and Mr. Burnham has not said they were, I sincerely apologize.

I did not intend to infer, and would not expect any sensible person to infer, that he was a paid agent, but that his various letters of propaganda and general attitude on behalf of the wets was, perhaps, more vigorously carried on than a paid agent could do.

Yours sincerely,
A. H. ALLEN.

GATHER UP THE FRAGMENTS IS SPEAKER'S TEXT

Rotarian J. W. Staples, of Lindsay, Gives Eloquent Address Here.

LINDSAY DELEGATION.

Prominent Out-of-town Rotarian at Local Luncheon To-day.

The presence of a delegation of well-known Rotarians from Lindsay and an eloquent address by Rotarian J. Wellesley Staples of that town were features of the weekly luncheon at the Peterborough Rotary Club at the Empress at noon to-day.

The Lindsay visitors, in addition to Rotarian Staples, included RotariansHarry Brimmell, president of the Lindsay Club, Rev. W. Barraclough, Rev. R. McConnachie. Wm. Flavelle, Ed. Miles, and Fred Sutcliffe.

Rotarian John Crane was in the chair to-day, and called upon the visiting Rotarians to introduce themselves.

President Brimmell reported that the Lindsay Club was making fine progress ,and that a membership of 50 was expected soon. They were undertaking, he thought, as many activities as could be expected of a club of that size.

The speaker of the day was introduced in a witty speech by Rotarian Rev. W. Barraclough of Lindsay.

Rotarian Staples announcing as his subject "A Timely Injunction from the World's Greatest Rotarian," chose as his text, "Gather up all the fragments that remain that none may be lost," and after showing how such advice could be applied with advantage to the material things of life as evidenced by the increasing use of by-products, proceeded to urge that it should be followed generally. There were many fragments, he pointed out, that could be gathered up to advantage, the fragments of time, of opportunity, of wealth, and of character.

In connection with the first the speaker held that so long as there were men who were trying to do as little work as possible and obtaining the highest wages possible, the Rotarian ideal of service could not be fully realised. Of the second, opportunity, he declared that there were many chances to be of assistance to our fellow men, so many openings for deeds of kindness.

The fragments of wealth that were being wasted, the dimes and quarters that were carelessly spent, could accomplish so much good, Rotarian Staples maintained, if they were to be turned over to the crippled children's work.

The address was an inspiration to the Rotarians generally, and the speaker was heartily thanked.

The Rotary concert by the London Concert 8 to-night and to-morrow night promises to be well patronised judging by the reports of the members to-day.

BEHIND THE BARS.

Lindsay Men Accused of Robbery Rounded Up by the Police.

LINDSAY, Oct. 27.—As a result of investigations on the part of the authorities in connection with the $5,000 robbery at the residence of Lady Hughes, three well-known young men, residents of this town, are now behind the bars, while a fourth (father of one of the boys) has made his get-away with a portion of the loot.

Inspectors Stringer and Hammond, of the Criminal Investigation Department, together with the local police, claims that they have got at the bottom of the mystery, but up to the present will give out no information. From what can be gathered, it is understood, from an admission made by one of the boys that his father engineered the clean-up. The former, with another boy, entered the house, while the third one under arrest assisted in carrying the loot to a hiding place in an old elevator on the bank of the river. It is understood that the man in the case later gathered in the loot and left the limits. A warrant has been issued for his arrest.

The police have not recovered many of the stolen artircles to date, but are believed to have in their possession a gun, pair of field glasses as well as the cases which contained the stolen wine. It is stated that one of the boys had been wearing a diamond studded wrist watch while frequenting a pool room, and this gave the police a clue. Two of the boys have court records.

BEWARE OF LOBSTERS

LONDON, Oct. 27. — (United Press). —There are things that just simply mustn't be done in England.

A sad-looking individual appeared at the Marlborough street police station to answer a charge of disorderly conduct.

"Whiskey with lobsters," was his excuse.

"You are fined ten shillings," said the Judge, severely. And then, even more severely, the Judge, added, "Beware of lobsters!"

DOUBLE MALT TO ADD KICK

City Man Charged With Selling, Tells Police His System.

CASE DISMISSED.

The first charge of selling liquor to be heard in Peterboro police court since the plebiscite, resulted this morning in the dismissal of the accused, Theodore Kimball, James street. The trial, which lasted three hours, was featured by heated argument by counsel and Magistrate Langley was on several occasions compelled to make close decisions on points they raised. Joseph Wearing conducted the prosecution and J. F. Strickland represented the accused. It was held that no charge of selling had been sustained.

Harry Hughes Gilling, the first witness for the prosecution told Magistrate Langley, he was locked up in a state of "morbidness and stupidity," which he declared was worse than drunk. This morning he was able to recall drinking what was said to be beer at Kimball's house, where he had saven glasses, for which he paid not a cent.

"What was the result?"

"The cell."

The witness denied knowledge of a statement said to have been made by him to Sergeant Deannard and declared he was sober when he left Kimball's house. "Liquor doesn't act on you at once," he explained to the magistrate.

Ruled Hostile.

Following evasions and denials, which Mr. Wearing said, showed him hostile, a lengthy argument between counsel ended in Gilling's being ruled a hostile witness, and Mr. Wearing was permitted to adopt tactics suited to this class.

The witness denied absolutely having made the statement,although he recognized his signature attached to it.

Sergeant John Deannard said the last witness made a statement that he bought four bottles of beer from an unknown man on James street, and paid him $3 for them. He was perfectly sober when he made the statement, and took he Sergeant to the house where Kimball lived and where the beer was bought and paid for. In searching the house Sergt. Deannard found 9 dozen empty bottles; 8 dozen full bottles of beer; hops on the stove, boiling; 2 tins of malt; a capper for capping the bottles, and yeast. The accused had a permit under the Inland Revenue Act.

Inspector James Reid said the accused made a statement in which he said: "The beer would make anyone intoxicated." He had put a double dose of malt in it to make it strong, he said.

To save expenses, Inspector Reid said, the beer was not sent for analysis, Kimball's admission being considered sufficient.

Excise Officer W. H. Buller was the first witness for the defence and he declared Kimball had applied for and had been granted permission to make beer at his residence for his own use and that of his family and not for sale.

Theodore Kimball, the accused, said he had been in the habit of making beer at his residence for his own use. On Saturday, October 11, he had had some friends to visit him. He did not then or at any time sell beer to any person.

Explaining to Mr. Wearing the presence of so much beer, the accused said the beer has to mature a certain length of time. He drank ten bottles between Friday and Monday but denied emptying ten dozen bottles. There may have been seven dozen bottles drunk between Friday and Monday. Gilling might have drunk four bottles, and two others might have emptied the same number. His wife may have taken two bottles or less and Kimball himself drank the best part of the remaining six dozen, the latter said.

Kimball, answering Magistrate Langley, denied having made the statement that he sold sandwiches on the night the offence was alleged to have taken place. He couldn't get the beer matured fast enough to use for himself let alone making any to sell, Kimball said.

Answering Mr. Strickland, the witness said he drank beer to recuperate after an injury sustained while working with the Warren Paving Company. He has a family of five children.

Mr. Strickland submitted that no proof of selling had been entered.

Gough, C. A. Barnard, J. F. M. Stewart, C. F. Smith, F. J. B. Russell and S. J. Casey Wood were present. W. N. Tilley and N. W. His Lordship said that some progress must be made in the trial and ordered that they be arraigned.

Directors were allowed out on bail previously arraigned and that for M. J. Haney, who made his first appearance this morning as a defendant was set at 100,000.

INFRACTION OF O.T.A.

Six Toronto Tourists Lose Wet Goods at Lindsay.

LINDSAY, October 27. — The back firing of a big car on Kent Street on Saturday night proved fatal to six Toronto tourists who were on their way to summer homes on the banks of the Pigeon River, near Omemee.

The noise made by the car attracted a big crowd as the car stood opposite the Benson House, and the efforts of a local mechanic to solve the trouble were watched with interest.

Provincial Constable Storey became interested, and also suspicious because of the fact that the occupants never left the car while it was being repaired.

He mounted the running board and made a search with the result that four cases of wet goods were unearthed.

This was seized, the names of the occupants taken, after which they were allowed to depart.

Summonses for an infraction of the O.T.A. will be forward to them.

WHITE HOUSE HELD STAGE IN CAPITAL THIS YEAR

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—(United Press). — With Congress out of session, the White House was the main attraction for the thousands of tourists who journeyed here this season.

Empty chambers and absence of bitter oratorical outbreaks, which draw capacity crowds of visitors to the Capitol building which harbors the Senate and House, was responsible for the White House garnering increased attention.

The majority of visitors who come here have but a day or two to take in the many sights the national capitol offers. When Congress is in session, they usually spend their one of two days at the Capitol. Once seated in the gallery of either the Senate or House they are reluctant to leave. Hence, they devote virtually their entire stay at the Capitol and only obtain a flying glimpse, if any, of the Executive Mansion and its environs.

The favorite sport of sight-seers this season has been to stand outside the White House door waiting to get a close view of President Coolidge. On cabinet days, Tuesday and Friday, many visitors gather about the Executive Offices to watch the Presidents official family come and go. Secretary of State Hughes is about the only member of the cabinet who is recognized. The State department head is identified by his famous whiskers. The identity of other members of the Cabinet is revealed only when the guard at the door shouts for their automobiles.

All records for visitors were broken at the White House the past summer. From ten in the morning to two in the afternoon, the period of inspection, a steady stream of tourists passed through the Mansion.

The number of tourists who shook hands with the President averaged a little over 100 daily.

MACDONALD SAYS LETTER GENUINE

Premier Given a Good Reception By Welsh Audience.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—"I honestly believe the Zinoviev document is authentic," Premier Ramsay MacDonald declared in a political speech at Cardiff to-day.

Knowledge of the alleged "Red plot" did not reach the Foreign Office before October 10, he said, challenging his political enemies who are making capital of the disclosures to prove that the Government knew of the letter prior to that date.

"The Opposition is distorting the facts," he asserted. "I will not tolerate Red propaganda."

The Premier was cheered by a huge audience of Welshmen. MacDonald stressed the point that he had dealt expeditiously with the affair taking nine days, "where, in the old days the Foreign Office would have required weeks to deal with it."

"If the letter is genuine, Labor will not brook interference by a foreign power," the Premier declared. "The Opposition's attack is an eleventh hour attempt to entangle Labor, for political purposes. I want to know how a certain paper (the Daily Mail) got a copy of the Zinoviev letter."

"I suspect the whole affair was a political plot."

Swinging to an attack on Lloyd George, MacDonald declared the former was the "father of unemployment."

Regarding the Russian loan, he said: "Refusal to grant might do more to promote revelation than granting it."

"We will give Russia fair play. Whatever happens, Russia remains, and it is essential to make Russia a co-operative nation, not a pariah."

UNANIMOUS VOTE.

Unique Distinction Comes To Sturgeon Point.

LINDSAY, October 27.—Victoria County lays claim to a unique distinction in connection with the recent plebiscite in the fact that an incorporated village within its borders gave a unanimous vote in favour of Government control.

This village is Sturgeon Point.

When the returns were received on the day of the vote, it was found that the four residents of the village had lined up against the O.T.A.

This is the total of the population of the village at the present time.

The Government went to the expense of providing a booth in the village for this vote, besides paying a poll clerk and returning officer, both officials being among those who voted.

TEXANS DROP THE SIX-SHOOTER GUN

Hidden Guns Are Now Being Replaced by the Shining Foil.

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 28.—(United Press.)—Texas has become effete.

The six-shooter, once an essential accessory for both the social and the business costume of the well-dressed man, is being replaced by the shining foil—with a button on its point.

Youths whose fathers learned to shoot with lethal accuracy are learning here at the University of Texas to "touch" and to parry thrusts. Fencing, that prime sport of the gentleman in polite and cultured ages, is being taught men here for the first time.

Melvin Williamson, who has taught the ancient and refined sport in United States army camps and in the Hollywood Fencing School for motion picture performers, is in charge of the course. He declares that the motion picture has set the standard of manly poise and grace to which the modern youth aspires, and that this poise and grace, as well as co-ordination of hand and eye, and the suave imperturbability of the gentle, is easiest for those "well skilled in all tricks of fence."

So, instead of carrying a gun in both hands, as his grandfather did, the modern young Texas carries a light foil in his right, and rests his left hand lightly across the vertabrae which are located at the waistline. The chaps have given way to the tight velvet breeches and the long hose, here in the green open spaces.

SINK BATTLESHIP PROJECTILE TEST

U. S. S. Washington To Be Sunk as a Victim of Disarmament.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28. — (United Press.) — The U. S. S. Washington, giant battleship now partially completed at the Philadelphia navy yard, is to be sunk—a victim of disarmament.

The man-o'-war, which already has cost the government about $25,000,000, will be taken to the southern drill grounds in December and sent to Davy Jones' Locker.

In her sinking, various tests will be made which will give the Navy Department valuable information of how the latest design of battleship will withstand bomb, depth charges and long-range projectiles, which have been increased in efficiency since the war.

The tests, it is hoped, will disclose what changes must be made in the modern battleship to obtain the maximum amount of protection.

The Washington is the latest design in fighting craft. It is 68 per cent. complete and is an oil burner.

Preparations for disposal of the Washington are being made at an expenditure of more than $100,000. The ship will be sunk at such a depth that salvage even of junk will be impossible.

GIVE BLIND A CHANCE

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Oct. 28.—(United Press).—The blind at Oklahoma's state school for the blind are to try an untried experiment, operating a gasoline filing station and a general merchandise store, according to Oscar W. Stewart, superintendent of the school.

Stewart is building on his own property a stone building, 110 feet by 400 feet, divided in two rooms. One room will be stocked and fitted as a general store. The other will be equipped as a filling station.

The store is near the school and on a heavily traveled highway.

"It is just an experiment," Stewart said, "to see if the blind can be experienced to enter the business world after they finish school."

SOVIET LETTER A MYSTERY EVEN TO THE PREMIER

MacDonald in Cardiff Speech, Unable to Dispel Air of Mystery About Note.

WAS UNWARE OF IT

Intimated That the Foreign Office Never Had Original of Zinovieff Letter.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The so-called "Russian plot" has produced a complete revolution in British campaign oratory, little else now being talked of in electiuon speeches and newspaper comment. From the present indication, the Russian question will loom much greater in the contests to be decided Wednesday than seemed likely a fortnight ago.

Premier MacDonald's anxiously awaited speech at Cardiff Monday still leaves the affair of the Zinovieff letter in a certain air of mystery, with many questions unanswered. The premier, however, said he was determined to thoroughly investigate the matter and especially to unravel the suspicious circumstance that a London daily paper and Conservative headquarters got copies of the alleged Soviet communication simultaneously with the foreign office. Mr. MacDonald guaranteed that immediately all facts were ascertained he would publish them. He referred to the whole affair as a "Guy Fawkes and gunpowder plot."

"Mail" Has Original?

The premier also characterized as "lies" reports that the Zinovieff letter hard been intercepted in the post and photographed, or that it came before the cabinet. By inference, he indicated that the foreign office had never had the original of the letter. In his speech yesterday he was inviting the Daily Mail to inform him how it came into possession of the letter when a voice interjected:

"They have the original."

The premier thereupon observed: "Well, they have had more than we have had."

He gave minute details of all dates with the intention of countering the accusation that he was aware of the Zinovieff document in September, before Parliament dissolved. He said the letter was not received until October 10 and not officially put into the department of the foreign office until October 14. Owing to the delay in communicating with London, while he was moving about the country. Mr. MacDonald said that the trial draft of the note to Christian Rakovsky, the Soviet representative, was despatched from London October 21 but did not reach him until October 23. Then, describing how the draft of the foreign office note was sent to Rakovsky without his further perusal, the premier said the whole foreign office knew he would not stand for propaganda. He added:

"On account of my known determination to stand by agreements and treat them as holy writ, once my signature had been attached, they (the foreign office) assumed they were carring out my wishes in taking immediate steps to publish the whole affair. They honestly believed the document was authentic, and upon that belief they acted. If they acted too precipitately, what is the accusation against us?"

Handled Promptly.

He contended that the whole thing had been dealt with in the spirit of promptitude quite foreign to the dimplomacy of older parties and reiterated that he would handle with firmness and determination every attempt by an outside power to interfere in Great Britain's internal affairs.

Mr. MacDonald declared that he would make it his first business on

THE WEATHER.

October has proved to be an exceptionally fine month. Since the 8th there has been but one gentle shower, that of the 18th. The rainafll for the month up to the present is only about a half inch yet. Yesterday the thermometer was up to 73 degrees, and there was a feeling in the air like a day in May rather than October. At risk of giving offence to the coal dealers, here's wishing the beautiful weather may continue for another three months.—W. P.

FORTY-TWO WOMEN ALL CLAIM HIM AS HUSBAND

VIENNA, Oct. 28—(Canadian Press).—Forty-two women, all claiming to be the wives of a man named Julius Gruenwald, appeared in court as witnesses against him Monday. Gruenwald had been arrested just as he stepped outside a tailor shop wearing a new suit of clothes purchased with money which it was testified he had obtained from his forty-second bride.

From the testimony of the women it was adduced that Gruenwald was in the habit of getting married, obtaining money from his brides and then deserting them. The evidence indicated that he averaged about $8o per bride.

HAMILTON TAX DEFICIT HEAVY

Arrears for 1924 Total $1,650,000 Estimated By Auditor.

OTHER YEARS, TOO

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 28.—Estimates for the arrears in taxes in Hamilton for 1924 amounted to $1,650,000 and that arrears for 1917 to 1923 ran along several hundreds of thousand dollars were brought out when the inquiry of municipal affairs was resumed before Judge Gauld here Monday. A. F. Downey, an auditor working on the city's books, gave the estimate and figures for the arrears. He said he did not see how they were recounted for and there was apparently no checking up between tax office and the city treasury. The arrears in the past years were: 1923, $326,800; 1922, $174,000. The arrears for the other years ran into thousands of dollars.

On Thursday Mr. Dowey will bring in a report "on the merits or demerits of the Hamilton taxes."

C. S. Scott, head of the auditing firm investigating the city's books, protested in a statement against stories in the local press that the mayor thought he should speed up the probe of the books. He denied that the mayor had asked him to hurry up his report and declared that the work was going on as quickly as possible. He said it was hard work to delve into a system that was "absolutely bad and employed from time immemorial."

THRILLING STORY OF RESCUE AT SEA

27 Fishermen, 4 Women and 2 Children Picked Up On High Seas.

NEW YORK, October 28 (Canadian Press). — The s.s. Mount Clay brought to port yesterday news of the thrilling rescue at sea of 27 fishermen, four women and two children, picked up from the sinking fishing smack L. and S., 500 miles off the Grand Banks last Thursday.

The sailing craft was returning from a fishing voyage to Northern Wales.

Captain E. T. Brown said he sighted the schooner with decks awash and flying a distress signal, and with full steam ahead went to her assistance.

The high-running sea hampered the work of the rescuers, but they reached the schooner in time to save the fishermen and their families before she took the final dive.

William McCarthy, master of the ill-fated ship, fired her before he jumped into a lifeboat, to prevent her from becoming a menace to mariners.

DISORDERLY HOUSE GRAFT FROM TWO MURDERERS DENIED BY CHIEF

Belanger, Montreal Police Head, Alleged to Have Received $100 Monthly Each.

TWO WERE HANGED

Vice Conditions of City Under Judicial Enquiry—Convention Fund Mentioned.

MONTREAL, Oct. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Tony Frank and Frank Gambino, two of the murderers who were hanged at Bordeaux Jail on Friday morning, had never paid him money in connection with disorderly houses, which, according to investigating counsel, the dead bandits conducted, was the testimony of Chief of Police Pierre Belanger on Monday before Mr. Justice Coderre, who is enquiring into Montreal police affairs and the vice conditions of the city.

Tony Frank, according to J. P. Lanctot, counsel for the investigation petitioners, had kept five such resorts, while Gambino operated three.

"According to our information you received $100 a month from each house," observed Mr. Lanctot.

This manner of proceeding was objected to by J. A. Sullivan, K.C., counsel for the police, and Mr. Lanctot continued: "This information is from the confession of one of these who died."

The Chief of Police said that the statement was false. He had never received anything of value, money or otherwise, from any keeper of a disorderly house during his thirty-one years of service.

Single Personality.

Counsel subjected the Chief to an examination of incidents associated with his private life, to which Mr. Belanger took strong exception. An appeal to the court furnished the decision, however, that it was impossible to distinguish between the witness as a private person and as Chief of Police. Acts which in the case of other men might be strictly private could not be so considered in the police head. The Chief was interrogated on visits he had paid to various establishments and as to the nature of such places.

He was certain that he had never met Tony Frank or Frank Gambino at the Chateauguay home of Emile Delisle, proprietor of a hotel in the East End. He had been visiting Delisle at Chateuguay for ten years, said the Chief, and could not remember all the people he had met.

He recalled that one of the visits was a man named Perras, a court official, while another was Judge Husmer Lanctot.

He had played cards there, but had never played in the bar of Delisle's hotel in town.

Regarding places of ill-fame kept by Frank and Gambino, the Chief declared that he learned of such when raids were made on them.

He believed he had known of the Frank places for two years at least, and of the Gambino establishments for a year.

It was at this point that he denied having received anything from these houses.

Borrowed From Police.

With regard to his own pecuniary affairs, Chief Belanger said he had borrowed money from Inspector Robert and from Mrs. Egan, wife of Inspector Egan. He had also borrowed from Ernest Belanger, his nephew, and from Arthur Belanger, both of the police force. He had repaid these loans, with the exception of that to Ernest Belanger. He did not recall having borrowed anything from the other officers.

The Chief said that he had no automobile of his own, but that he did own a motor-boat. Visits to a house, the tenant of which was a man named Latreille, were next taken up.

Chief Belanger said that this was not a gambling house. He had seen women there, but they were not loose women. The Chief denied that he had gone into a room at this house with a woman. He protested vehemently against this sort of inquisition, and a discussion took place between counsel as to the character of the interrogation. Mr. Sullivan advanced that because the Chief had gone and perhaps encountered a woman there was not proof that this was an evil resort. Mr. Lanctot declared that he could produce the woman in question if needed. If the people of the house were honest, he said, they would not tolerate his presence under such circumstances even if he were Chief of Police.

His Lordship, after weighing the matter, delivered his decision that it was impossible to distinguish between the private and the public character of the Chief.

Convention Fund.

Turning to the Police Chiefs' convention here last summer, Mr. Belanger said that the entertainment fund had been raised by collection for a souvenir brochure. Mr. Lanctot named several keepers of disorderly houses and asked if they had contributed.

Witness said he did not know. The collection had been in the hands of a man named Cleaver, the publicity agent, and $9,000 had been taken in.

The afternoon evidence was occupied with the testimony of Mrs. Egan, wife of Inspector Egan, regarding loans she had made to the Chief and to the Police Athletic Association. She had loaned the Chief $2,200 at 7 per cent. in August, 1923. Last May $1,000 had been repaid, and several months ago the Chief paid off the balance.

A visit the Chief had made to a place on St. Lawrence Boulevard, on the invitation of a taxicab driver, and where he had had liquor, formed the concluding part of the day's enquiry.

The woman of the house had told him that it was not a disorderly house. He did not recall having passed Constable Godin on the stairs.

It was the first and last time that the taxicab driver had invited him to go anywhere. The place was raided in April, 1923.

The Chief's visit had been in the autumn of 1923.

HUNDRED DAYS SAVED BY AIRPLANE FLIGHTS

Soviet Minister of Commerce Has Record of Fifty Trips.

KOENIGSBERG, Germany, Oct. 28.—Leonid Krassin, Russian Soviet Minister of Commerce, claims to hold the world's record among Government Cabinet members for airplane flying. He recently completed his fiftieth flight within one hundred days from Moscow to Koenigsberg.

Each trip lasted about eight hours, and covered a distance of 750 miles. Had he taken the railway, he would have consumed 115 days in travel. Instead, his flights required but seventeen days. Krassin is thus virtually 100 working days ahead.

The example of Krassin's saving of time is used by the German-Russian Aerial Navigation Company as an argument for extending the air service beyond Moscow to the Orient. At present letters from German business men to their branches or to other firms in Eastern Asia take at least 21 days. If a regular air service were to be established, letters could be delivered in Tokio and Shanghai three or four days after leaving Berlin.

SON IN PRISON MAY ATTEND HIS DAD'S FUNERAL

Richard Loeb, Chicago Slayer of Bobby Franks, May Be Released.

WARDEN AGREES.

Albert H. Loeb Expired Late Last Night From Heart Failure.

CHICAGO, Ills., Oct. 28.—(United Press.) — Richard (Dickie) Loeb, who, with Nathan Leopold, junior, murdered fourteen year old Bobby Franks, may be released from the Illinois State Penitentiary of Joliette long enough to attend the funeral of his multi-millionaire father, Albert H. Loeb, who died at his home shortly before midnight.

John L. Whitman, Warden of the penitentiary, is known to favor the granting of permission to prisoners to attend the funerals of near relatives and if application is made, it is considered almost certain that Dickie will leave the prison for a few hours at least.

Richard's father, senior vice-president of Sear-Roebuck and Company, expired of heart failure after a prolonged illness. Members of the Loeb family were emphatic in denying that death was brought about or even hastened by the confession, court hearing and sentencing of his third eldest son to the penitentiary for life.

LEAGUE HEARS GREEK APPEAL

Definition of Domicile Gravely Affects 200,000 Greeks in Constantinople.

MOSUL BOUNDARY

BRUSSELS, Oct. 28.—(Canadian Press).—The wisdom of saying precisely what you mean, especially when it comes to treaties and other diplomatic documents, was driven home to statesmen Monday when they gathered in Brussels for the opening of the special session of the Council of the League of Nations. The first round in the Mosul "status quo" frontier dispute between Great Britain and Turkey, which the council was convoked to settle, ended in a draw, with both sides looking as though they wished to shake hands and call off the fighting.

However, everybody present was convinced of one thing, namely, that the Lusanne treaty was loosely drawn, not only regarding Mosul, but probably also in the case of its special annex convention, which is quite vague in its touching the manner in which the compulsory exchange of populations between Greece and Turkey should be carried out.

Turkey's Complaint

Fethi Bey, for Turkey, in a spirit of compromise, agreed to accept the British contention that the "status quo" of the frontier should be that which existed on July 23, 1923, the date on which the Lausanne treaty was signed, but he entirely differed with Great Britain as to just what the frontier was. He charged that Britain had occupied territory which was not administered by Britain when the Lausanne treaty was signed, and cited particularly the town of Suleymanie as a new acquisition of Great Britain.

The Turkish leader accused Britain of seeking to influence the Mosul inhabitants, with a view to advancing the British case for the final possesion of Mosul.

Reply of British

Lord Parmoor was just as harsh on Turkey for violating the Lausanne line, saying that she had not onl ysystematically pushed forward her troops on the Irak or Mosul side of the Lausanne line, but had actually advanced since the last meeting of the council in Geneva at the end of September.

Lord Parmoor charged the Turks with mistreating Assyrian Christians and driving them from what should be regarded as no man's land, pending final settlement of the problem, as to what part, if any, of the Mosul villayet goes to Turkey and what part to Irak, which is under Great Britain's mandate.

Confronted by this divergent interpretation of the Lausanne treaty the council assigned to Hjalmar Branting, Sweden's new premier, the difficult task of bringing in a harmony report which would trace some definite provisional frontier. With this done, the Mosul fighting is expected to cease and thus give the council time to settle the main problem involved which is that of Mosul's sovereignty.

Augury of Peace

This settlement is still distant, as the council has yet to appoint a special commision to make an investigation on the spot. But everybody last night deems the conciliatory attitude of both Turkey and England as a good augury that no serious hostilities will break out in the Near East.

A second ambiguous feature of the Lausanne treaty concerns the definition of Greek residents in Constantinople who were to be exempted from the exchange of populations if they were established in Constantinople prior to 1918. This question was discused privately yesterday, and M. Politis is much concerned over the definition which the Turks give to the provision that "established' means legal domicile, with observance of all legal requirements of residence.

M. Politis said that if this conception was approved by the council it meant that 200,000 Greeks who had lived in Constantinople for decades must be exiled. He asserted that "established" means merely residence, and that it would be difficult for the Greeks to show paper satisfactory to the Turks.

The council will meet this afternoon privately, when it will probably discuss both the Mosul and Greek problems.

COMMUNIST EDITOR AND HIS ARTICLE THAT UPSET THE LABOR GOVERNMENT

J. Ross Campbell Appealed to Soldiers for Passive Resistance.

WAR AND STRIKES.

Editorial Said Pressure Forced MacDonald Government to Drop Trial.

Responsibility for the defeat of the British Labour Government rests with James Ross Campbell, a native-born American, who served as a private in a Scottish regiment during the World War.

It was Campbell who, as acting editor of The Workers' Weekly, the official organ of Communism in Great Britain, published on 25th July an article alleged to have been designed to corrupt the military and naval forces of that nation.

The article aroused great indignation and resulted in Campbell's arrest on a charge of sedition. Arraigned in Bow Street Court on 13th August, however, Travers Humphreys, acting for the Public Prosecutor, said it had been represented that the object and intention of the printed article was not to try to seduce men in the fighting forces from their duty and allegiance, nor to induce them to disobey lawful orders, but that it was merely a comment up an armed military force being used by a State to suppress industrial disputes.

Magistrate Leycester, therefore, discharged Campbell, asserting that there was no evidence on which to hold him.

The incident in itself might have been overlooked had not Albert Inkpin, of the Political Bureau of the Communist Party issued a statement from the offices of the Workers' Weekly saying that Campbell had made no effort to provide a defence and that the charge was withdrawn on the sole responsibility of the Labour Government, under severe pressure from well-known Labour members of Parliament.

Communists Deny Defence.

The statement reads:

"In view of the statement made by the counsel for the prosecution in the case against the editor of The Workers' Weekly, the Political Bureau of the Communist Party desires to make it clear that no effort was made by Comrade Campbell to provide a defence such as that outlined by the prosecution, as a reason for withdrawing the charge.

"Campbell's defence was justification, and he, with the assistance of other comrades, was fully concerned in arranging evidence to make this good. Arrangements had been made to ask for an adjournment in order that Mr. MacDonald, the Prime Minister, Mr. Henderson, Mr. Clynes, and several others who had been closely associated with the Second International, would be subpoenaed as witnesses for the defence. It was also intended that prominent trade-union officials, such as Messrs. Bramley, Cramp, and Tillett, who are associated with the Amsterdam International, should be called. All of these Labour Party and trade-union officials have been identified with resolutions opposing the use of soldiers in industrial disputes, or with resolutions opposing the use of soldiers in industrial disputes, or with resolutions demanding that war be fought by every means.

"We wish to state that the withdrawal of the charge was made on the sole responsibility of the Labour Government under severe pressure of such well-known Labour members of Parliament as George Lansbury (who volunteered to give evidence for Campbell's justification); James Maxton, A. A. Purcell, John Scurr and many others.

"The Communist Party claims that the withdrawal of the charge is a victory for the workers, but at the same time one that will arouse the vicious hostility of the reactionary elements within and without the Labour movement. It is necessary, therefore, that all those who support our attitude on war and on the use of soldiers in industrial disputes should be ever watchful and ever ready to take action against any attacks that may be made in the future."

The Article That Caused the Trouble

The article, which appeared in The Workers' Weekly, on 25th July, and which started all the trouble, was headed:

"The Army and Industrial Disputes; an Open Letter to the Fighting Forces."

It reads:

"Comrades: You never joined the Army or Navy because you were in love with warfare, or because you were attracted by the glamour of the uniform. In nine cases out of ten you were compelled to join the services after a long fight against poverty and misery, caused by prolonged unemployment.

"Once in the services, you are subjected to a military discipline that bears down upon you in an ever-increasing manner.

"Repressive regulations and irksome restrictions are intentionally

WRITER OF EDITORIAL THAT CAUSED ELECTION

J. Ross Campbell, Socialist editor and crippled veteran of the World War, around whose trial on a charge of sedition a British political storm broke, resulting in the crash of the MacDonald party. An investigation had been demanded on the question of why sedition charges had been dropped and when a vote of confidence in the Labor Cabinet was not forthcoming in the House the Labor regime fell.

ALIENS ROBBED BY SMUGGLERS

Four Were Stripped of Money and Valuables Near Sarnia.

WERE HELD UP.

SARNIA, Ont., Oct. 28.—(Canadian Press).—On a charge of armed robbery of four aliens, J. P. Murphy and Harold Moore were committed for trial by Magistrate Woodrow, in County Police Court Monday.

Three of the alleged victims were heard for the prosecution in the preliminary hearing and told of being driven to Sombra on the understanding that they were to be smuggled across the river into Michigan, and there at the point of a revolver robbed of money and valuables in the dark hours of September 21. Some light on the methods used in smuggling aliens was brought out when George Martin, a fourth witness living at Sombra, said he transports the men from Windsor to Sombra, and Allee, known as German, was to row them over the river. He said a man called "J. B.," frequently brought men to his cottage to be smuggled over the river. The four aliens, Joseph Luptak, Harold Mutka, John Beres, and Nicholas Tomaga, however, never got across, the robbery taking place on the river bank near Sombra.

DIDN'T WORK.

Nicholas Sokolowsky, of Detroit, started out to insure bachelors and bachelor girls against marriage. But too many weddings wrecked his Perpetual Endowment Society. Police seized his books, closed his offices and threatened prosecution. They could do nothing, though, for he had obtained a state charter and was operating within the law.

THRESHERS ARE WELL ADVANCED ON WEST'S CROP

Manitoba's Work Will Be Completed in Fortnight if Weather Holds.

WARM AND DRY

Complaints of Grading Heard —Recent Rains Left Effect —B. C. Fruit Good.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 28.—(Canadian Press).—With continued favorable weather prevailing throughout the entire Canadian west, threshing is being rushed along at all points, according to the weekly crop report issued by the agricultural department of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Some fall plowing has already been done, reports indicating that the soil is in excellent condition.

In Manitoba approximately 65 to 70 per cent of threshing is completed and given another week or ten days favorable weather, the entire crop will be threshed with the exception of some flax. Recent rains reduced grades considerably, but according to the report the warm dry weather has since hardened the gain remarkably.

Very Little Sprouting.

Saskatchewan farmers have threshed up to 85 per cent of the crops. Much of the wheat now being threshed suffered a reduction of one or two grades owing to bleaching but suprisingly few reports of sprouting in the stock have been received. Fall plowing is well under way throughout the province.

With only a small percentage of the crops unthreshed in Alberta prospects are that the remainder will be completed within a week, given favorable weather. The yield is generally regarded as good, but there have been complaints respecting grading. The feed situation is more favorable than previously anticipated, with a large mount of green fodder available.

Grain Refused

Good progress is being made with threshing of late crops along the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia railway. Owing to the lateness of the season and the desire of the farmers to get their grain into bins before heavy frost sets in, the condition of the grain has been such that some elevator companies have refused to receive it. A shortage of feed oats is anticipated at some points.

In British Columbia the apple crop has been exceptionally good, the quality of the fruit being high. The weather continues fine throughout the province.

SOME GASOLINE IS A DEADLY POISON

Two Men Have Already Died From the Fumes of This Gas.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—(Canadian Press).—A second death from insanity-producing gas at the Standard Oil Laboratory at Elizabeth, N.J., was reported yesterday. The second victim was Walter Dymock, who died violently insane at the Reconstruction Hospital in this city, to which he had been removed from Elizabeth. His symptoms were identical with those in the case of Ernest Oelgert, who died of the deadly gas on Saturday.

A total of six patients were under treatment at the Reconstruction Hospital, all more or less deranged from the fumes which proved to have a mysterious effect on the brain and nervous system. Two others are reported to be suffering from milder symptoms at Elizabeth, N.J.

Chief Medical Examiner Charles Norris said yesterday that he suspected from the symptoms that death had been caused by tetra-ethyl lead but that the autopsy had revealed no evidence as yet.

Dr. Yandell Henderson, professor of applied physiology at Yale, and one of the greatest authorities on the action of gasses on the human body, said to-day that the symptoms which the gas victims had suffered made it evident that the poison had been tetra-ethyl. He said the Standard Oil Company was selling gasoline containing tetra-ethyl in some states and that he considered this gasoline to be deadly poison.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store, all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair ,taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

DANGEROUS CORNER.

The corner of Edison Avenue and Monaghan Road, always a very dangerous corner for motorists and all kinds of vehicles, has been made more dangerous by someone in authority digging a ditch about three feet wide and two feet deep, presumably for drainage purposes. It is certainly the easiest method, but not the safest way of draining this particular corner. When filled with snow in winter time there is the possibility of many accidents.

3—A petition to the said Council will not avail to prevent its construction but a petition against the work or the manner in which it has been undertaken may be made pursuant to Section 9 of the Local Improvement Act to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, by a majority of the owners representing at least one-half of the value of the lots which are to be specially assessed therefor.

C. A. MATTHEWS TOOK PLACE IN COURT MONDAY

Garnet M. Hart and Alexander Ross Were Called As Crown Witnesses.

SPLIT PROCEED.

Both Admitted That They Signed and Sent Letters to Provincial Treasurer.

TORONTO, Oct. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Charles A. Matthews Jr., former deputy treasurer of Ontario when put on his trial before Mr. Justice Mowat and Jury in criminal assize court at the City Hall yesterday was placed in the prisoners dock request of defense counsel that accused be granted the privilege of sitting where he would be in a better position to confer, with the counsel was refused by His Lordship who remarked; "You are very near the dock," adding, "If during the evidence it becomes necessary the crown will no doubt agree to the proposal."

Garnet M. Hart and Alexander Ross, with whom the prosecution charges Matthews, together with L. C. Mason, conspired to defraud the province of about $12,000 in connection with the sale of succession duty free bonds, better known as inscribed stock, were both called as crown witnesses yesterday. Hart, on the witness stand admitted having received a certain share in the profits of transaction for the use of his name in connection with the deal. He declared that, although he was supposed to be a vendor of stock to the province, he took no part in its acquirement beyond signing his name in a lawyers office to a document which he did not again see.

He had signed his name to various letters to the provincial treasurer's department which had been prepared for him by Ross. Replies to these letters had reached Ross before he saw them. Ross admitted having taken part in the sale of the inscribed stock to the province through the use of Hart's name he said he had given Hart a small share of profits in connection with the deals. The major portion of the profits had been divided between himself and Mason step-son-in-law of Matthews, who was given two-thirds, the witness explaining that in view of the number of firms trying to do business with the government "I suggested that probably we should make a present to Matthews." Ross had advised that the profit be split three ways, Ross-Mason-Matthews, Mason had offered no strenuous objection.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES AT WARKWORTH CHURCH

Rev. Mr. Stillman, of Cobourg, Preached on Sunday.

WARKWORTH, October 27. — The anniversary services of Warkworth Methodist church were held on Sunday, Oct. 26th, Rev. Stillman of Cobourg delivered very impressive sermons. In the morning he took for his text Matt. 6:28: "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow." Christ always chose a common affair and linked with it some truth. In this case he took the lily. The spiritual kingdom, if it is within you, manifests itself in four ways: (1) Generosity, no Christian is stingy; (2) Prayer, if we pray to win the praise of many we shall be rewarded accordingly. "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire." (3) Fasting. It is to the Father to which we should appear to fast, and not to man. (4) Business. Lay not up treasures on earth but in heaven, for where your treasure is there will your heart be also.

We are not called for the same trade or profession but we are necessary for the Kingdom of God. God has given us our faculties for His use and if we use them otherwise we will be rewarded accordingly. Jesus leaves the idea we are to labor for the whole family of the human race.

In the evening the text was taken from the 12th chapter of Luke, verse 50. The topic presented was the "Threefold Baptism of Christ." The baptism of Christ was compared with the baptism of Aaron, and his sons, as God commanded Moses He made it clear to Moses that his works were to be patterns. Jesus was baptized by John. Mary anointed his head with ointment and when he was nailed to the cross the blood of the Lamb was spilled. The blood of Jesus was shed for the whole world. Let us endeavor to place ourselves at the foot of the cross and claim His mercy. There is no sinner too great to receive forgiveness if he comes in earnestness."

Rev. S. A. Kemp was present for the morning service. He remarked that it was the only time he had been able to attend an anniversary service at his own appointment in the Methodist church, and it would be the last, on account of church union.

Special music was rendered by the choir.

The collection amounted to $420.

FABLES ON HEALTH

NOT TOO MUCH MEAT.

I can't get along without meat, Mr. Mann would say.

And, except in hot weather, he was likely to eat two portions a day.

While meat has definite food value, use of it can be abused as surely as can the use of sweets.

About meat there has long been a division of opinions.

The stimulation is declared by some undesirable for growing children and for many oldsters.

The maximum prescribed for adults has been four ounces of meat a day, and vegetables and milk are advised as part of the menu.

The chief argument advanced against meat eating has been that, in many people, toxic effects are produced by decomposing products; but this is not the case with all, by any means.

The only danger, if one exists, seems to be in the overeating of meat.

Health experts advise plentiful use of vegetables with the meat dish.

NEWS OF HASTINGS.

Hastings Polled a Dry Vote For First Time in Many Years.

HASTINGS, October 28. — Hastings was a busy place on Thursday owing to the Plebiscite vote. From early in the morning when the polls were first open until the last minute at night a steady string of voters were present at the polls. This is the first time in the history of Hastings that the town has polled a dry vote.

When some years ago Local Option was tried it was defeated partly owing to the three-fifths clause in the Act of that time.

When the Referendum was brought before the Province a few years ago it was also defeated.

This time the majority was 36 for the O.T.A. The total number of votes polled were 364 for the O.T.A. 200 and for the Government control 164 votes.

SPEED

Our army's pursuit planes, now travelling "only" 165 miles an hour, by the end of the year will be displaced by improved types making 200. Speed of observation planes will be increased from 120 to 160.

The goal of flying is speed. Quite natural, since the airplane still is primarily a military device. Gradually the goal will shift to economy of production, and to safety. Then flying will take its place with autos and railroads. The quest for speed rather than safety is delaying that day.

DANCING.

Dancing is more a matter of the soul than of the feet, claims a speaker at the convention of dance teachers. Many will actually agree with him.

It's difficult to associate dancing with the spiritual. The appeal of the dance is entirely emotional Is the soul emotional or intellectual?

His Mirror Told Him of Exhausted Condition

Mr. R. Paulin, Toutes Aides, Man., writes:

"I became so run down and weak that my heart became affected, and I would sometimes have to remain in bed for several days.

Some one advised me to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I did, and soon began to gain in weight and feel better. I have taken a great many boxes of these wonderful pills, and am feeling ten years younger. Dr. Chase's Medicines, as well as his Receipt Book, are a great help to us, for we live 40 miles from doctors and railroads."

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1924.

THE BRITISH CAMPAIGN.

Tomorrow the British elections will be held after a campaign of only three weeks' duration, but crowded with excitement, violent language, personal abuse, and in some cases even assault and battery.

The outstanding feature of the fight has been the publication of a letter received from the Central Committee of the British Communist party from M. Zinovieff, President of the Committee of the Communist Internationale, urging "the violent overthrow of existing institutions in Britain, and the subversion of His Majesty's armed forces as a means to that end."

The author of the letter claims it to be a forgery, but the plot is accepted as genuine by the majority of the British newspapers, and the "civil war" communication is expected to play a big part in tomorrow's election.

Labour's chances are considered to be materially lessened by the episode, for should the public generally believe in the authenticity of the Zenovieff letter the revulson against Labour would undoubtedly be great enough to smash the MacDonald Government.

The results of the campaign are being awaited by Canadians with unusual interest.

LOCAL VIGILANCE COMMITTEES.

It has been suggested in several quarters that the branches of the Ontario Plebiscite Committee organized to work for the retention of the Ontario Temperance should form permanent county organizations to assist the Government in the vigorous enforcement of that measure.

It is doubtful whether such vigilance committees would do as much good as they would harm.

There is the obvious danger that the ill-will and dissension that would be caused in a community by the activities of a committee that chose to keep an eye on the actions of their fellow-citizens in the hope of catching them in a violation of a measure to which they are bitterly opposed, would be far more harmful than infrengements of the O. T. A.

On the other hand, of course, is the very evident fact that a local organization could undoubtedly secure much information that would be of use to the authorities, and could demand action where often under present conditions there has been little evidence of a desire to enforce the Act.

There are bootleggers at work in every community whose ability to carry on their illegal operations without any interference is a marvel to many citizens.

Their names seem to be common knowledge—yet they are not checked in their operations.

Obviously a vigilance committee such as is proposed would speedily bring a lot of these offenders to the attention of the authorities and would demand action.

But would even that result be value for the ill-feeling that would be created in the community?

MAKING ONTARIO DRY.

Premier Ferguson has repeated his promise that the Ontario Temperance Act will be enforced, and Attorney-General Nickle has declared that he will do his utmost to see that the law is obeyed.

What do these statements mean?

They should mean that Ontario is to be made a dry Ontario, not merely dry for a portion of the population.

It is for the Government to say how this is to be accomplished.

So long as shipments from Ontario distilleries are allowed to leave Ontario ports in small boats that clear for Cuba or Mexico, only to come back under cover of darkness to discharge their wet cargo on the soil of this Province, there is going to be difficulty in enforcing the O. T. A.

Here is work for both Dominion and Provincial Governments, and a solution of the problem of checking this illicit traffic would be a valuable contribution toward effective enforcement.

That is leak No. 1 in the Act—and a serious leak it is.

Leak No. 2 is represented by the sale of liquor by Government vendors under authority of doctors' prescriptions.

If any one factor has served to make the Ontario Temperance Act a farce it is this authorized sale under the disguise of "for medicinal purposes."

Doctors disagree as to the value of liquor as a treatment for certain illnesses and ailments.

But surely there can be no disagreement over the fact that the sale of whiskey by the quart is not necessary except in some very exceptional cases.

Yet some doctors continue to issue all the scripts the law permits them to, with the result that before holidays and on most Saturdays the Government dispensaries are crowded with "patients" waiting to carry away their quarts "for medicinal purposes."

The patronage on such occasions is so large as to suggest the population of Ontario must be made up to a great extent of invalids.

In short this sale under doctors' prescriptions is making a mockery of the Ontario Temperance Act.

Many physicians, the Examiner is sure, would be glad to be relieved of the responsibility of dealing with this phase of the law.

They would welcome being placed in a position where they would not have to be bothered by their thirsty friends who importune them for profit or for friendship's sake to open the door that leads to a quart of whiskey.

Attorney-General Nickle can stop a lot of drinking if he can find a way to prevent the use of liquor for medicinal purposes from being abused.

There are other leaks in the Act; one is the more or less open sale of strong beer by many hotels in Toronto and in other sections of the Province.

It should be possible to stop this particular breach in the dry dike; if the penalties were made more severe it is to be fancied the sale would soon stop.

A $200 fine inflicted on a hotel that has been retailing beer at 15 and 20c a glass for weeks before being caught is merely a small license fee—certainly not a deterrent.

The fine should be made heavy enough to make the game not worth the candle.

As the law stands now an unlucky youth who may be caught with a bottle on his hip is liable to be fined as much as the proprietor of a hotel who is making a big profit out of violating the Act.

If the Ontario Temperance Act were to be amended so as to reduce the penalties for minor infractions and to greatly increase the punishment for serious violations, Mr. Nickle's work would be greatly facilitated.

One of the chief causes for the heavy adverse vote last Thursday was the feeling that the least guilty offender under the Act was often the most heavily punished, that the law nipped the little fellow and let the big man escape, that while drinking in motor cars and in the homes of the wealthy and in other privileged sports went on without much interference the man who was unfortunate to be caught taking a drink in an alleyway had to be find $100 or go to jail.

The majority of the people of Ontario have decided that Ontario shall be a dry Province.

Their wishes can never be fulfilled unless the Government stops the bigger leaks and takes some notice of the present inequalities and injustices of the Ontario Temperance Act.

WHAT MONTREAL THINKS.

Ontario stays in the dry column. A plebiscite of the people taken throughout the province Thursday shows a substantial majority in favor of the Ontario Temperance Act. There seems to be a sharp clash of opinion between the cities and the rural districts in liquor legislation. The country parts are preponderately in favor of prohibition, while the cities have voted by very large majorities for some form of State control of liquor selling.

It would be unbecoming of Quebec to criticize the considered judgment of the people of the neighboring Province as expressed at the polls. The majority in Ontario does not consider that State control of the sale of liquor is the best way of dealing with what all admit is a highly debatable issue. Quebec thinks otherwise.

The campaign in Ontario seems to have been fought with great vigor, but with little bitterness. On this those responsible for the placing of the two sides of the controversy before the electors are to be congratulated. It is unfortunate that the discussion of what is mainly a social and ethical question should too often have its main issue clouded by the introduction of questions of finance and other foreign elements.

Ontario having decided to stick by the Ontario Temperance Act, it will be the duty of her neighbors to do everything in their power to see that the law is not defied and set at naught by any action of theirs. Ontario is at perfect liberty to make her own decision on what is essentially a Provincial issue, and while adverse criticism of that decision would be in bad taste, any effort of visitors to weaken the law or to set it at defiance would be not only unneighborly, but would be criminally wrong.—Montreal Star.

COMBINING AGAINST LABOR?

The two historic British parties are evidently combining against Labor, for the moment, at least, says the Ottawa Journal. This points to the idea of a Centre party composed of Liberal and Conservative moderates, which Lloyd George, Churchill and Birkenhead fostered some years ago, but which Lord Younger and the Carlton Club destroyed when they kicked out Lloyd George and wrecked his Coalition. At that time Conservative leaders, including Bonar Law, saw danger in a Centre group. They held that it would destroy the whole system of two national parties, each of them representative of all classes in the state, alternating between the dual functions of criticism and Government. So far from a Centre party barring the path to Labor power, they argued, it would produce the exactly opposite effect. Labor would at once become the only alternative Government. With a combination of Liberals and Conservatives in power, that crop of grievances and mistakes which is the harvest of every Government, would daily swell the Labor vote, Labor could say, and there would be little effective answer: "If the Government has offended you and you want to turn them out, you have got to vote for us." Finally the waters would mount the dam, and down would go the Centre party—with Labor in office and power.

Labor having got into office anyhow, the force of this argument may have dwindled. In any case the spectacle of Liberals and Conservatives ceasing to cut each other's throats in the constituencies, shows that a rapprochement is possible which might result in Coalition again. Whether it means the ultimate passing of either Liberalism or Conservatism, with the rise of a new Centre or Constitutional party from the ashes, remains to be seen. But the immediate effect is bound to react adversely upon Labor's chances now.

CHICAGO'S VIEWS ON O. T. A.

Under the heading, "Brother, We Envy You," the Chicago Tribune editorially says:

"Ontario seems to have voted dry. It was dry and it remains so, according to returns at this writing. The cities and towns were wet and the country dry and the rural districts carried by a small margin. Quebec to the east and the Prairie Provinces to the west are wet, the West having gone wet after being dry, but Ontario sticks to its prohibition and rejects Government control of liquor vending, which the other Provinces have accepted.

"This is fair enough. An argument might be made for the right of rural communities to do as they liked and city communities to do as they liked in matters of personal habit and social custom, but it is a fair working rule which recognizes the right of determination by political units of such proportions as American States and Canadian Provinces.

"In Canada with the sane flexible scheme of Canadian government in such things, Ontario is content or must be content to decide what it wants to do and may not tell Quebec what to do. In the unreasonable American system Kansas is not content to say what it wishes to do, but must say what shall be done in New York. Furthermore, Ontario is not stopped from taking another poll if it wishes to later. Nor is Manitoba, which has gone from dry to wet.

"If Manitoba does not like the operation of Government vending and control it can go back to prohibition if it wants to. It does not need to ask the consent of either dry Ontario or wet Quebec. It hasn't got a constitutional clamp on its political action and sumptuary law. Nor has any other Canadian Province.

"The United States is in all sorts of contortions trying to handle a question which Canada handles in the manner of a sane democracy."

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Oct. 27.—The cattle market at the Union Stock Yards started out this week with a clean sheet and practically no remnants from last week. On Saturday a shipment of 210 steers, averaging 1,300 lbs. each, from the West, was sold to Rogers and Maybee at $6.25 a cwt. Receipts this morning were a fair average, being 337 cars, 5,639 cattle, including 557 billed through; 846 calves, 3,096 hogs, and 5,459 sheep and lambs. These were several excellent loads of export steers on sale, of which A. J. Brock, of Strathroy, had perhaps four of the best loads.

The early trading showed a good undertone, and at least steady prices. The first load across the scales was a bunch of just medium 800 to 900-lb. butchers at $5 a cwt. The packers took three loads of heavy steers at $7 a cwt. One load of steers cost $7.35 a cwt., and a few others will likely bring the same prices. These are steady to 10 cents cwt. higher than last week. The range for steers was $5.50 to $7.35 a cwt. Export heifers cost $6 to $6.25; feeders, $5.50 to $6; bulls, $3.90 and $4, and cows $5 to $5.25.

There were not many choice handyweight butchers on sale, and the top for good butchers during the morning was $6 a cwt. Loads of 1,100-lb. medium butchers' steers sold at $5.25 to $5.50. Average medium butchers went at $5 to $5.25, and common butchers were $4 to $4.25. These prices were steady. Butchers' cows were a good sale at steady prices. Good cows brought up to $4.50, medium cows $3.50 to $3.75, and common ones $3 to $3.25. Baby beeves sold from $8 to $10 a cwt. Light 700-lb stockers went in loads at $3.75 and $4, and 1,000-lb. feeders $5 to $5.50 a cwt.

The market in calves was quite steady again. Top calves were up around 11 cents, and good mediums 9½ cents. Common and heavy calves sold at 5 to 6 cents, and large bunches of grass calves at $3.50 and $3.60 a cwt.

Lambs were suspiciously quiet for the first two hours. Buyers were cautiously making tentative bids as high as $12.10 a cwt. for choice ewes, with holders wanting $12.25, later sold at 12 cents and bucks at. The bulk of the ewe lambs were 10 cents a pound. A few extra good ewes brought 12¾ cents. A handyweight sheep sold at 6 to 7 cents a pound.

Hogs were steady over the week-end at $9.5 a cwt. f.o.b., although some buyers said their bids to the country were only $9.20. Packers will try for a 25 cents cwt. on today's loadings.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, October 28 (Canadian Press). — Business in cash grain on the local market yesterday was again very quiet there being little demand from either exporters or local buyers for supplies. The feeling was steady with car lots of Ontario No. 3 extra malting barley quoted at $1.08, No. 3 grade at $1.07, No. 2 white oats at 63 cents, No. 3 white at 59, and No. 4 white at 57 1-2 cents per bushel, ex-track.

There was no further development in local spring wheat flour, prices being steady at the reduction noted on Saturday, but the volume of business showed no improvement in any direction. The winter wheat flour situation was unchanged.

Prices were well maintained for lines of millfeed although the volume of trade was small. A fairly active trade was done in rolled oats and the trend was steady.

A firm feeling prevailed in eggs, but no actual change in prices was noted. The demand for supplies continued steady for domestic consumption.

Owing to the warmer weather prevailing and the continued liberal supplies of potatoes coming forward on account of the large crops harvested in Canada this year, an easier feeling developed in the market, but there was no actual change in prices to note.

The feature of the butter trade was the easier feeling developed and the prices are reduced 1-2 cent per pound. There was a lull in the foreign demand. Owing to foreign buyers not responding to the higher prices asked by cheese exporters, business in this direction was quiet.

Good supplies of new crop bean continue to arrive, and as the quality is good, a fair business is passing in this line. Prices were ranging between $2.45 and $2.55.

QUEBEC BUTTER.

MONTREAL, October 28 (Canadian Press). — At the Quebec Agricultural Co-operative Society auction sale held here yesterday, the offerings of creamery butter were 765 packages, of which 400 packages of No. 1 creamery sold at 35 1-4 cents per pound. For 75 packages creamery 36 cents per pound was bid, with 36 1-2 cents per pound asked, and for 300 packages No. 1 pasteurised creamery 36 1-4 cents per pound was asked.

WINNIPEG LIVE STOCK.

WINNIPEG, October 28 (Canadian Press). — Arrivals, 4,353 cattle, 565 calves, 1,900 hogs, and 465 sheep and lambs.

Trading on the cattle market yesterday morning was somewhat listless, although prospects are that all classes will sell fully steady with the close of last week.

The hog market declined 25 cents with thick smooths at $9.00.

While trading was light on the sheep and lamb market, indications pointed to a continuance of steady prices.

A THOUGHT.

TEACHING, NOT PREACHING

The heart is not unlike a valuable estate. We often build a high fence about it and only admit friends.

The mind is more like an open field without a fence, convenient for all trespassers.

We are careful to post signs all about our "heart" estate: "Keep Out!" But we indifferently allow strangers to do as they darn please on our mental property. They can pitch their tent, camp on our front yard and, when they come to go, leave broken bottles, old dishes and scattered newspapers.

On our mental reserve, or rather preserve, we let strangers tell their dirty stories and peddle their scandal. We tolerate them.

But register this truth: Let a man who is ever so big, tell a conspicuously unclean story and that story will stick in the minds of his hearers for a long time. It will cost the teller either the respect or the patronage of someone.

Now I hear you say: "This is preaching."

Here is my answer: Six years ago while travelling on a train over a thousand miles from home, the writer told a story to a lot of "good fellows" in the smoking compartment of a sleeping car. That story has cost me, on an average, about two thousand dollars a year—two thousand cashable clamshells worth a dollar each.

There was a good prospect on the car and he got an unfavorable impression of the writer, and for the life of me I cannot change the mind of this man who is a stickler for decency.

No! This is not "preaching", this is teaching from personal experience.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, October 28 (Canadian Press). — Unexpected sharp upturns in price at Buenos Ayres and Liverpool, together with active export demand in the United States, gave a decided lift yesterday to the wheat market here.

WANTS HER COLONIES.

Chancellor Marx Says Germany Needs Their Raw Materials.

BERLIN, Oct. 28.— Chancellor Marx, addressing a meeting of the Contrists Monday, voiced the demand that her colonies should be restored to Germany, so that raw materials could be obtained in exchange for her manufactured goods.

The chancellor described Germany's responsibility for the war as a "fairy tale." Germany, he added, only wished to be freed of this charge on moral grounds. He declared that the bulk of the German nation simply desired to work in peace.

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy Relief for Acid Indigestion.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressive, burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excess development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid, and make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments and is perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An antiacid, such as Bisurated Magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form, enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestants. Magnesia comes in several forms, so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia, which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

THE CALL OF THE NORTH WOODS

Never do the great American North Woods call so insistently, never are they so full of beauty as during this magic month of October, when the mornings are sparkling cool and clear, when the wild goose honks over the still lakes, when the trees are a symphony in crimson, green and gold, when the sun goes down like a ball of fire and all night long the quivering northern lights play across the sky.

Then it is that you long to leave the city's dust and din, the ticker, the telephone, the typewriter, the newspaper, stiff collars and razors all behind and answer the call of the northern wilds. You see the trail of the moose on the spongy moss. You hear the call of the wild things of the forest, the song of a bullet through the clean cool air and the crash of your lordly prey as it falls before your aim. But perhaps business is urgent and each day is filled to the brim and you feel you cannot go.

Still the north woods call, and one day you will be able to stand it no longer. You will get out your old rifle, sweaters and togs and go to the nearest Canadian National Railways office and ask for their publication "Hunting in Canada." In this booklet you will find listed the choicest spots and full information regarding accomodation and guides. Also ask for special train service pamphlet.

COMMUNIST EDITOR

imposed upon you. And when war is declared you are supposed to be filled with a longing to 'beat the enemy.' The enemy consists of working men like yourselves, living under the same slave conditions. But the Government not only organises the services for war, it always keeps them fully equipped to be able to crush their own workers when the need arises.

"Have you ever noticed how, in large strikes and lockouts, all the newspapers condemn the strikers and talk about maintaining 'essential services and the food supplies?' Have you forgotten that during the Tonypandy strike of railway men in 1911, the soldiers were used and workers were shot? That gunboats were used by Asquith to defeat the dockers in 1912? That troops were used at Liverpool against the transport workers in 1912? Have you forgotten how the Labour Government threatened to use naval men during the dockers' strike this year? How in the tramway strike the Government threatened to introduce the E. P. A. (the Emergency Powers Act), which would have forced many of you to have shot your own brothers and fathers? Have you forgotten the miners' lockout in 1921, when the Reserves were called out and Hyde Park was turned into a military camp in order that a large section of the Army could be ready to suppress any action that might take place as the result of the Triple Alliance strike?

"Soldiers, sailors, airmen, flesh of our flesh and bone of our bone, the Communist Party calls upon you to begin the task of not only organising passive resistance when war is declared or when an industrial dispute involves you, but to definitely and categorically let it be known that neither in a class war nor in a military war will you turn your guns on your fellow-workers, but instead will line up with your fellow-workers in an attack upon the exploiters and the capitalists, and will use your arms on the side of your own lass.

"Form committees in every barracks, aerodrome, and ship. Let this be the nucleus of an organisation that will prepare the whole of the soldiers, sailors, and airmen, not merely to refuse to go to war or to refuse to shoot strikers during industrial conflicts, but will make it possible for the workers, peasants and soldiers, sailors and airmen to go forward in a common attack upon the capitalists, smash capitalism for ever, and institute the work of the whole working class.

"Refuse to shoot down your fellow workers.

"Refuse to fight for profits.

"Turn your weapons on your oppressors."

Talks of New Wars

The Workers' Weekly is a small, eight-page paper, published in London and almost wholly devoted to Communistic propaganda. The "open letter to the fighting forces" appeared on the first page, beside a cartoon headed "Marching to Massacre." The cartoon represented a soldier with fixed bayonet, awaiting columns of workers who were marching toward him, egged on by the profiteers and political leaders. Below the soldier was represented a pit labelled "extermination and chaos," in which skulls and bones were mingled with the bodies of slain workers.

On the other side of the page was a two-column article headed "international Communist Party Campaign Against War." The article tells of the exploitation of French and German Socialists by capitalistic governments, and with reference to Great Britain says:

"In Great Britain, in the centre of one of the greatest robber empires the world has ever seen, the workers have a special responsibility. The Labor Party, which is their creation is pursuing a policy of naked imperialistic brutality in India, Egypt and Irak. It is pursuing a policy of imperial aggrandisements in Europe. In short, it is, in spite of its pacifistic protestations, a robber, preparing anew for war."

The other pages are devoted to similar articles, with few exceptions. One, headed "To Uphold Capitalism is to Prepare for War," predicts that the next war will come soon. The French general staff, it says, is already elaborating plans for future air raids on London and the British staff is making plans for a return visit to Paris. It also hints at a possible war between the United States and Japan.

An excerpt from the article reads: "The Versailles Peace Treaty and the last imperialist war are pregnant with germs of another war.

"The European and Colonial antagonism between Great Britain and France is growing more and more acute. The military program of both 'allies,' especially the program of the air and chemical welfare forces, is based on the assumption that an Anglo-French war is inevitable.

"While Herriot is indulging in pacifist coming with MacDonald, the Paris general staff is elaborating plans for future air raids on London and the British staff is making plans for a return visit to Paris.

"The most powerful world antagonism is slowly but steadily spreading toward those parts of the world where the interests of the British Empire collide with the interests of the United States of America. The foreign trade of the U.S.A. can only develop at the expense of English trade, and the American mercantile and military fleet at the expense of the British fleet.

"The antagonism between Japan and the U.S.A. is as strong as ever. The prohibition of the immigration of Japanese into the U.S.A. gives a racial character of the antagonism of the imperialists of the Pacific."

The pamphlet inclosed in the regular paper was captioned "War"? What For? In reference to Ramsay MacDonald it says:

"Ramsay MacDonald, pacifist, writing to the Mayor of Leicester on Sept. 14th 1914 said:

" 'Whatever our views may be of the origin of the war, we must go through with it.'

"Such was the attitude of your leaders. They supported the slaughter of 10,000,000 of your fellow-workers and the torture of 18,000,000 more."

GERMANY'S HOTELS ARE NOW CROWED

For the Last Two Years Germany Has Seen Very Little Of Visitors.

By CARL D. GROAT

BERLIN, Oct. 28. — (United Press).—Foreigners are again beginning to find their way to the gates of Berlin.

Those who come now, however, are not the seekers after pleasure or the thirsters after knowledge.

Foreign guests arriving in the German metropolis at this time are hard-headed business men—Yankees and Britishers, Hollanders and Scandinaviens, seeking their share of a business which they expect will bloom as the Dawes plan gets to working.

For at least two reasons, Germany has scarcely seen anything of the great tide of American and British pleasure hunters who crowded to the Continent, chiefly to Paris and the resorts of the Riveria, Switzerland and Italy.

A number of causes are responsible for this. In the first instance, visitors complained that during the inflation period German hotels and store keepers took advantage of their guests within the walls.

In the second place, uncertainty as to internal conditions—augmented by outside propoganda — caused many travellers to refrain from visiting Germany. In the past summer, high prices, plus a hotel tax for foreigners operated to keep many away.

Today, however, the lure of business brings many guests. Consequently, hotels are again having a boom season.

Whereas for the past year, one could get into a hotel without making an advance reservatoin, it is now advisable for the traveller to wire ahead if he desire to park in a bedroom and not in a bath tub.

Virtually half of the daily guests in the bigger Berlin hotels are foreigners, with Americans leading the list. Included in this number are small and big bankers, small and big tradesmen, and some adventurers who hope to get a golden harvest out of the expected boom in German business.

Some of these want to loan German houses money at favorable rates, others want to buy German goods, when the prices are marked down. Still others desire to sell German mills American raw materials and even finished products.

For the guest with money there is a hearty welcome, for German business has been cramped by credit shortage for nearly a year. For the men with raw materials or the man desiring to buy German goods, there is likewise a cordial greeting.

But the man who wants to sell finished products does not always find himself at the right address, for German business today is operating on the slogan, "lots of exports, but little imports."

Berlin theatres are trying to develop pep, and are laying stress this winter on revues. But the theatres demand for good seats around four dollars or more which even to the "rich American" appears a bit thick, considering the quality and accomodations offered by the Berlin houses.

SOVIET LETTER

returning to London "to probe this thing right down to the roots." It would be his first job, he said, to discover how it originated and who was behind it.

The premier concluded his Cardiff address with a reference to the government's foreign policy. He said it had stabilized European currency, cleared out the worst features of reparations economics which the other two parties had bungled ever since 1919, but put Europe on a straight keel and was now carefully watching every move to protect the country's interests.

At other meetings Monday the prime minister repeated the explanation he gave at Cardiff, and, replying to reproaches levelled against him that he had been talking about the Russian treaty while the Zinovieff affair was going on.

Must Include Russia.

"Certainly and we will continue to talk about it. It is all very well for people to indulge in emotional extravagance about Russia, but if you are out for the consolidation of European peace, you cannot afford to leave Russia out of the consolidation.

"If you gather European nations at a round table to construct upon a solid foundation, a system to produce peace, and Russia is out, then you had better pack your baggage and go home, because there can be no consolidation of European peace with Russia as a parish state. You may detest the Russian state, but you cannot adopt better methods than we can. God made Russia for good or ill, and man cannot overlook that creation."

At one of the meetings the prime minister declared that the people blocking the Russian policy of the Labor Government were going to pay heavily in their reputation in a year or two.

"An American firm," he went on, "has secured the whole manganese field in the Caucasus —one of the richest fields in the whole world. Out opportunities go; the raw material goes. America gets it. Goodness knows who are going to get concessions to-morrow.

"Come and let us get to business now, even at the risk of a few millions, and we will get a settlement of things in a normal way. British trade will be expanded and a market will be found."

MISPLACED KINDNESS.

The beautiful weather of the last few weeks induced many mothers to give their youngest an airing. In one instance the baby, which had been immaculately attired in white, with coverlets of white, was left sitting outside for a few minutes while the guardian angel went inside to do a little shopping. In the meantime some one (who, an irate lady would like to discover) gave the child four or five highly colored candies of various tints. These all went into one small mouth. The consequence can be guessed. On the appearance of the lady she was amazed to find the face of the child striped with various tints, while the clothes and coverlets were similarly decorated.

MILTON SILLS TO BECOME DIRECTOR

Neither Money Nor Whim Has Induced This Noted Screen Star.

By HAROLD E. SWISHER.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 28.—(United Press).—Milton Sills, one of the dominant figures of the screen, is to step out of the "frame" at the height of his popularity as an actor and, spurning offers of big roles, more money and greater fame, set forth on a new career.

Sills is to take up the direction of motion pictures.

Neither money nor whim has induced this man, who has endeared himself to movie hosts the world over, to put down the grease-stick for a new undertaking which entails the tedious toil associated with mastery of detail and a matching of virtuosity with the practiced peers of a difficult profession.

A dissatisfaction with what the screen offers is at the bottom of Sills' determination.

"Too many pictures are made by formula," Sills complained in an interview with the United Press. "A 'school of simulation,' as it might be termed, has grown up in our profession. A picture wins favorable comment and big box-office returns, and, presto, one hundred pencils are sharpened to rehash the successful plot, one hundred agents seek to sell to one hundred producers the cleverly disguised idea already screened, and a good percentage of the latter fall for the subterfuge, most of them with open eyes, foreseeing a vogue for the type of story aped."

It is with the hope of rescuing pictures from enslavement by hack writers and pattern directors that Sills has determined on invasion of directorial ranks.

A Student of the Drama.

All his life a student of the drama, winning a degree at his university for his understanding of the subject, Sills entered on his profession as an actor of the stage with a mind detached from ego to an extent that he has been able to study himself microscopically, analyzing effects, building psychology, perfecting method. This sub-conscious scrutiny he has carried into his film work, achieving eminence as a player of rugged characters.

And while he has grown psychologically, piling acting triumphs one upon the other, the play has not expanded. The drama is in a rut, Sills believes. It's limitation scramp his histrionic soul.

"The minds who are fashioning our screen entertainment today are excavating ideas in the ruts formed by the chariot wheels of master-creators. These creators did have their eyes on the road so as not to miss their goal, but they did not bury their thoughts in the roadbed. They looked ahead and aloft, inspired by a skyline of a land of ideas that lay against the horizon.

"Our writers and our producers must disassociate their ideas of film entertainment from the clayey and mundane. The screen will have achieved its ultimate development," Sills believes, "when it creates classics that will be interpreted and reinterpreted by successive generations of screen artists, even as such dramatic super-words as 'Hamlet' and such operatic masterpieces as 'Carmen.'"

With these dreams of the artistic expansion of the film drama, Sills will take up the directorial megaphone. Whether or not he can make them come true, remains to be determined. At least, it will be an interesting experiment.

Estelle Taylor is not going to marry Jack Dempsey—at least not yet, despite reports from the east, where both now are, that the wedding will be an early event, followed by a honeymoon to France.

Aside from the troublesome matter of one perfectly good, if unused, husband, still existing, Miss Taylor has advised friends here that she will return to Hollywood for "at least one more picture before I begin to think concretely about the wedding date." The actress also is certain that her heavyweight champion sweetheart "is anxious to get another fight or two out of his system before unbuckling the title belt."

An important aid to the screen drama expected to produce scenes heretofore often abandoned as too difficult to obtain is seen in the recent organization in Hollywood of two polo teams which will specialize in staging polo games for motion pictures.

The teams have been formed by Carey Harrison, former United States Army captain. They include former American and British army officers, all of whom have had polo as well as pictorial experience.

Production has been started on "The Desert Fiddler," the second picture starring Charles Ray under his new Thomas H. Ince contract. Many of the scenes will be photographed in the Imperial Valley. Charley Murray, Betty Blythe and Barbara Bedford have important roles in the film.

USED

Now and then you read of odd inventions, "scientific toys" for laboratory research. The X-ray used to be that. Now it's applied extensively in discovering internal cancers, abscesses of the teeth, swallowed metal, concealed diamonds secreted by smugglers.

The latest is use of X-ray for locating wires in partitions of a house, and joists for driving nails, behind plaster.

The widest scientific discovery eventually is used in some practical way.

GASSED

Chemists promise that, in the next war, it will be possible to gas an entire nation, put it to sleep for 48 hours while the invading enemy overruns its soil.

The Germans had a similar delusion when they tried their first gas attack on the Canadian lines.

What do the chemists think the enemy nation would be doing in the meantime Its own chemists would trot forth some secret protection... Every spear has its counteracting shield. Defensive disarms offensive. The race for supremacy is futile.

HAVE 22 CHILDREN.

Dad Snider Boasts That Not One of His Children Went Hungry.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 28.—(United Press)—The Oklahoma City school board decided recently that it would not be setting a bad precedent if it granted free tuition to the children of John H. Snider, cotton grower and dairyman living near here.

Snider has twenty-two children. Twelve of them desired to enter school.

There's distinction of Snider's large family. He and his ever-growing family moved toOklahoma City thirteen years ago, flat broke. Not one of his children ever went hungry, "Dad" Snider boasts.

Here's an inkling of how much Snider's family eats: A yearling calf was slaughtered a few days ago. Five days later the last bone went into soup. Six quarts of milk are used at a meal.

Snider is 66 years old and has been married 24 years. His wife was 22 years old when they were married.

COLD SPRINGS' FOWL SUPPER

On the evening of October 21, a fowl supper was held at Cold Springs Union Sunday School, Otonabee, under the auspices of the Young People's Club.

After about 325 had partaken of a sumptuous supper, consisting of fowl, salads, celery, jellies and other dainties, the crow retired to the auditorium where a splendid program was given. This included vocal solos by Miss Doyle, Miss Kennedy, Mrs. E. Kitney, Mr. Stevenson, Mr. Carlisle and Mr. Coleman, which were fully enjoyed by all. Readings were also given by Miss Jessie Tully and Mr. Rae Pamment and Miss Magee, "Song of Love" and "Humoresque" were pleasingly rendered by Miss Nichols on the banjo ukele. Mr. Devey rendered on instrumental and accompanied the other musical selections.

Judging by the hearty applause nothing need be said regarding the selections given by the Cold Springs Orchestra. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

The club appreciate very much the kindness of all those who so willingly assisted with the program. They also wish to thank the Heintzman Company for the loan of the piano for the evening.

Owing to the generous contributions and the assistance of the community the event proved a real success.

The proceeds are to be used as a payment on a piano for the Sunday School.

U. S. TREASURY WANTS PUBLIC TO USE MORE "CARTWHEELS"

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—(United Press).—As a measure of economy, Secretary of the Treasury A. W. Mellon has called upon the banks of the country and the public to restore the silver dollar to circulation.

The decline in circulation of silver dollars from 84,000,000 in 1919 to 54,000,000 on July 1, 1924, was the result of the Pittman Act, by which Congress authorized the treasury to melt silver dollars and sell the bullion to the British Government for use as currency in India.

The Treasury since has been ordered to restore the silver dollar to its former place in circulation, but the public, after a five-year respite, does not readily assume the 'burden' of weighting trousers pockets with the good old "cart wheels." The Treasury has the dollars, but nobody wants them.
